Go, Go, Go For Gemini

HOUSTON (AP)—Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White, still in good shape and remarkably alert, passed the halfway point of their marathon space ride today while medical monitors maintained a close watch on their condition.

The two men, who cracked the U.S. space endurance record Friday night, reached the mid-point of their planned four-day trip at 12:14 p.m. EDT today as their Gemini IV space ship zipped high over the United States on orbit No. 32.

"We're in good shape up here," command pilot McDivitt reported to the ground this morning. He added however that he was a "trifle weary" and during the night he had his best sleep yet.

White, who provided the main excitement of the planned four-day flight by taking a 20-minute excursion in space Thursday, was asleep at the time the report was made.

UNEVENTFUL NIGHT

John Hodge, a Mission Control Centre flight director, reported this morning that the astronauts spent a "very uneventful night. We did what we were supposed to do, following the flight plan, gathering medical data, eating, drinking, sleeping and performing experiments."

Hodge said the astronauts appeared to be as alert as if they had only been in space for five minutes instead of more than 47 hours. He reported spacecraft conditions were excellent and there was nothing in sight that could cause an early termination of the mission.

Hodge said he was impressed with the "enthusiasm and the awareness and awakeness with which they're answering questions on what they're doing and how they're doing it."

During the morning the astronauts took turns taking pictures of prominent earth points which might be used as reference points to guide project Apollo astronauts returning from moon voyages.

Among the photographic targets were Point Jiguera and Point Aguilla, both in Puerto Rico; El Dorado Airport at Bogota, Colombia; Point Loma Lighthouse, San Diego, Calif.; Lake Titicaca and Lake de Poopa in Bolivia, and the junction of the blue Nile and the white Nile in Africa.

During the night White slept through a routine medical examination and had to be awakened in the 27th orbit for the exam.

Mission control said the pilots

EVEN WHALES GET SEASICK

CLEETHORPES, England (Reuters)—Two white whales which became sick on their sea voyage from Canada to a zoo here have had their mystery illness diagnosed.

It was sea-sickness.

At first it was thought the whales would die but zoo authorities here have been told that they are recovering.

WIRE BRIEFS

U.K. Air Strike

LONDON (Reuters) — British European Airways today resumed some flights to the Continent, bringing relief to thousands of Pentecost vacationers delayed by a strike at London airport.

Rumor of Uprising

CAIRO (AP)—Unconfirmed reports reaching here today said Khartoum Airport was closed down and trouble appeared to be brewing in the capital of Sudan.

Word of the airport closing reached here after reports from the Sudan that four army officers, including one general, had been arrested there in an alleged attempt to stage a coup d'etat.

B.C. Man Killed

COULEE CITY, Wash. (AP)—Leo J. Majur of Vancouver, B.C., was killed Friday night in a one-car accident on Highway Two west of here when he apparently missed a curve and went over an embankment. He was alone in the car.

Crown Seeks Delay In Murder Hearing

The preliminary hearing of a capital murder charge against David Robinson will be delayed for some time, Magistrate William Ostler was told this morning.

Robinson, a 24-year-old janitor, of 324 Old Island Highway, is charged in the slaying of Susan Freschi, a 14-year-old school girl whose body was found in woods near her View Royal home May 12.

Robinson, being held in Oakalla Prison, was brought to Victoria this morning to appear in Colwood magistrate's court.

Crown Prosecutor W. R. McIntyre said "I'm afraid there will be substantial delay" before the Crown is ready to present its case.

Cause of the delay is believed to be difficulty in arranging for technical witnesses to attend.

The magisrate remanded Robinson to next Wednesday at the Law Courts. It is understood he will then be remanded from week to week until such time as a date is fixed for the preliminary hearing of the charge.

MANOEUVRING IN SPACE PROVES TRICKY PROBLEM

By JOHN BARBOUR

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim McDivitt missed a critical rendezvous on the first orbit of the Gemini IV space capsule Thursday, but U.S. space officials learned many valuable lessons from the miscalculation.

McDivitt's attempts to catch his elusive target cost too much manoeuvring fuel, and officials halted the operation.

McDivitt—in his first visit to the dimensionless world of space—misjudged the distance between the spacecraft and its spent booster, at least by the guess of flight officials.

Trying to drive into it, he put more energy into the orbit and raised both his orbital high point and low point.

Another problem is that the ground was unable to give the command pilot a good idea of the orbit of the tumbling booster.

The fact that you have to know the orbits of both the pursuit ship and the pursued ship was "brought home even more by this flight," said mission director Chris Kraft.

This, of course, is the big difference between steering in space and steering either an airplane or a car. Land-type steering is simple—you go up or down, off to one side, whatever you please.

But in space, you are not only changing your present position—you are changing your whole orbit.

Ideally for rendezvous, you would match orbits with the spacecraft you are pursuing. But this becomes an intricate procedure.

The human eyes and the senses are just not good enough to close great gaps between the pursuit ship and its target. Soon Gemini astronauts will have radar to give them both the distance of the target and the rate of approach to it.

By the time he was through manoeuvring, McDivitt had steered into an orbit that ranged as high as 183 miles, as low as 103—good enough for 5.4 days of flight before it would naturally return to earth.

Because of a number of commitments, the Gemini IV only carried one bottle of oxidizer and one of fuel. Later Gemini craft—after the next one—will carry twice as much propellant since their major effort will be directed at rendezvous.

Williamson to Hear Sentence on Thursday

VIET NAM

Big U.S. Troop Buildup

SAIGON (CP) — Some 15,000 more U.S. troops with amphibious equipment suitable for use in South Viet Nam's criss-cross of rivers and flooded paddyfields will arrive in Viet Nam shortly, informed sources said today.

Waves of cargo aircraft are bringing the reinforcements to Okinawa and the Philippines from Forts Eustace and Storey in Virginia, they said. A vanguard of the first batch of 3,000 was believed to have arrived already.

The big new U.S. commitment will swell the number of American troops here to more than 60,000.

News of it came with reports of further battles against Viet Cong guerrillas.

South Vietnamese forces, badly battered by Viet Cong ambushes in recent days, struck back with the aid of U.S. helicopters and claimed today to have killed 49 guerrillas in a single action Friday.

A U.S. military spokesman reported that quick action by U.S. army helicopter crews accounted for 20 of the Viet Cong dead.

Six Communists were captured and eight others taken as suspects in the operation near Vinh Long, 55 miles southwest of Saigon.

RCAF Officers Disciplined For 'Talking'

(Special to The Times)

COMOX—Eight fighter pilots from the RCAF base here have been put on orderly duty for six weeks for speaking to peace marchers.

The disciplinary action was talk of the base today as peace marchers began their 24-hour protest sit-down.

RCAF officials censured the officers after reports that the eight men had been seen at the headquarters camp of the demonstrators.

At the time, the men had just come off duty and were still in flying suits, reliable sources reported.

RCAF officials refused to confirm the action.

It was reported that civilian personnel at the base were calling the action a "threat to free speech."

CONFIRMED

Peace march organizer Peter Light confirmed that he had spoken to several men from the base Wednesday night.

He said they had come down to the camp in Courtenay "just for a chat."

The men were dressed in uniform, he said, and he thought they were pilot officers.

Light, 22, of Vancouver, said he had heard that the men had been reprimanded and "been placed on some sort of charge."

"This is a direct threat to free speech," said Light. "These men had every right to come and see whoever they liked.

"I'm sure they in no way broke any military rules because they let us do most of the talking."

The sentence meted out to the men is "more-or-less a rap on the knuckles" said one member of the base.

"The men will have a few extra duties to perform."

Comox commanding officer, Group Captain E. G. Ireland had earlier warned his men to have nothing to do with the peace marchers.

Collapses After Guilty Verdict

By PETE LOUDON
Times Staff Writer

VANCOUVER—Al Williamson collapsed in Assize Court Friday after being found guilty by a 12-man jury in the "Dear Hal" case.

He will be sentenced Thursday.

Williamson was rushed to St. Paul's Hospital by ambulance, but was released Friday night.

He was treated with an inhalator in the courtroom. In hospital a cardiogram was taken.

He was then driven home and is resting in bed on doctor's orders.

Williamson, 60, was in the box when the jury filed back into the courtroom at 6:55 p.m. after deliberations lasting 3 hours and 17 minutes at the end of a five-day trial.

The jury foreman pronounced him guilty of forgery and guilty of uttering a forgery. Williamson appeared to listen intently while a recommendation for leniency was proposed to Mr. Justice Craig Munroe.

His expression was bland as the unanimous finding of the jury was announced. He swallowed and sat down.

He heard the judge tell the court in an unexpected statement that Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson who figured centrally in the trial suffered no discredit in the evidence and had exhibited no evidence of impropriety. (See also Page 3.)

The judge and jury left the court room and Williamson, who had been in custody in the Courthouse lockup while the jury was out, gave his chief counsel, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria, a $5 bill.

Began to Tremble, Turned Pale

Williamson said it was to pay the cost of parking his car.

Then Williamson began to tremble and he appeared to pale. Several lawyers told him to sit down.

His wife approached from the public seats behind the dock and she put her arms around him and kissed his forehead.

A policeman handed Williamson a cup of water but he dropped it after taking one sip—and then he slumped sideways.

His wife, he had referred to her as "Babs" in the trial, called for a doctor. She got into the prisoner's box with him and as she took him in her arms he whispered, "I love you, I love you."

Loosening his tie, Mrs. Williamson said, "It's alright, darling; it doesn't matter."

Before the hastily-summoned ambulance took him away, Sheriff Eddie Wells said to his police escort that Mr. Justice Munroe had just ordered that Williamson should be released from custody until his court appearance for sentencing.

Mr. McKenzie said Williamson's collapse came before there had been any discussion of an appeal.

Much Publicized Trial

Williamson's collapse came as the final dramatic incident in a trial packed with interest—a trial which had been one of the most publicized in B.C. history.

It came while many veteran newsmen, who had known "unflappable Al", were making guesses that there would be an acquittal.

It climaxed a day in which all the testimony of the trial had been hashed and rehashed by summation of the defence and then again by Mr. Justice Munroe in an hour-long charge to the jury.

The highlights of his remarks provided sufficient cause for discussion for one day:

One remark concerned the "unexplained failure" of the Crown to call Premier Bennett as a witness.

The judge said, "The unexplained failure of the Crown to bring before you Premier Bennett, is a fact from which you may draw inferences that the Crown fears to do so, and is fearful the premier may have disclosed facts unfavorable to the Crown's case.

"You may decide such an inference is not a fair or proper one for you to draw. The matter is entirely for you."

Premier Bennett, although absent from the province, occupied a place of importance in the trial.

The charges against Williamson alleged that on May 14, 1964, or thereabouts, Williamson sent a letter to Ottawa purporting to have been written by the premier.

The letter, sent to Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson, apparently supported the application of Harry Stonehill, a wealthy American, for

QUESNEL, B.C. (CP) — A tank truck loaded with 7,000 gallons of gasoline plunged off the Cariboo Highway early today and erupted into an inferno.

STAGE BASE SIT-DOWN

Comox Peace Marchers Halted by Barbed Wire

Special to the Times

COMOX — Barbed wire gates and special police patrols halted peace marchers as they linked arms and descended on the RCAF base here this morning.

Some 75 demonstrators tried to enter the fighter base but were turned back at the main gate.

In orderly rows they sat in front of the gate singing "We Shall Overcome" and other peace songs.

Four RCMP officers, brought in specially for the occasion, stood by in case of trouble.

Inside the gates, military police prepared for any further attempts to gain entry.

The gate entrance usually consists of a pole which drops across the road.

But officials ordered the special barbed wire gate erected for the occasion.

Vehicles and personnel were using other entrances this morning.

As reinforcements swelled the ranks of the peace marchers, spokesman Peter Light said he was contemplating blocking the other entrances also.

Light said he expected the group to be joined by several

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

Today's modern clothing styles and way-out haircuts often make it difficult to tell men from women.

But there are other sides to the problem not quite so apparent.

A good example was to be found at the recent Cowichan district elementary school sports on the grounds of Cowichan High School.

Not unexpectedly, some of the contestants took to wandering through the school where lessons were still in progress.

Much to the annoyance of one teacher who was trying to drum a little education into his pupils, the following incident took place:

A couple, dressed in tight blue jeans, long hair flopping over their eyes and dark glasses on, stopped outside his classroom door.

They proceeded to chat and point at various things in the classroom.

After a few minutes of this the teacher finally saw red.

He marched over to the door and in no uncertain terms said: "Take your dark glasses and your tight little bottoms and get out of here."

His red temper turned to a red face when he learned later that both were visiting teachers.

The delay would take half a page to explain, he said. But it resulted from other commitments.

Husbands who become impatient while their wives search for bargains in stores might take a tip when shopping for car insurance, back in the news again this week.

One of our reporters did some shopping around in this respect and came up with a bargain almost half the price of another.

Here's how it happened.

When his insurance neared expiry, the company sent a renewal form quoting a premium of $106 which sounded fairly reasonable.

Off went a cheque but within a day or two the company sent a letter saying there was a mistake, that the rate should be $164, not $106.

Fast action blocked the cheque at the bank, the insurance was cancelled and the shopping began.

The reporter found a reputable international company willing to provide the same insurance as before for $92—a saving of $72.

Bishop Remi de Roo, who will address congregations in Metropolitan United Church on Sunday and First United the Sunday after, is a gentle, humorous person.

I once introduced him to some non-church-going friends, who were somewhat awed by the title "bishop."

"Don't worry about it," he grinned. "I'm really just a farm boy from Monitoba."

(His parents, from Belgium, broke hard ground in Manitoba and established themselves as successful farmers.)

But the bishop's modesty is offset by considerable firmness. When introducing changes in Roman Catholic worship in St. Andrew's Cathedral last February, he told his followers they had been approved by the Holy Father in Rome and should therefore be followed.

"Get with it!" he said tersely.

landed immigrant status in Canada. Stonehill recently had been expelled from the Philippines and from Mexico.

Mr. Justice Munroe told the jury an essential ingredient of the crown's case was to negative any claim by the accused that he had authority to send the letter over the premier's signature.

"Yet the person best able to negative that authority was not called—Premier Bennett."

He said Premier Bennett's office as premier would not excuse him from appearing. He said the crown elected not to call the premier, although the crown had every right to do so.

Disregard Certain Testimony

The judge said neither he nor the jury could tell the crown who to call as witnesses — this matter is up to the crown. Then the judge made his remarks about "this unexplained failure."

Mr. Justice Munroe instructed the jury at another point in his address, that it must disregard certain testimony which had been delivered Thursday by Einar Gunderson.

Mr. Gunderson, a senior official in several B.C. government enterprises and a close friend of Premier Bennett had given testimony which had conflicted with earlier evidence given by Williamson.

Mr. Gunderson had been called by the crown in rebuttal of testimony in chief. The judge explained that in any trial the prosecution presents its case, then the defence presents its case, then the prosecution has opportunity to rebut any fresh evidence in the defence testimony.

He was told, he said, that Mr. Gunderson was being called to rebut an earlier statement that Mr. Gunderson had told Williamson there was no case against him and not to worry, he had only exceeded his authority.

Mr. Gunderson, on the stand, made no reference to this conversation. But he went further.

Gunderson went on to quote Williamson to the effect that the accused wanted Premier Bennett to say he had written the Dear Hal letter—and had forgotten he had done so.

Not Proper Rebuttal Evidence

Said the judge, "This was not proper rebuttal evidence. It would not have been given, if I had known it was coming.

"It must be totally disregarded by you. It was not open to the Crown to introduce it."

Mr. Justice Munroe told the jury the four lawyers of the prosecution and defence were among the most competent in B.C. "and nothing I have said reflects on them."

He said, "The rules were breached, no doubt unwittingly, by Mr. Gunderson."

The judge earlier had explained to the jury that forgery takes place when a person makes a false document, knowing it to be false with intent that some person should be induced by it to do, or to refrain from some action.

He said a document could be false if it was added to or altered by any person who did not originally make the document.

To justify conviction, he said, the crown must prove beyond doubt that the accused wrote the letter over the premier's name, knowing it to be false, with intent to induce Dornan to act on it as if it were genuine.

"If the accused honestly believed he had authority, then he is not guilty of forgery, and must be acquitted," the jury was told.

All Agree . . . Accused Sent Letter

"It appears to be common ground that the accused made the letter . . . sent it out with a covering letter . . . and the premier had not expressly authorized him to write it," said Mr. Justice Munroe.

The real issues he said, are very narrow. He read them slowly so the jury could write them down:

"Are you satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt, he had no authority, expressed or implied, to compose the letter . . . and to send it to Mr. Dornan?

"If you are not so satisfied, the accused must be acquitted, and that is the end of the matter.

"If you are so satisfied, then ask yourself question number two.

"Even if the accused had no such authority, do you have a reasonable doubt in your mind as to whether or not he honestly believed that he had the premier's authority to do so?

"If so, he must be acquitted. If not, you may convict," the judge said.

He reviewed the evidence of both the crown and the defence. In summing up the defence argument, he said that Williamson was an "image-maker."

"In a half-deceitful, complex world, inhabited sometimes by businessmen and politicians, with products to sell by whatever means, his job was to get results."

Verdict Must Be Unanimous

He told the jury they could bring in only guilty or not-guilty verdicts, on each count. The verdict must be unanimous, he said.

Immediately the jury left, crown counsel George Murray QC, asked Mr. Justice Munroe to withdraw his direction to the jury on the Gunderson testimony. His plea was rejected.

Mr. Murray also asked the judge to withdraw the suggestion that the crown's decision not to call the premier might be construed as meaning the premier's testimony might detract from the crown's case.

Again Mr. Justice Munroe declined.

But he did agree to Mr. Murray's suggestion that the jury had been insufficiently instructed on one prosecution point, in the judge's remarks.

The judge then recalled the jury and recounted the testimony where the accused told Dornan that the premier probably wouldn't write the letter in question.

The jury went out again at 3:38 p.m.

Locked-Up to Await Decision

The accused was taken into custody and lodged in the courthouse lock-up to await the jury's return.

In its summation to the jury, The Crown attorney said Williamson had admitted never having written a personal letter for the premier before the Dear Hal letter.

After a story broke about a suggestion that Stonehill buy his way into Canada with an investment in the Liberal Party, Williamson had gone to the RCMP "in a panic" fearing disclosure of the letter. A man who believed he had authority to send the letter would not have gone to the police to make a statement, the Crown contended.

Crown attorney T. G. Bowen-Colthurst said Williamson's evidence was full of inconsistencies and his case full of improbabilities. On the witness stand under cross examination Williamson had been "badly shaken" even "rocked," he said.

had reported no more sightings of the unidentified object McDivitt reported during the 19th orbit. Officials listed at least 11 earth satellites, most of them fragments or space debris, in the general area of McDivitt's sighting.

At 12:15 EDT Gemini IV entered its 32 orbit.

SEE SECOND SATELLITE

The astronauts reported seeing another satellite Friday and trackers today were trying to determine which one it might have been.

McDivitt said that during the 19th orbit he sighted an orbiting object "with big arms sticking out." He took movies, but the glaring sun prevented him identifying it or estimaing its distance from Gemini IV.

There was some speculation it was the Pegasus II meteorid detection satellite launched May 25 from Cape Kennedy.

As Gemini IV circled around the globe, the space twins continued to perform routine test pilot tasks intended to fully qualify men and machinery for longer trips.

Business even came before congratulations Friday night when McDivitt and White broke astronaut Gordon Cooper's U.S. orbital record of 34 hours 20 minutes, established in May, 1963.

At 9:36 p.m. EDT, the moment the new mark was set, Stuart Davis, capsule communicator at the Hawaiian tracking station, contacted the Gemini IV by radio, relayed instructions for a medical check and read them map coordinates. Then he added, rather matter-of-factly:

"I'd also like to congratulate you on a new American space flight record."

"Roger," replied McDivitt, "we've got quite a few more orbits to go. Thank you very much."

Their planned 97-hour, 50-minute voyage is to end at 1:06 p.m. (10:06 a.m. PDT) Monday with a parachute splash-down in the Atlantic Ocean 400 miles southwest of Bermuda.

$255 Per Meal For Astronauts

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—While astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White aren't eating gourmet food in space, the bill for what they are consuming in their four-day flight is sky high. Each meal costs about $255.

Dry cereal, bacon and egg bites, toasted bread cubes and orange juice made up the first meal.

Their space menu includes: Lunch—beef and gravy, corn, toast, date fruitcake and tea. Supper — pea soup, salmon salaid, toast, fruit cocktail and orange juice. Late snack—orange - grapefruit juice, chicken sandwich, chocolate pudding and peanut cubes.

The high price for such low-cost chow results from the fact that the foods are specially made for space. The sandwiches and cubes can be eaten in one bite, with no crumbs.

All the food is freeze dried, compressed and dehydrated. With the exception of the bite-size candies, the other dishes must be reconstituted with water.

MEALS FLOAT AROUND

Aboard the spacecraft at lunch were 18 packages — 14 two-man meals and four one-man meals. They are marked by day and by meal. Each package is connected to a nylon line which prevents them from getting out of order when floating inside the compartment.

All the foods are low in residue, in undigestible fibre, and in gas - producing elements. Each man was to eat 15 times on the four-day trip.

McDivitt and White picked out the foods they wanted after trying out all the items on the menu.

"The food is pretty good," said McDivitt. "There are some things that just don't appeal to me. I wouldn't like them whether they were dehydrated or not."

One thing is certain: No corned beef sandwiches are aboard, either real or bite-sized. Astronaut John Young sneaked an earth-type corned beef sandwich aboard the last Gemini flight, causing potential crumb problems, and space agency officials made certain it would not happen again.

FOUND GUILTY on two counts of forgery Friday, public relations man Al Williamson collapsed when verdict was announced and was carried out on stretcher as wife looked on. He was treated by heart specialist and released from hospital Friday night. (CP Wirephoto.)

'DORNAN MAN OF INTEGRITY'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe delivered a special statement after the Williamson forgery trial Friday, stating his personal faith in the integrity of Hal Dornan, aide to Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Justice Munroe said:

"There is one comment I want to make. There have been frequent references during this trial to Mr. Hal Dornan, personal assistant to the prime minister of Canada, and his connection with Mr. Williamson in Harry Stonehill's application for landed status.

* * *

"Mr. Dornan testified as a witness during this trial and told the court of the matter under consideration. I cannot speak for the jury but I can say that in my view no evidence was introduced that in any way reflected discredit on Mr. Dornan and there was no evidence to indicate that he did anything wrong or in any way acted in an improper manner.

"In the press, the prime minister has expressed confidence in the integrity of Mr. Dornan and I can only say that such confidence is fully justified.

* * *

"I make this comment only because when prominent people are mentioned it is possible that some members of the public can be confused as to who is on trial. Mr. Dornan is not on trial and moreover could not receive a jury's verdict. It is for that reason and because he is an employee in a public position that he is entitled to a comment from me.

"I intended to make this comment regardless of the verdict of the jury.

"Mr. Registrar, obtain a copy of these remarks and forward them to the prime minister of Canada."

Lemay Plans Fight Against Deportation

MIAMI (AP) — Georges Lemay has been ordered deported to Canada to face charges of looting a Montreal branch bank four years ago, but Canadian police may not get him for some time.

Lemay's lawyer plans to appeal to immigration service chiefs in Washington. If that fails, he hopes to go into the federal courts, which could mean additional months, or longer.

Milton Milich, special inquiry officer for the immigration service, issued the deportation order Friday. He also denied Lemay's plea that he be deported to Haiti instead of Canada.

He ruled Lemay entered the U.S. as an immigrant without a visa and that he could not stay in the U.S. because he had been convicted of a crime in 1943 in Canada.

Lemay is wanted in Montreal in connection with a 1961 robbery in which safety deposit boxes in a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia were emptied of between $500,000 and $4,000,000. Lemay is charged with breaking and entering and theft.

It will be at least two weeks before the immigration service decides whether to deport Lise Lemieux, 28, who became Lemay's wife in a swift ceremony prior to a hearing on Wednesday.

Lemay, 39, was arrested May 6 after a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., boat repairman recognized Lemay's picture flashed around the world on the first Early Bird satellite television program.

Police Hoping Arrest Will Lead to Rivard

MONTREAL (CP) — The small-time member of a pair of prisoners who made a sensational jailbreak three months ago was caught Friday but the big fish, Lucien Rivard, is still swimming free in an underworld sea.

Montreal police expressed hope that Andre Durocher, 28, captured without a shot being fired, would provide information about the suspected narcotics racketeer whose escape touched off a political storm.

"This is the best thing we have to go on as a lead to Rivard," a police spokesman said.

Late Friday night, police said Durocher would say nothing about Rivard and was mum about his own activities since the March 2 escape from the provincial Bordeaux Jail in Montreal except to say he had been out of town for much of the time.

Four Montreal morality squad members, acting on a tip, staked out an apartment in north-end Montreal for an hour then broke down the door, catching Durocher unawares.

"He was well armed," a member of the squad said. "We found three revolvers in the apartment, one hidden in the sofa, one in the kitchen and another under the bed."

The New Necessity

WHAT IS NOW LARGELY A matter for concern only among conservationists in Canada—most elected governmental representatives appear to be years behind the times—is already emerging as a priority political matter in the United States.

Given impetus by both the late President Kennedy and by President Johnson, the preservation of the living environment of the American people is rapidly becoming an issue which no politician will be able to disregard. Not only private individuals and organizations but public agencies are now becoming alive to the fact that populations cannot burgeon throughout the country without deteriorating both the urban and rural surroundings.

Unless definite and careful plans are laid, and remedies carried out, the environment soon suffers—and the inhabitants with it. Rivers and lakes become polluted, forested areas are needlessly wiped out, natural animal life is destroyed, air becomes unfit to breathe, traffic becomes snarled, water supplies run dangerously low, recreation areas are whittled or ruined, the blight that creates slums in cities can be spread to open country. These are not just scare phrases warning of what may happen. These tragic developments have taken place and are still taking place all over this continent.

We see the trend here, in such a relatively unspoiled place as Victoria. We have the incredible spectacle of public authorities quibbling about the degree of pollution which a public waterway can stand without becoming an actual health menace—as though a nicely calculated amount of filth was permissible. We have proposals to thrust roads through city parkland for the mere convenience of rush-hour traffic.

We have industrial encroachments into irreplaceable provincial parks, not against the desperate resistance of the public authorities whose duty it is to protect such areas, but with their encouragement and assistance. We have government authorities seriously considering private subdivision proposals which are condemned by every planning authority and demonstrably against the public interest. We have a city administration trying for years with only partial success to exert its powers to control air pollution—and this in a scientific age which can solve almost any technical problem man can pose.

We have these phenomena, and many more. But in many parts of the United States the neglect, attrition and dangers are even more acute. To counteract them, governmental and other agencies are now making an effort to analyze the problem and provide antidotes.

As the influential New York Times puts it: "If this country is to have an environment fit for a rapidly growing population to work, play and live in, then there has to be recognition that there are higher values than private profit and bureaucratic convenience."

The Times continues: ". . . Land (around a city) should be developed as part of a regional plan which takes into account the needs for green space, for recreation and for transportation. The same is true of a nation's water; no one's profit or convenience justifies spewing filth into a river. Again, the national and city parks are so desperately needed and so heavily used that they deserve top priority protection from those who would cut across them to build a highway, flood them to build a dam, or ravage them to build an underground garage."

This is the new thinking of governments and community-conscious persons in the United States. It was given expression by the recent national gathering in the White House at Washington in a phrase, "the new conservation", which may be defined as a proper approach to man's environment.

Canada, and Greater Victoria, are on the fringes of this new and vital movement. We had better become totally involved while there is still time.

Across the Board?

THE RESPECTED ECONOMIST, of London, certainly no foe of the British Labor Party, paints a dismal picture of the accomplishments of the Wilson government and the economy of the country.

The behaviour of the government, The Economist says, "has done nothing except confirm the impression that the ship is really going down. . . . The government is faced with price inflation and a falling production index and sterling on the slide again. It is a jolting threesome."

Part of the reason for Prime Minister Wilson's failure to make progress in refurbishing the economy in the seven months he has been in office is undoubtedly the fact that his government has the smallest majority of modern times. Indeed, the other day the government was saved on a crucial division by the deciding vote of the Speaker, who traditionally votes for the government in a tie.

Nevertheless, The Economist sees this as only a surface reason for failure. The besetting sin of Mr. Wilson and his colleagues is that once in power they have tried to be even more conservative than the Conservative Party in foreign affairs and in monetary policy, a criticism that recalls the difficulties in which the Atlee government found itself. At the same time, Mr. Wilson and his ministers have attempted to counter criticism from their own party over foreign and monetary policy by nationalizing steel and raising pensions, neither of which the country could really afford to do.

In addition, the government's "incomes policy" which was to stabilize wages and profits has not materialized, housing is in a crisis, the race relations bill out-Tories the Tories and promised land reform measures have not been forthcoming.

"Whatever Mr. Wilson's ideas on an election, whether he plans for the autumn or prays for spring," The Economist comments sourly, "the danger confronting him is not that Labor will go out because it failed to handle a financial crisis that it inherited seven months ago, but that it will go out showing incompetence right across the board."

How to Eliminate Ogres

MR. JOHN FISHER'S ADVOCACY of greater opportunity for Canadians to travel across the country and so achieve a greater appreciation of their nation does not suggest that many Canadians are not travelling for that purpose now. He merely wants more to follow the practice and he seeks ways to make travel more convenient for them.

This is a valuable objective at the present stage of Canada's growth. One of the heartening developments of recent years has been the increased interchange of students between west and east and the exchange of courtesies between minor governments typified by the recent visits of Quebec and British Columbia mayors and municipal figures.

The best way to dispel the illusion of ogres on the other side of the mountains—or in Ottawa and Quebec—is to meet in the flesh the people concerned. They are not always the individuals who make the news. More often they are friendly folk, sharing hopes and aspirations as Canadians, the kind of people whose common sentiments inspire nation unity and help to build pride in Canada.

If Mr. Fisher can facilitate these meetings through easier travel, more power to him.

FROM HONG KONG By JOSEPH ALSOP

Consequence of the Letdown

ANY attempt to sum up the present dangerous situation in Viet Nam must begin with the fact that the initiative has been completely abandoned to the enemy during the entire period since the middle of March. The President's decision to bomb North Vietnamese targets initially produced very big dividends. The North Vietnamese government was visibly consternated and thrown off balance. The Viet Cong were not merely thrown off balance; according to all indications on the spot, their morale plummeted downward to the low point reported by the French newspaperman Georges Chaffard.

Alsop

Morale Raised

In the South Vietnamese government and army, and among the civil population, morale improved proportionately. Relative government stability was consequently achieved. The final defeat that had been uncomfortably close (for South Viet Nam was literally cut in half in late January) was decisively prevented.

Initiative Problem

That left the problem of retaining the initiative that had thus been regained. In South Viet Nam, not a great deal could be done immediately. To be sure, certain important actions were taken, like the courageous ground offensive, supported by tremendous airpower, that drove the enemy from his positions along Route 19, from Pleiku to the seacoast. But the South Vietnamese army lacked the reserves to launch offensives against the enemy "main force" units in their mountain and jungle redoubts; and the Americans, who were coming in to reconstitute the reserves, were not yet ready for action.

That left the bombing of the North, which should be conceived as a boxer's left hand, reinforcing the work of his right hand. What was needed, of course, was nothing like the area bombing of Hanoi which people who have never set foot in Asia seem to regard as the only alternative to the nibbling attacks we have been making.

But there is all the difference in the world between quietly but sternly increased pressure and trying to pressure a man by biting him persistently in the toe. Or another way to put it is to say that there is a wide gap between a carefully modulated crescendo and getting permanently stuck on the least important note in the piano keyboard.

Single-note playing is really all that has been happening. The pianists in Washington, measuring distances to Hanoi in quarter inches, reportedly believe they have been playing a crescendo; but they are mistaken.

The targets are trivial. The areas under attack are those of least importance to the Hanoi government. What is now the main supply and invasion route has not even been hit once on North Vietnamese soil, for it runs from North Viet Nam into Samneua Province in Laos at a point rather far in the North.

Hard to See Logic

What may be the logic of this one-note piano playing is pretty hard to perceive. Countless missions are run and planes and pilots are lost on road reconnaissance—on "roadwork" as the Navy pilots scornfully say. But no truck can move on those roads without fuel oil; and the limited petroleum stores are probably the most vulnerable single feature of the North Vietnamese economy. Would not taking out the petroleum stores be cheaper in the end?

There are other such questions? What is beyond question, meanwhile, is the unfortunate political-military effect of this American abandonment of the briefly regained initiative. The apparent proof of iron American resolution, of final American commitment, was responsible for two-thirds of the good effects of President Johnson's February decision in South Viet Nam.

But the South Vietnamese, who know their country, are not to be deceived about the comparative unimportance of the targets being hit and the relative insignificance of the areas being covered. In the South, therefore, what started as proof of American resolution has begun to be regarded as still another proof of American irresolution. A recurrence of political troubles has automatically resulted.

Reverse Reaction

One can assume with confidence that the impression conveyed in the North has been the same as in the South, but with reverse effects. A man who expects severe and mounting pressure, and then experiences nothing much worse than persistent annoyance, is not likely to be thrown off his stride for very long, it must be remembered.

Hence, the situation is doubly dangerous. It is dangerous, first, because a mere local catastrophe can conceivably have generalized effects this summer because of the slumping mood of the South. And it is dangerous, second, because we are all too likely to end in another Korean-style war, under much less favorable conditions, unless the principle of the boxer's right and left begins to be remembered. That is the most important point of all.

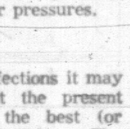
Cutting Up Global Air

ON May 4, 1493, His Holiness Pope Alexander VI, drawing a north-south line 100 leagues to the west of the Cape Verde Islands on a global map, divided the new world between Spain and Portugal. On June 1, 1965, Mr. Pickersgill, improving on the instruction, divided almost the entire globe between his two "chosen instruments", Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines. Some doubts were expressed in the House of Commons that Mr. Pickersgill's division is entirely equitable. But there is consolation in history. The Portuguese reacted much more strongly to the Pope's edict, with the result that the conference of Tordesillas, some 11 years later, moved the line west by another 270 leagues. Mr. Pickersgill may yet have to endure similar pressures.



—Western

'Not Conflicting'

Whatever minor imperfections it may have, it is obvious that the present settlement conforms to the best (or worst) Pickersgillian principles. The services are not to be "competitive or conflicting"—perish the thought—but are to "represent a single integrated plan." There is to be "a clear division of . . . fields of operation so that outside Canada neither airline (will) serve any point served by the other."

Each line retains its present territories. In addition, Mr. Pickersgill, in truly imperial fashion, has put a stop to unseemly squabbling by handing out islands here, whole continents there, while at the same time ensuring the continued good behavior of his instruments by holding back on U.S. connections until the conclusion of bilateral Canadian-American negotiations.

Details of the cartel, including the arrangements by which each instrument is to represent the city, may be found in Mr. Pickersgill's statement. The government will, of course, represent either in negotiations with various countries within the respective spheres of influence.

Global to Microscopic

It is an indication of the minister's amazing versatility that he can switch in the twinkling of an eye, from the global to the microscopic. As supreme pontiff of the airlines, he is also responsible for domestic services. Here competition is to be permitted, subject to his old edict that it must not place Air Canada in the red. It is to be gentle, limited, rationed competition.

To make sure that it causes no one any discomfort, Mr. Pickersgill is to have it supervised by an "outstanding international aviation consultant," who will advise him whether a little bit extra should be permitted here, another modicum of competition somewhere else and what procedures should be followed to ensure that there is no possibility of this ugly business getting out of hand.

Mr. Pickersgill committed himself last year to a definition of the role of regional carriers. His thought now is that the two major airlines should take some responsibility in developing this policy. With the aid of these, presumably disinterested parties, he should have no difficulty in working out cosy arrangements

Saved from Excesses

All this tidiness may not appeal much to consumers. Mr. Pickersgill does say that "a degree of competition will remain" but he hastens to add that he is going to save us from the "excesses of competition" which ruined the railways early in this century. The comparison may sound a trifle far-fetched but a minister may surely be forgiven a tired argument after the formidable labor of dividing the world.

In the process, he has managed rather oddly to blur some divisions. Air Canada naturally reports to Parliament and its officials are occasionally examined by parliamentary committees. Canadian Pacific Airlines, as a private enterprise, has not been subject to this discipline. But a socialist member was quick to draw the conclusion that, as a "chosen instrument", it will be expected to answer as Crown corporations are.

This was no problem in the simpler days of Pope Alexander. But compared to Mr. Pickersgill, he was a piker. He may have divided America between Latin sovereigns but he never heard of Australia.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

A DRIVE out to Swartz Bay and then along the Land's End Road can prove very interesting.

Along by the mud flats you may glimpse one of the great blue herons stalking its prey.

As you go along the Land's End Road you will see a great change in the rock formations. Here the rocks seem to be tilted up on end. They are formed of shale, which is the most common of the sedimentary rocks. Fossils can be found in this locality.

Growing beside the road you can see the Yellow Rattle with its flowers in loose spikes and its toothed leaves. When the seeds are ripe they rattle inside the case.

Here the firs and the maples form a canopy overhead. As the road winds around the hillside you can get a view of the sea and the adjoining islands. Stop at the end of the West Road, look across the channel and see Mt. Tuam on Salt Spring Island with its sharply rising face. Part of the slope is bare and open to the sun, other spots are clothed in the dark green of the conifers.

As you turn down the West Road you will see many of the English Hawthornes in full bloom. This is the place where they were introduced many years ago by the early settlers.

There are many Columbines growing beside the road. See how the petals arch backwards. The honey in this flower is reached by the long-tongued humming bird and by butterflies.

By the Indian Reserve at Pat Bay you can find the Wild Gourd with its long vines and curling tendrils. It has both the blossom and the fruit on the same stem.

See if you can find the Douglas fir and the Arbutus that have grown together and become firmly combined.

TRETCHIKOFF REVISITED

A Liberace With Paint

By TONY EMERY

IT IS ten years and more since Tretchikoff arrived in Victoria and spread out his stall in one of our department stores. He was on his first North American tour at that time, the one which, he is quoted as saying, was the foundation of his great financial success. That he scored a popular success of enormous proportions is clear from the number of reproductions of his work that were sold—I have seen them as far afield as Chilliwack—and from the number of people who flocked into the department store to see his wares. (Not the least of Mr. Tretchikoff's talents is the ability to arrive at an impressive aggregate figure for attendance without, so far as I can see, any very close or accurate count being maintained at the door. Perhaps somebody counts the legs and arms of visitors and divides by one . . .)

Emery

He has other talents. A friend of mine who played some part in the promotion of Tretchikoff's first B.C. campaign has often told me since that he learned more about sales promotion from Mr. T. in ten minutes than he had learned in a lifetime in the business.

But we must assume that Mr. Tretchikoff does not wish to go down in history as nothing more than a psychic computer, or a whizz of a selesman. Since what he is offering for sale is his work as a painter—or reproductions thereof—it is at least likely that in some sensitive corner of his psyche there lurks a longing for somebody to praise him as a painter. Somebody who knows a painting from a parsnip, I mean, or who could tell art from a fluorescent aspidistra.

It would clearly do even Mr. Tretchikoff's apparently satisfactory sales no harm if he could quote some puffs from prestigious figures in the world of art. Something like: "'T. is the greatest painter since Golly knows when.'—Signed, K. Clark." Or "'T. would have put Caravaggio out of business in jig-time.'—B. Berenson." But I see in the newspaper report that "the critics sneer" at the work of this visitor from South Africa. (Have you noticed how critics always "sneer"? Probably by the operation of the same law that decrees that all sloops are "sleek".) Not that he cares, as he laughs his way to the bank.

Not One to Sneer

Since I am not one to sneer, as you know, and since it is more than ten years since I saw the last Tretchikoff production, I felt it was my duty to go and swell the magic numbers. (Perhaps they do it with a photo-electric cell, and that's why you can't see anybody counting . . .) So I trotted up to the second floor, and subjected the works to my well-known impassive and objective scrutiny.

I saw the stocky figure of the poor voortrekker's Velasquez, in animated conversation on one side of the room where the reproductions were selling like hot Vermeers. I must say that the years have treated him well: he looks as young and vigorous today as he did a decade ago. His work hasn't changed, either. It's every bit as bad as it was then.

After giving the show a careful twice-over, I searched my memory for another artist—any other, in any medium—who has managed to show no improvement at all in over a decade, and I'll be hanged (with a green face, next to one of Mr. T's chlorotic beauties) if I can think of one.

I am not sneering, mind you. I am just saying that I think Mr. Tretchikoff is lucky to be living at a time when Lawrence Welk and Liberace are able to count their popular following in the millions. I think he is lucky, too, in that his level of taste is the same as that of the general uninstructed public: his idea of art is theirs. "Ouida" had that luck, and Ruby M. Ayres and Ethel M. Dell. There is no doubt that to be able to do bad popular work with sincerity is a great advantage, commercially speaking.

But I must not go on using wince-making value-judgmatical words like "bad" without documenting them a little. If you want to know why I think Mr. T. is bad I will give you a few pointers. But first let me say that I am not anti-T. merely because he tries to imitate natural appearances. I confess that I do not see the point of doing so, since the invention of the camera, but merely because I find the painting of Andrew Wyeth or Alex Colville boring does not make me call them "bad". Tretchikoff's badness resides simply in his inability to do what he evidently has set himself to do.

Can't Paint Flesh

He can't paint flesh, for instance. Compare the nylon leg of his dancer with her arm. Does she wear stockings on her arms? Look at the mess he makes of trying to show the reflections off watermelon on the inside of his little Negro's fingers. Anatomy is something he might study in his spare time, and the ability to "model" would lend much-needed solidity to his figures, which he also should learn to relate, one to another.

Some idea of color is always useful to a painter, I believe, and all of the great painters of flowers and still life had unerring eyes for tone. See Willem Kalf or Jan van Huysum. But Mr. T. says the old masters "leave him cold." Shouldn't that have read: "the old masters leave him. Cold."?

To the Editor

For Oak Bay

Would you support a move to press Oak Bay to negotiate with the telephone company, and perhaps also the hydro company, for putting wiring underground and so getting rid of the hideous wooden poles which disfigure our streets?

I think if this were done little by little, and starting on the view streets, we could make out a good case which would attract all those who love beauty. Some at least should be ready to pay something to secure that beauty.—C. H.

James Bond: 'A Hero for Our Time'

By MALCOLM MUGGERIDGE

With his accustomed Eng. Lit. expertise, Mr. Kingsley Amis has produced a Bond primer, "The James Bond Dossier," which will enable anyone of average intelligence to reach O-level standard without having to open a single Fleming book—a dispensation for which I personally am profoundly grateful.

The same skill applied to, say, the Lake Poets, would in the old days have been a godsend to Indian students taking their finals.

The Bond study may yet come in handy in the grove of academe. Fleming has not yet, as far as I know, been made required reading for the School Certificate, but he soon may be; and any moment now we shall, I feel sure, be hearing extracts from his works read aloud in the old "Lift-Up-Your-Hearts" slot.

All in all, then, Mr. Amis has not by any means wasted his time. Some 20 million fellow humans, as I am given to understand, have bought, and presumably read, Bond books and as many again looked at screen versions of them, no doubt deriving from Mr. Connery's Bond and his leather-clad ladies the sort of infantile-erotic stimulation looked for in Mr. Hefner's "Playboy" magazine.

'Collected Letters'

I was surprised to learn, in the course of a recent telly session with Mr. Hefner at his lush residence in Chicago, that he is a great Bond enthusiast, and has conducted a voluminous correspondence with Fleming. One may hope that this will sometime see the light of day, edited by Mr. Amis.

As a social, if not as a literary, phenomenon, Bond well deserves the meticulous attention Mr. Amis has lavished on him. At the same time, it should be pointed out that the Bond sales, though impressive, are by no means unique. Mickey Spillane's novels, for instance, reach an even larger public. I choose him because he may be said to work in the same genre. May we look for a detailed comparison of their two oeuvres one of these days from Mr. Amis? It would be most welcome.

The truth is, of course, that best-sellers are born of hopeless yearnings, not fulfilment. Fleming's squalid aspirations and dream-fantasies happened to coincide with a whole generation's. He touched a nerve The inglorious appetite for speed at the touch of a foot on the accelerator and for sex at the touch of a hand on the flesh, found expression in his books. We live in the Century of the Common Bond, and Fleming created him.

Fantasy

Even so, Fleming's treatment of the Secret Service in the Bond books provides their most realistic element. The Secret Service is itself a fantasy. When I first presented myself at its headquarters in 1941 I was absolutely convinced that the people and arrangements there were a facade ingeniously devised to hoodwink the enemy and try me out. If I passed the test, I should then make contact with the real Secret Service.

This impression was confirmed when I found myself on a course of instruction in the use of invisible inks. Only subsequently, when actually posted abroad, was I forced to the conclusion that what I had supposed to be a facade was in fact the real thing.

Thus all the Bond rigmarole —007 and all that—is authentic enough. The fantasy lies in taking it seriously, and imagining it to be capable of achieving worthwhile results.

Here, a comparison may be made with Graham Greene's presentation of the Secret Service in "Our Man in Havana." In Mr. Greene's version, based on his own wartime experiences—brilliantly done, and easily the most authentic ever; better even than "Ashenden"—every thing ends in tragi-comic self-deception and pointless suffering and death. "C's" men at home are not only figures of fun, but traffickers in dangerous, sometimes lethal, delusions. Fleming, on the other hand, promotes the legend. I shouldn't mind betting that among the wreaths at his funeral there was one from "C" to "M." There ought to have been, anyway.

As a hero of our time, Bond is deplorable enough. One wishes people had better dreams, but Fleming himself is scarcely to be blamed. He only gave them a form.

Non 'Literary'

I remember discussing his writing with him when he was at work on "Casino Royale," his first book. He was insistent that he had no "literary" aspiration at all, and that his only purpose was to make money and provide entertainment. Here I think he deceived himself. He was deeply serious about the Bond books, and Bond became increasingly a glamorized version of himself. That so essentially kindly and, in the nicest way, "ordinary" a person should want to be Bond is extraordinary enough. It was, I decided, a kind of illness, but one, as it turned out, so widespread as to reach the dimensions of a plague.

As the years go by Bond grows tired, sick and even dispirited. He lacks the imaginative quality which enables a Bertie Wooster or a Don Quixote to be ageless. The marks of weariness and woe are very noticeable in the last Bond book, "You Only Live Twice" (the posthumous "Man with the Golden Gun" scarcely counts), as they were in his creator. The scene is set in Japan; Bond has been drinking heavily. Without it being specifically mentioned, one has a strong feeling of a shaking hand as he mixes drinks. It is even wordlessly conveyed that his clothes are shabby and his shirt grubby. He keeps away from women, and is short of money.

The mission, almost contemptuously entrusted to him by "M," is itself derisory; to induce the Japanese to pass cracked cypher traffic unofficially to the British without letting on to the Americans, under whose aegis the whole operation has been conducted.

What a far cry from the days when Leiter (note the Germanic name) of American Intelligence was treated by Bond with good-humored patronage, and was pathetically grateful for a kind word! No one seemed to think much of the British Secret Service any more, Bond reflects bitterly at one point in the book, as well he might.

Unillumined Dreams

So convinced was I that it was the end, that I closed the book expecting Fleming to die; which he did, almost at that precise moment. The last colored balloon had been inflated and sent on its way. His stock was exhausted, and, in any case, he had no breath left to blow up any more. It gave me a pang, not, like Mr. Amis, at the thought of Easters without a new Bond adventure, but because it seemed a pity that Fleming's life should have been expended on peddling dreams so unillumined.

I thought of his Thunderbird car and other props, of the exaggerated impression of shirt-cuff he always created, of the indifferent drinks he so elaborately mixed and the inaccurate travelling lore (set forth most unthrillingly in "Thrilling Cities") he so eagerly purveyed: of his woebegone left eye, and of Mr. Connery and the girls in black leather. Alas! Yet (as Dr. Johnson justly observes) why alas, since life is such?

POPE PAUL VI
. . . more changes?

Changes In Work Of Curia

By GODFREY BLAKELEY

ROME—The reform of the Roman Curia, the "government" of the Roman Catholic Church, is about to take another step forward.

Pope Paul VI is expected to make a declaration on the subject Sunday, the Feast of Pentecost. Far from being a administrative reorganization of the civil service of the church, the reform is the practical aspect of the whole process of updating the Roman Catholic Church.

The Roman Curia is the "establishment" of the church, a whole complex of ministries, offices, congregations and ecclesiastical tribunals under the Pope and the Cardinals. It was constituted in 1588. Today the need is to redimension it, to reduce its entrenched powers on the one hand and to renew its executive efficiency.

At present the groundwork for reform is being done. A special commision, presided over by the Italian Bishop Roberti, a jurist, and a "moderate" in Vatican politics, has been sitting.

Radically Changed

Several changes of "nomenclature" are expected. Thus the Holy Office, the very name of which recalls the Inquisition, will probably be renamed the tribunal (or ministry) of Faith and Customs. Its methods of inquiry and condemnation will be radically changed.

The executive powers of the Secretariat of State will also be considerably strengthened to enable it to put into effect the decisions of the Ecumenical Council and transmit the orders of the Pope (who will be advised by the Bishops) to the various ministries and tribunals and congregations. Thus while the executive powers of the Secretariat of State will be enlarged, the rest of the Curia, it is intended, will be reduced in power.

But the most overriding reform will be that of the "Curia mentality," the bureaucratic, careerist mentality. Many of the powers of the Curia will be ceded to diocese, that is to say, to the bishops and to the national episcopal conferences. A retirement age of 70 will be fixed and most Curia appointments will not be for life and will not be irremovable.

On the other hand, it does not seem likely that a "Parliament of Bishops," permanently sitting and advising the Pope will be instituted.

Sauve Shocks Quebec Liberals With Demand for Reform—Now!

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—In the ebb and flow of power within the shaky structure of the federal Liberal party in Quebec, the position of Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve has been a continuing puzzle.

Only a fortnight ago Sauve's impatient crusade to clean up the quagmire of Quebec politics seemed doomed, and he was being written off as a spent rebel, garrotted by his own ambitions. Then suddenly on Thursday night, in an important speech to the Montreal Labor Council, Sauve resumed his reform initiative.

During the course of an unusually frank address, he hurled a challenge at those who seek to delay the needed surgery until after the next election: "It takes time to alter the structure of a political party, and we've been talking about it since 1960.

"If these reforms aren't carried out before the next election, there's no reason to believe they'll be carried out after it because the Liberal party will succeed in Quebec even without reforms. The time to act is now."

Political Heresy

Such statements might be considered mild in other parts of Canada, but in Quebec they constitute political heresy of the first order. The significance of Sauve's public call for reform can only be appreciated within the context of his highly volatile personality and the precarious position in which he finds himself.

Ever since he first came to Ottawa, following the 1962 election, Sauve has been in trouble with the established hierarchy of his party for the simple reason that he refuses to obey some time-worn rules of the political game. The wheels of power grind slowly in Ottawa and the transfer of authority from one generation of politicians to the next is a difficult process which cannot be rushed. Political preeminence is customarily achieved through slow rings of growth, each larger in circumference, until finally power is passed on in natural painless succession.

Driven on by a barely concealed assumption of his own intellectual superiority, Sauve has deliberately ignored such traditions. In the process, he has broken another cardinal rule of power politics in Ottawa: the belief that since power is based on personal relationships which are constantly changing, they must steadily be multiplied. Instead of attempting to enlist allies to his cause, Sauve now stands virtually alone—a man who will negotiate but cannot readily be negotiated with.

Motives Questioned

Although Sauve's motives are widely questioned, they are in fact straightforward. He is determined to destroy the "old guard" machine which still maintains a strong if diminishing hold over the Quebec wing of the federal Liberal party. His many enemies in Ottawa interpret this concern as a combination of impatience and ambition.

Certainly Sauve is both—as is every other progressive politician whose mental horizons extend beyond the boundaries of his own constituency. As one of the most prominent of the French-speaking ministers in the Pearson cabinet, untouched by the recent swarm of scandalous allegations, any radical reform is bound to leave Sauve as the natural inheritor of the Quebec Liberal party.

But in the current struggle for power, Sauve recognizes that much more than his own career is at stake.

Canadian confederation is held together by shaky scaffolding. Only the Liberals can field a slate of MP's from French and English Canada. But until the reforms Sauve is seeking are carried out, the true representatives of contemporary Quebec will refuse to take their proper place in Ottawa. At the moment, no member of the Pearson cabinet has the status or acceptance in Quebec City to challenge seriously the accelerating round of demands being posed by the Quebec provincial government. Only with true reform representatives from Quebec will the Liberals find the real solutions to the problems of confederation, because they will be able to deal with their counterparts both in English Canada and in Quebec City as men of equal stature.

MAURICE SAUVE

Rude Demand

Sauve's rude demand for reform has been represented by his enemies in Ottawa as a direct challenge to the authority of the prime minister. During a stormy private luncheon on April 29, Guy Favreau, Pearson's chief Quebec lieutenant, insisted that Sauve should disavow some of his stronger utterances. But in a private meeting with the prime minister on May 3, Pearson appeared to back Sauve's call for reform. The difference between the two men is essentially one of timing.

Pearson remains a prisoner of the fact that Guy Favreau is the only man he ever begged to come into politics with him, and he is determined not to undermine Favreau's authority. Pearson is willing to support an overhaul of the Quebec organization but with one important rider — he wants to wait until after the next election.

A Federal Party

By then, Sauve is convinced, Quebeckers currently seeking an outlet of political expression will have enlisted their energies in other directions. One possibility being discussed in the province is the organization of a federal Quebec party, in the style of the progressives of the 1922's. It's a measure of the desperation of this dispossessed group of intellectuals, that they're even investivating the long-term prospects of the Conservative party.

Sauve faces some formidable difficulties.

The most serious of these is the opposition of Guy Favreau and Secretary of State Maurice Lamontagne, who support reform only on a mild, long-term basis. One of these gentlemen recently confided to a friend that a good reason for not carrying out strong reforms immediately, is that Maurice Sauve would get most of the credit. With such bitterness in play within the Quebec wing of the Liberal party, the embattled forestry minister still faces an agonizing, difficult task.

$270 Millions for Air Canada

OTTAWA—Behind the government's newly-announced commercial air policy is the story of how a group of Canadian businessmen offered to raise more than $300 millions to buy out Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Air Lines and merge them.

The group, headed by a prominent western industrialist, put a firm proposal to Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill a year ago. At that time both airlines were under stricture from Mr. Pickersgill to co-operate in their overseas operations or be amalgamated. The government's position was that the national interest could not countenance their working against each other abroad—as, for example, by Air Canada booking a passenger from Toronto to Tokyo by Japan Air Line beyond Vancouver, rather than by CPA.

But the threat of merger was a threat only to CPA. Gordon McGregor, president of Air Canada, had no fear should Mr. Pickersgill lower the boom. It was obvious to everyone concerned that the kind of amalgamation Mr. Pickersgill had in mind was the nationalization of CPA and its merger with Air Canada.

* * *

Enter at this point the shade of J. R. Booth.

J.R. was the lumber king of the Ottawa Valley at the turn of the century, a timber tycoon who controlled and cut vast limits of virgin white pine to feed the busy Booth mills. He even owned a railroad—and the CPR coveted that railroad. It tried to buy the Booth line. "How much?" wrote the president of the CPR to J.R. "will you take for your railroad?"

"How much," J.R. wrote back, "will you take for the CPR? Cash."

When Mr. Pickersgill laid down his co-operate-or-else dictum, I told Grant McConachie, president of CPA, the story of J. R. Booth and the CPR. Coincidentally—or was it coincidence—within a few months Mr. Pickersgill had on his desk a firm proposal to incorporate a public company to buy and operate Air Canada and CPA.

How much, it asked Mr. Pickersgill, will you take for Air Canada? Cash.

* * *

It was a good business proposition for the government. Air Canada's transfer to private Canadian ownership would have brought the government about $270 millions. It would have created a condition of airline monopoly towards which Mr. Pickersgill and his advisers leaned, without the cost of buying out CPA. It would have freed the government of the business risks of running a major airline. And the government would have collected 52 per cent of the new airline's profits in corporation tax.

True, it gets all of Air Canada's profits,—but Air Canada has been a singularly profitless company. Last year CPA's profits were more than three times those of Air Canada.

The offer was declined. It was too risky politically. The Socialists would scream sell-out. Air Canada is more than an airline; it is a symbol of national pride, and the Tories might have defended it as vigorously as they defended the Red Ensign.

But the offer ended the government's drift towards a decision to buy out CPA and merge it with Air Canada. Amalgamation under government ownership became untenable when private capital had produced a better alterniative. And with the threat—or promise—of amalgamation removed, co-operation between the two airlines began to flower.

A Running Commentary

Financial Times

A permanent speaker might bring Canadian MPs more than they bargain for. One of the most distinguished recent speakers at Westminster developed a habit, in his later years, of mumbling to himself a sort of running commentary on the proceedings.

Presumably he did not realize that his mutterings could be heard within a fair radius of the chair. Or perhaps he did not care. They were apt to go like this: "Bloody fool! Doesn't know what he's talking about. Why doesn't he sit down?"

At Westminster this idiosyncracy seemed to enhance the prestige of the chair and the affectionate respect in which the speaker was held. But one wonders how Canadian MPs would take it.

ON THE TIMES

By ART STOTT

Here, and on Earth

OFF the head of Trial the play of the rip bounced the water into a low chop. A small breeze lent its freshness to air that tasted like wine. In the westward reach from the Island to Clover Point the sea was glass calm. It was an early evening in which it didn't matter much that the fish weren't there, or weren't biting. Just being in that serenity was enough.

Stott

On the way out we passed through a swath of scum disintegrating on the incoming tide as it moved from the Clover Point outfall. Overhead the vapor trail of a jet traced its arc in the clear blue sky.

In the faltering stream of waste matter and the sky path of the plane were reminders to a boatman of current topics in the news. One dealt with water pollution. The other invited speculation on the magnificent scientific triumph which was releasing man into space.

My mind turned to a comment made some months ago by Mr. Justice W. O. Douglas, the distinguished American conservationist. He estimated that it would take as many millions (or was it billions?) of dollars to put a man on the moon as it would to remove contamination from all American waterways. And he ventured the suggestion that Americans would be spending more time in their own country than on the moon. Conveivably, he suggested, the expenditure of the vast amount on purifying water would be a better investment for the people.

* * *

Without trying to put myself in the Douglas category, a similar thought has occurred to me. We, meaning the advanced and wealthy nations, spend tremendous sums to send men on what may be Columbus-like journeys into the unknown. From those trips eventually humanity will benefit — I think, if humanity hangs around long enough. But while these miracles are being performed, we still use the same methods of sewage disposal which have been compounding their inefficiencies for centuries.

Sanitary engineers and other technicians fiddle around the circumference of sewage and waste disposal when, it seems to me, science should be concentrating on a breakthrough based on an entirely new approach.

My idea is that private bathrooms and refuse conveyors for industry should be equipped with a small, simple device, inexpensive to operate, which would either vaporize waste or leave behind nothing but minute clinkers. They would be removed from their containers semi-annually by a disposal system which would be completely inoffensive, sterile and non-injurious to the surrounding real estate, countryside, waterway or sea.

* * *

Who is going to make the device? The scientists. And, if needs be, I'd transfer them from jobs making new bombs and moon flights to do it. I have infinite faith in human ingenuity and ability to solve the big problems, provided brains, facilities, money and determination are devoted to the tasks.

Of course there are advances being made in waste disposal. At the moment, according to the London Letter, the firm of John Brown, Britain, is engaged in trials of an electrolytic treatment plant at Cosham, near Portsmouth. The experiment depends on the use of sea water and the process would use an electrolytic cell, with positive and negative electrodes, to break down the mixture of brine and waste into chlorine and magnesium hydroxide.

If it works, this should be an improvement. But it isn't enough. The water-borne principle is still involved and the United States, like other leaders of earlier civilizations, is finding that you have to avoid hanky-panky with your water supplies or you destroy them. When good water is not available, the civilization literally dries up and blows away.

I know what I want—a gadget preferably matchbox size or a little larger. I'm prepared to postpone research on space flights and bomb refinements to give science the time and funds for the job. All I want is to have science get on with it so that the planet we inhabit will remain worth inhabitting.

WEEK ON MARKETS

'Similarities' To Great '29 Market Crash

By JOHN BELANGER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

A speech in New York triggered a selling wave that sent prices on Canadian stock exchanges to their lowest levels in months this week.

Prices in all major sections dropped sharply and trading was moderate. The drop underlined the fact that Canadian exchanges—and especially the Toronto Stock Exchange—do not operate autonomously but tend to follow the vagaries of the New York Stock Exchange.

The speech was given by William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board in the United States.

He said he saw "disquieting similarities" between economic conditions of today and just prior to the great stock market crash of 1929. His words sent a tremor through securities analysts and prices tumbled.

Several attempts at recovery were made through the week, but each fizzled.

GOLDS SLIDE

Mr. Martin also said an increase in the basic price for gold at this time would be foolish—and gold stocks in Toronto and elsewhere slid lower. Metals markets in the United Kingdom weakened—and base metals in Toronto declined sharply.

Even speculatives were worse this week.

Trading in penny mines and oils declined compared with the feverish activity of a few weeks ago, and prices were a little easier.

The industrial decline was felt in all major groups with banks, papers, integrated oils and metal-working issues the hardest hit. Each of the five chartered banks touched low points for 1965.

Beverages, chemicals and textiles, foods and steels also fell sharply. Many drops were of a point or more. Industrial mines also suffered.

ACTIVE TRADERS

Actively traded industrials included CPR, Massey-Ferguson, Brazilian Traction, Interprovincial Steel and Pipe, Falconbridge, Quebec Natural Gas and Stelco.

Falconbridge had a special-sized transaction of 20,000 shares at midweek at 100½ for a total value of $2,010,000. It was TSE's largest such transaction in three months.

Among industrial losers, CPR dropped 2 to 61 and Abitibi ½ to 12½. Aluminium fell ½ to 31½. Stelco dropped 1⅞ to 30¾.

Raglan burst onto the speculative mining scene in significant volume again this week on news of favorable drilling results. The stock gained 11 cents to $2.14 and traded 257,950 shares.

Anglo United Development shone in an otherwise dull speculative oils list. The stock fell 10 cents to $1.32 but churned up 194,690 shares.

METALS RALLY

Senior base metals rallied at week's end but remained on the downside. Hudson Bay Mining fell a hefty 4⅛ to 73⅞. Inco dropped 2¼ to 95¾. Denison, however, rose 2¼ to 33 in heavy trading.

Golds closed quietly and were lower. Giant Yellowknife declined ¾ to 13¾ and Dome fell ½ to 38½.

Senior western oils were dull. Dome Petroleum fell 1½ to 17⅝ and Hudson's Bay declined a point to 18.

INDEXES

On index at Toronto, industrials fell 4.14 to 170.50, the TSE index 3.80 to 160.26, golds 4.32 to 158.02, base metals 1.67 to 82.26 and western oils 4.03 to 104.41.

Total volume at Toronto was 15,579,741 shares compared with 13,370,910 shares traded the previous week and total value of trading was $67,002,633 compared with $50,071,139.

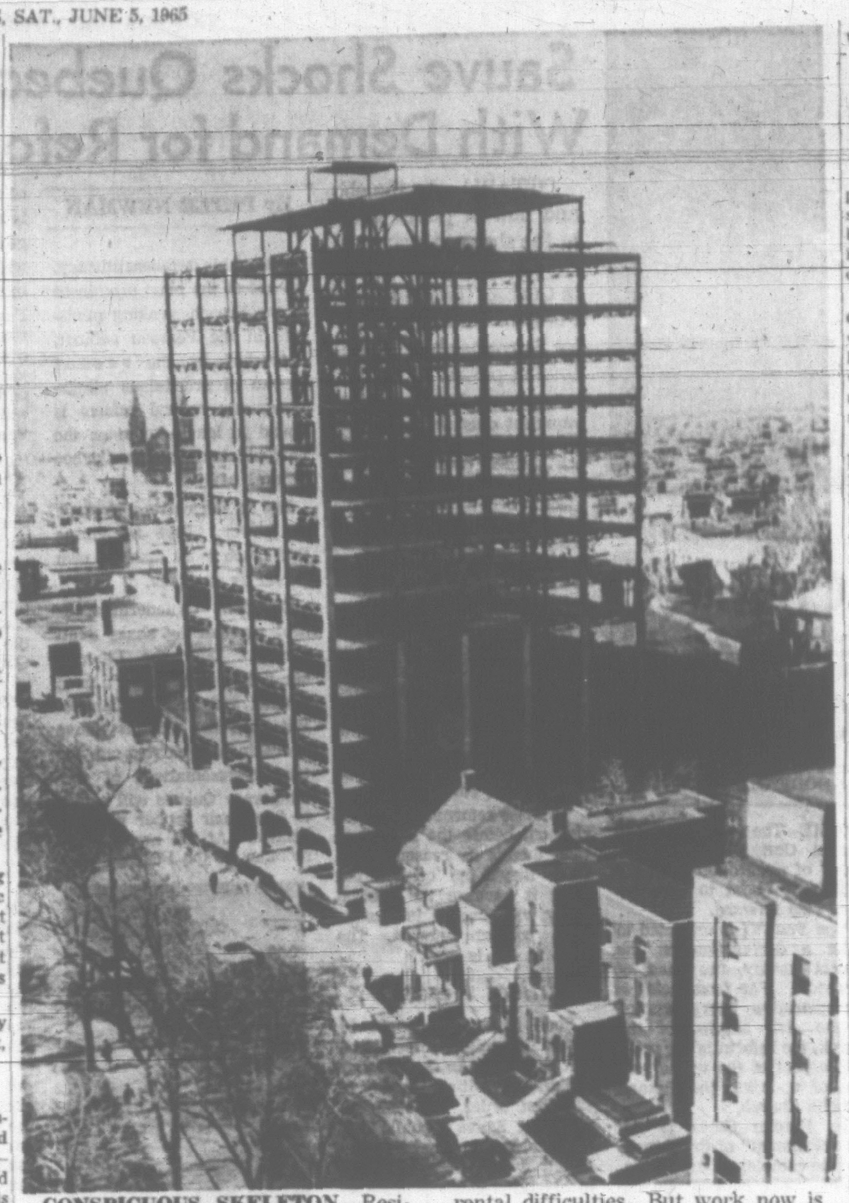
On index at Montreal, industrials fell 4.30 to 166.70, utilities 2.90 to 150.10, banks 2.60 to 127.90 and papers 4.60 to 134.40. Volume in industrials at Montreal was 1,304,378 shares compared with 654,600 shares traded the previous week and volume in mines was 6,279,906 shares compared with 5,619,689.

Molson Profits, Sales Increase

MONTREAL (CP)—Increased sales and net profits are reported by Molson Breweries Ltd. for the fiscal year which ended March 31.

The report said "sales kept pace with those of the industry and our share of the Canadian beer market was maintained."

Consolidated net sales were $132,032,715, a gain of $6,785,958 over the previous year's high of $125,246,757. Consolidated net profits reached $9,042,619 compared with $8,396,840 a year ago, the company said.



CONSPICUOUS SKELETON—Residents of Trois-Rivieres, Que., are calling the unfinished Place Royale "the skeleton" since work on the 14-storey building stopped abruptly a year ago. The promoters ran into rental difficulties. But work now is resuming as Trois-Rivieres begins to feel the benefits of a new bridge spanning the St. Lawrence under construction nearby, and plans for a steel mill in the area. (CP Photo.)

BUSINESS VIEWS

Victoria Over-Stocked With Houses, Apartments

By JIM HUME

Times Business Editor

The high-rise apartments may be shooting up all over B.C. but tenancy isn't keeping pace.

Figures released Friday by Central Mortgage and Housing show that both house building and apartment buildings are outstripping permanent tenants.

Hume

In Victoria the situation is bad enough with 81 new houses sitting awaiting buyers, but in Vancouver with 291 new houses sitting vacant the bloom may be off the house-building rose.

Apartment-wise things are even worse.

In Victoria 172 empty apartments await first bidders while in Vancouver a whopping 1,480 newly constructed apartments echo emptily.

YEAR AGO

In April a year ago Vancouver had only 570 empty apartments and 272 new empty houses. Victoria had 137 empty apartments and 64 empty homes. And again we should repeat the "new" for the figures apply only to new construction.

Not adding to the picture at all is the fact that 125 apartments are still under construction in the Greater Victoria area—93 in Victoria itself, 32 in Saanich—while in the Greater Vancouver area 427 new apartments are heading for the empty ranks.

In real estate ranks, the experts appear little perturbed by the trend, but from this corner it would appear that a slackening off in high-rise building is inevitable, at least until a little catching up is done.

* * *

Among the hidden costs paid by local businessmen, but rarely seen by the average man, are workmen's compensation contributions, paid wholly by the employer.

That such payments are essential there is no doubt, but neither is there any doubt that a little recognition now and thein of the rates paid would be in order.

The men who employ ship-liners (workmen who provide the special hold linings required in grain ships) pay the highest compensation rates, $15 for every $100 earned by the employee.

All rates are based on $100 earned by the employee and are levied on wages up to $5,000 a year. In other words, if an employee earns more than $5,000 compensation payments to the fund are levied only up to the $5,000 level.

$750 PER MAN

So, for every $100 earned by a ship-liner the employer must pay $15 into the compensation fund. On $5,000 therefore he chips in $750 for every employee earning that amount.

Why so high for ship-liners? A Workmen's Compensation Board official explains it this way: "The work is hazardous and, though accidents are few they are invariably of a major kind."

Like rates for group insurance medical plans, compensation rates are reviewed each year with increases or decreases ordered by the board according to payments made during the preceeding year.

UPWARD JUMP

In B.C. at the end of 1964 most rates took a slight upward jump.

Building contractors now pay $3 for every $100 earned by their employees as compared with $2.50 last year. Coal mine operators are now paying $4.50 for every $100 earned, an increase of 50 cents over last year. Metal mine owners pay 20 cents more than last year, $3.50 instead of $3.30 for every $100 earned.

There's an additional payment for mine owners with men engaged in metaliferous mining, $2.75 as a special rate for silicosis. Last year the silicosis rate was $3 for every $100 earned.

The logging industry obviously impressed the board with a good record throughout 1964 because while other rates were creeping up slightly, logging rates remained the same at $6.50 for every $100 earned.

All employers pay workmen's compensation rates with white collar workers in the lower brackets.

The object of this little exercise is to remind readers that when they're looking for the cause of increased living costs they remember these not insignificant contributions, for, while the employer ostensibly pays the shot, we each, indirectly, contribute.

'Copter Firm Licence Gone

OTTAWA (CP)—The Air Transport Board announced today it has suspended the operating licence of Autair Helicopters Ltd. of Montreal and may cancel the company's right to operate entirely.

A board order, dated June 1, suspended Autair's licence for its Montreal base, effective June 12, and called a formal hearing July 12 in Montreal to hear company arguments why this licence and a Winnipeg one already under suspension should not be cancelled completely.

Wholesale Prices Establish New Highs

OTTAWA (CP)—Wholesale prices broke out of a two-year stability trend last month and bounced up to a new high, raising questions about the future of price trends generally.

Economists looking at the Canadian scene have pointed with satisfaction to the fact the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' wholesale price index has remained within 1½ points of 245.5 since May, 1963.

But the bureau announced Friday its index, based on 1935-39 wholesale prices equalling 100, reached 249.0 in May this year for a gain of about two per cent over the mean for the past two years.

The bureau, as is its practice, did not attribute the increase to any specific cause but noted that, during the period the general wholesale index rose to 5.7 points to 283.8 and the iron products index rose 8.4 points to 265.6.

RECALL PRICE RISE

This prompted some economists to recall that in February, the Steel Company of Canada announced a four per cent increase in prices for some products. The ramifications of this and similar increases may now be seen in current wholesale prices, they said.

The bureau says that, because of the mixture of commodities and variety of processing stages reflected in the wholesale price index, it cannot be regarded as a measurement of the purchasing power of the dollar. But it is closely tied to the business cycle and can be regarded as an indicator of general business conditions.

Bank Scandal Rocks Europe

BERN (AP)—Max Hommel, president of the Swiss federal banking commission, was relieved of his duties Friday in connection with a scandal that has rocked the European financial world.

A government announcement said Hommel has been suspended from his post pending an investigation.

This action follows the suspension of all payments by two Swiss banks and the arrest of Spanish financier Julio Munoz in Geneva earlier this week.

Munoz became the main stockholder of the two banks, the Swiss Savings and Credit Bank of St. Gall and its subsidiary, the Geneva Commerce and Credit Bank. It is alleged that he squandered large sums of money which he succeeded in borrowing from the banks after he took control of them. He was arrested by Geneva police Monday.

The government announcement said Hommel was suspended because he was suspected of "violating the duties with which he was charged." It did not elaborate but confirmed that the suspension was in connection with the Munoz affair.

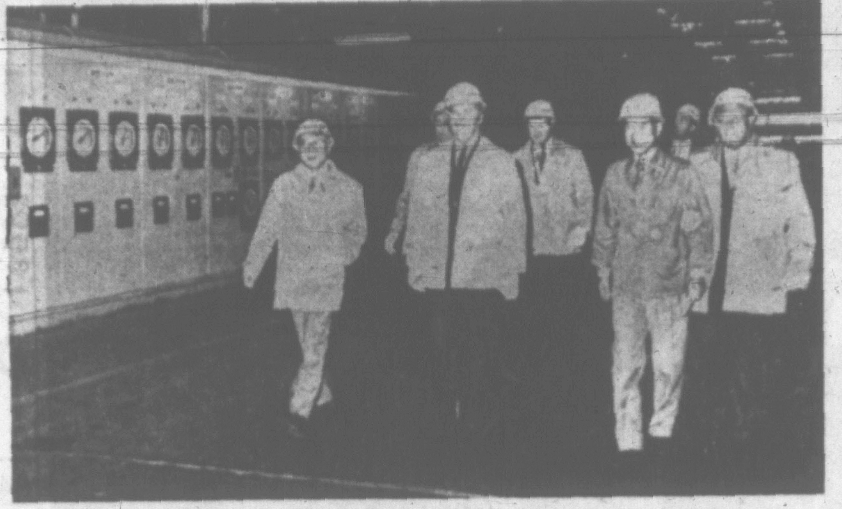
STEEL MILL HEADS LIST . . . . . . WITH JAPANESE BACKING

Bennett Hammers Home One Point . . . Build B.C.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Staff Reporter



BENNETT LEADS MISSION THROUGH IRON PLANT

OSAKA—Premier W. A. C. Bennett has been hammering home a single message to Japanese bankers, industrialists and traders. British Columbia wants more two-way trade and joint investments with Japan.

He doesn't say this contrasts with Ottawa's insistence on "voluntary" and compulsory quotas for Japanese goods—but his audiences certainly draw that conclusion.

★ ★ ★

In Tokyo, he made general allusions to his theme and pointed out the distinction between B.C. and Canada quietly with such gestures as the offer to send a "Brtish Columbia dogwood" for planting in the Imperial Palace's aboretum and his invitation to Prime Minister Sato to visit B.C.

But here, in Japan's heartland where he has cast envious eyes at huge and still burgeoning steel plants, the premier has increasingly emphasized the independence of B.C.

At the big new Yawata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. mill he lit up in delighted smiles when told that Vancouver is a more familiar name than Ottawa to Japanese businessmen because almost all imports from Canada flow from its harbor.

"We too feel a little closer to Japan than to Ottawa," Mr. Bennett responded.

"Between British Columbia and Ottawa there is not only a lot of land but also some high mountains. But between B.C. and Japan there are no mountains, only the same ocean that joins us.

"To show you what our feelings are: When I go to Ottawa I usually take only one minister with me but in coming to Japan I have brought five ministers—that shows the importance of this visit.

"We think there is no limit to the joint ventures we can arrange between British Columbia and Japan to our mutual advantage."

★ ★ ★

At a reception tendered the B.C. party by the Osaka civic and business leaders, the premier told the assembly that only British Columbia, out of all Canada, turns its face to Japan and wants major trading links with it. He said the other provinces look toward Atlantic trade.

He said the Pacific joins, rather than divides, the province and Japan and he looks forword to the day "when Canadian Pacific Airlines has three flights a day here and not just three a week."

Mr. Bennett added that Japan should look to B.C. as a prime market and also a port of entry for the whole Pacific Northwest and the Prairies.

Then, only half-jokingly, he urged the Canada-Japan Friendship Society.

Everywhere the premier has gone, receptions, plants and hotels, the Japanese have flown their standard and a Red Maple Leaf flag—which has added an ironic touch to the distinctions he has drawn between the federal and provincial jurisdictions.

But there is a double irony in the flags—and possibly a clue to the premier's determination to get his message across. The Japanese, this reporter learned, went to the Canadian embassy in Tokyo during preparations for the visit and asked whether there was a provincial flag that should be flown as a mark of respect.

★ ★ ★

The embassy official who was approached didn't know that B.C. had its own flag.

"I knew Nova Scotia had one but I didn't know if B.C. did so I told them it would be safe enough to fly the national flag," he said.

It may yet turn out that that was a safe but sorry decision for the embassy because pressure is starting to build up within the B.C. Cabinet to reconsider an earlier decision against opening a B.C. House in Toyko.

Premier Bennett's latest attitude is that the negative decision still is justified on the grounds of cost but some of his colleagues are showing a little impatience over what they term "eastern-oriented" thinking by Canadian government officials.

"We have some very good men here but you don't have to be here very long before you see that the British Columbia story is not just being pushed the way it would be if there were some men here from our province," said Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark.

"It costs a great deal to post representatives here but we may have to think about it again, especially if our trade with Japan rises as we hope."

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile, Premier Bennett seems content with shooting at a few key targets in his mission here. A steel mill, with Japanese financial and technical backing, appears to head the list.

While talking with the Yawata directors, it was mentioned that private negotiations are under way now between Japanese and B.C. interests to set up some "pelletizing" plans in B.C. to prepare iron ore for feeding into Japanese blast furnaces straight out of freighters.

But the premier didn't warm up to this gratuitous example of the "joint investment" he preaches. He said he wanted a blast furnace too. He even laid out a schedule: a rolling mill in 1966, a flange mill in 1967 and a smelter in 1968.

Mines Minister Donald Brothers told this reporter the B.C. cabinet knows about the pelletizing negotiations but is not happy about them for fear it "will cut us off at the pass in developing our own steel industry."

The premier's remarks after private meetings with government and banking officials here indicate he has hopes they will persuade the industrialist to switch from pelletizing concepts to joint development of a steel works. One reason in his favor is that such a course would help earn dollars instead of adding to the pressing trade imbalance problem bedevilling Japan.

★ ★ ★

Hard bargaining, as well as compliments, have flowed throughout all contacts between the B.C. party and Japanese businessmen.

"In Tokyo, after a daylong session of discussions with a panel of top officials of the Mitsubishi Trading Company, Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan politiely but firmly summed up the cabinet's position when he addressed a reception.

"It would be politically unwise for B.C. to remain a mere supplier of raw materials," he reminded the group. "And you would think us unwise to if we failed to learn from Mitsubishi's success in diversification."

(The Mitsubishi's complex has scores of interests ranging from shipbuilding to insurance.)

Mr. Kiernan told the Japanese officials that B.C. has an abundance of energy as well as minerals and was determined to combine the two into an industrial base. He invited them to explore ways of participating in the development through joint investment in plants in B.C.

"We have an abundance of hydro-electric power, natural gas, oil, coal, immense quantities of pure, fresh water and plenty of land in which to use them for development. You have, to a degree, the money and the know-how to help develop this great province."

Japan Big Market For B.C. Gas

Times Staff Reporter

TOKYO—Commercial Transport Minister Robert Bonner says he has been assured there is a prospect of a major market here for "bottled gas" from B.C.

Mr. Bonner, after a meeting with officials of the Nishho Trading Company, reported they were convinced that technical problems will be solved during an August experiment, which will see four tankers bring liquified petroleum gas from B.C.

"The economics are no problem but there are a few techniques that will have to be developed for loading the gas in Vancouver and also there is the question of constructing new loading facilities if the experiments are successful," he said.

"Each of the four vessels will carry 33,000 tons of the LP gas. It will be supplied by Pacific Petroleums Ltd. and shipped from the B.C. end by a company headed by Victoria-Vancouver entrepeneur Maurice Macgregor.

The Nishho company will distribute the LP gas here for domestic cooking fuel at a competitive price of .73 yen a litre. It also will sell it for taxi cab fuel for 22 yen a litre (about 55 cents a gallon) compared with the present price of 53 yen for a litre of gasoline.

"It could be the bottled gas boom all over again but this time with a 96 million-person market," said Mr. Bonner.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

When Rudy Pilous coached Chicago Black Hawks he always assigned Jack Evans to handle faceoffs against Jean Beliveau in the Chicago zone.

Evans was no Tim Horton with the stick but he had quickness. As soon as the puck was dropped Evans would move forward and drape his 200 pounds all over Big Jean.

RUDY PILOUS

Against the Canadiens in a Stanley Cup playoff game, a faceoff was called in the Chicago end.

Beliveau was out there, and Pilous promptly began searching for Evans. The large fellow had just come off the ice after an extra-long shift and was sitting on the bench, puffing like a water buffalo who had just hauled the mail nonstop from Moose Jaw to Medicine Hat.

There was only 36 seconds to play and Chicago was leading 1-0. What the heck, thought Pilous. Evans is pooped. Just this once, I'll go with a fresh man. Rudy nodded to Pierre Pilote.

Pilote weighs 175, Beliveau 205. Beliveau won the draw, whipped the puck to Henri Richard and bingo! game tied.

Nobody scored in the first overtime period, but Pilous observed that his athletes were running out of asparagus.

He held a hurried conversation with his trainer, who immediately disappeared into the bowels of Chicago Stadium.

Rudy Felt Out of Step in Victoria

When he returned, ticketholders behind the Chicago bench noticed he surreptitiously passed something from player to player. This continued throughout the second overtime and into the third, when Chicago scored to end the marathon.

In the dressing room, a weary, red-eyed Stan Mikita turned to Pilous and asked, "What was in those sugar cubes?"

Pilous smiled. "Brandy," he said.

"Whoof!" gasped Mikita. "One more time up and down the bench with those things and I would have been stiff."

This parable is a circuitous route to explain why professor Pilous is not returning to this banana land next autumn.

In Victoria, Pilous felt "stiff," not to mention lonesome, cold, misplaced and out of step.

One night after his sweaty athletes had covered themselves with ignominy, Pilous sipped a tranquilizer and asked nobody in particular, "Whatinhell am I doing here, four boat lengths away from Hong Kong?"

Some Flowers Bloom at Wrong Time

Pilous was not disenchanted with Victoria, per se, although he didn't wholly endorse Chamber of Commerce literature describing it as the garden spot of the world. Mr. Pilous was a gardener of sorts, assigned the task of cultivating an assortment of bulbs into a blue-ribbon winner.

Some of Pilous' flowers were patsies which bloomed in the night. But not always on game nights.

They did not believe in giving entirely of themselves to the task of hockey. To Pilous no sin is greater than that of the player who comes off the ice with unspent energy.

After losing a game out of sheer indifference or glue-footed brilliance, he didn't expect them to pin on black armbands. But neither did he relish being asked what time the floor show started at Dirty Gertie's.

Pilous' preoccupation with his job extended to reading biographies of successful people for helpful hints. Essentially, he subscribed to the hardly novel but decidedly true theory that the key word was work.

"You got to give blood," was one of his pet phrases.

Toronto Generous with Hamurger

Some of his players scoffed at Pilous' "big league" approach to hockey. He even took a blackboard on road trips but the skeptics felt chalk sessions were for schoolboys.

"I can't understand why they don't respond," he once said. "Even if you dig ditches, surely you want to dig the best ditch."

A few Western Hockey League coaches were openly amazed at the job he did with the Maple Leafs. Bud Poile, smarting after the Leafs walloped his Seals early in the season, asked Pilous bluntly: "Why, you don't think you're going to make the playoffs with that bunch of shoe clerks, do you?"

Poile was cutting the baloney a little thick, but it is true that Toronto sent Pilous more hamburger than New York cuts.

Larry Keenan had done nothing with Rochester and was a dispirited soul when Pilous got him at Denver.

Asked what miracle drug he had used to transform Keenan into one of the Western League's finest, Rudy said: "I told him he would get a fair shot and that I expected a fair shot."

In Between, Too Many Don't Care

John Sleaver, a try guy, wasn't supposed to play for Victoria last season. He came here over Rochester's objections by saying: "I want to play under Rudy because he knows what he's doing and you know where you stand with him."

This week Pilous signed off with Toronto. He will handle Hamilton Red Wings, a Junior A team in the Ontario Hockey Association.

"There's two levels to coach," Pilous once said. "Junior, where the youngsters are striving to go ahead, or in the big big league, where they are determined to prove they belong. In between, too many don't care."

Rudy Pilous probably doesn't need a Western League job. He has a $50,000 home in St. Catharines and the Ontario Jockey Club rewards him well as a publicist.

Hockey needs Pilous, though.

However far that little candle throws its beams, Rudy Pilous is a symbol of talent and decency in a sport where symbols are sorely needed.

Six Island Boys Picked for Tour

Six Vancouver Island athletes and one from Salt Spring Island will be competing in Europe and England this summer during a track tour by British Columbia Independent Schools.

All have been selected from Brentwood College, which will combine with University School for the safari, starting June 28 from Vancouver.

Shawnigan Lake and Strathcona schools will also tour Europe, following a different route until the two groups meet July 22 at Klagenfurt, Germany.

The Brentwood University group will compete in seven meets, four of them in England against Wellington College, Sandhurst, Stowe School and Barry Grammar and Technical School.

Meets are also scheduled in Denmark and Sweden on the trip that will also take the boys to France, Italy and Switzerland.

B.C. boys selected from Brentwood are Mark Clarke and James Crowe of Victoria, Barry Greenhalgh, Malcolm Graham and Rod Garbutt of Duncan, Ian Scott-Moncrieff of Cobble Hill, Derek Harkema of Salt Spring, and Bill Hobbs of Vancouver.

Managers of the tour will be Alan Rees, Brentwood, and J. Arscott, University School. Robert McIvar of Port Alberni will accompany the team as photographer.

OUR BILL WINS A SQUEAKER

It couldn't have been closer without dead heat in 880-yard event during Compton Invitational track meet Friday night in Los Angeles as Canada's Bill Crothers (right) races into tape with California rivals Bob Hose (centre) and Ted Nelson. All had times of 1:48.7 but Crothers was declared winner.

SNELL EXTENDED

Clarke Cracks World Marks

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Australia's Ron Clarke set world records for the three-mile and 5,000-metre runs Friday night, overshadowing the great Peter Snell who was forced to the utmost to win the mile in 3:56.4 in the Compton Invitational track meet.

Clarke ran away from his opposition as he captured the 5,000 meter run at the Coliseum in 13:25.8, breaking his own mark of 13:33.6. He was timed at the three-mile mark in 13:00.4 to break another of his standards, 13:07.6.

Snell, the New Zealand star, beat Jim Grelle of Portland, Ore., by inches in the mile and the U.S. runner was given the same time of 3:56.4.

JIM RYUN THIRD

Jim Ryun, 17-year-old high school runner from Wichita, Kans., was only four yards behind the leaders as he finished in 3:56.8. It was the best time of his brief but spectacular career.

Clarke received Close competition in the 5,000 meters during the early stages from Neville Scott of New Zealand.

After one mile, Scott led by two yards and was timed in 4:17.5. Clarke did not turn on his best speed until the mile and a half mark when he was clocked in 6:27.4, and from then on he kept opening up his advantage.

He was officially timed at the three-mile point so that mark might be submitted for a record.

THRILLING FINISH

A crowd of 12,165, disappointing for the great distance duels, watched Canada's Bill Crothers hold on for a thrilling victory in the 880-yard run, in which the first three finishers were clocked in 1:48.7.

The Canadian bolted into the lead with 220 yards to go, but Ted Nelson of the Southern California Striders and then Bob Hose of San Diego charged up to challenge. They virtually hit the finish line all even. Hose was awarded second and Nelson third.

Hammer-thrower Harold Connolly, who a week ago broke his own world record, settled for a meet mark of 225 feet, four inches.

Connolly, 33, hurled the hammer 233 feet, two inches at Modesto, Calif., bettering his world 231-10 mark.

In the women's 100, Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State equalled her own American record of 10.5, which she shares with Ernestine Pollards of Chicago.

CHUVALO FIGHTS

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—George Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion, of Toronto will fight Sonny Andrews, not Tiger Wright, in a 10-round non-title bout here Monday night.

Bombs Blast Yanks

By UP International

The story of the 1965 American League pennant race may well have been told Friday night when two bombs burst in Yankee Stadium.

Roll back the clock and call the roll of the greats and you'd say that the bombs were fired by Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio or Mickey Mantle. But on this night you'd be wrong—for they were fired by guys named Danny Cater and Floyd Robinson.

For it may be that the Yankees, who long lived by the long ball, may now be dying by it.

NOT QUITE . . .

It was "operation get well" for the Yankees because they were facing the White Sox. So often in the past, the Yankees pulled out victories and turned the tide of the pennant race. But this time it was different.

This time it was the White Sox who came up with the long ball—the big bomb that terrorized the league in years past.

Cater broke the 15-inning scoreless spell with a homer and one out later Floyd Robinson also homered to give relief pitcher Eddie Fisher an easy fifth victory against one loss. Fisher stopped the Yankees on one hit over the last six innings to drop New York into ninth place.

Minnesota Twins made it 12 victories in their last 15 games with a 9-5 win over Washington Senators; Cleveland Indians beat Detroit Tigers 7-6, and the Los Angeles Angels downed Baltimore Orioles 4-3, in other A.L. games.

In the National League, Milwaukee defeated Los Angeles, 5-2; Philadelphia topped Chicago 6-0, New York nipped Pittsburgh 2-1, Cincinnati downed San Francisco 4-2 and Houston beat St. Louis 5-2.

Clay Ponders Bid To Meet Chuvalo

TORONTO (CP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay is considering an offer guaranteeing him $750,000 to fight Toronto's George Chuvalo for the title here Sunday, Sept. 5, in an afternoon bout at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium.

The offer was made Friday by the Canadian Boxing International Association, a group of Toronto promoters, in a telegram to Bill Faversham of Louisville, Ky.

Eversham managed Clay until suffering a heart attack several months ago, but still is a member of the syndicate backing the champion.

The Clay group replied Friday it is interested in the offer and will meet Tuesday. An answer is expected by the end of next week.

George Sheppard, manager of former world featherweight champion Willie Pep and a former Toronto resident, sent the telegram to Louisville. Pep is scheduled to appear at a fight card here Sunday sponsored by the Toronto group which made the offer to Clay.

GENTILE TRADED TO ASTROS

Youth Must Be Served

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Jim Gentile, for five years one of the American League's most potent hitters, was traded Friday to Houston Astros of the National League but the powerful Kansas City first baseman was philosophical about it all.

The floundering Athletics, mired in 10th place and hurting at the gate, swapped Gentile for $100,000 cash and two players—one a minor league pitcher and the other a yet-to-be-named prospect.

Athletics' general manager Hank Peters told a press conference Gentile was traded to give 23-year-old Ken Harrelson an opportunity to play regularly. And Gentile, who celebrated his 31st birthday Thursday, ruefully acknowledged that as far as baseball is concerned he is an old man and youth must be served.

Gentile said he was not surprised at the trade although he is tied with five other players for the American League home run lead with 10.

Athletics in addition to the cash, got a right-handed pitcher, Jesse Hickman, 26, now playing at Oklahoma City in the Coast League.

Yanks Jump To 2-0 Lead In Cup Play

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (CP)—Two American newcomers to Davis Cup competition easily defeated two Canadian veterans in men's singles matches Friday as the United States jumped into a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five American zone semifinals.

Gene Scott defeated Harry Fauquier of Toronto 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 in the opening match and then Arthur Ashe, No. 3 U.S. player, downed Keith Carpenter of Montreal 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

Scott and Ashe are seasoned tournament players but lacked Davis Cup experience. They were named to the opening singles matches because Dennis Ralston has been temporarily suspended from the team for disciplinary reasons and Chuck McKinley has decided to confine himself to the doubles.

Ralston and McKinley recently have represented the U.S. in the singles.

DIFFERENCES SETTLED

Fauquier, 22, a Vancouver native, is taking part in his third Davis Cup tournament. He played on the Canadian team in 1962 and 1963 but toured U.S. clay and grass court circuits last year after a difference of opinion with Canadian Lawn Tennis Association officials about temperament on the courts.

Carpenter, 23, a Birmingham, England, native, is on the Canadian Davis cup team for the fourth time although he is playing in Cup competition for only the third time.

The series winds up Sunday with two singles matches.

NO TROUBLE

In the afternoon's first match Scott took the first two sets without difficulty.

Scott took a 3-2 lead in the first set when he broke the 140-pound, five foot, 7½-inch Canadian's service twice, but on two occasions failed to hold his own. The turning point came in the eighth game when a passing backhand broke Fauquier's serve, giving Scott a 5-3 lead.

The United States' fifth-ranked player won the first four games of the second set when Fauquier double-faulted four times at crucial points. Scott held his serve from there on to win 6-2.

MAY TEST YOUTH

The two exchanged games in the third set until the Canadian broke Scott's service when he put a forehand volley into the net.

Fauquier was hitting the ball with more authority as they split the first eight games of the fourth set. Scott pulled out the victory with a service break on a Fauquier error in the ninth game and an excellent cross-court volley to close out the 10th.

Canadian team officials may decide, if nothing is at stake by the time the second pair of singles matches come around, to use one or both of the 18-year-olds on their team—Robert Puddicombe and Robert Bardsley, both of Vancouver.

RANGERS TRADE

Seals After Millar

The trade winds are stirring, and don't be too surprised if the name of Al Millar happens to be caught in the breezes at the pro hockey meetings in Montreal next week.

Millar, goaltender with the Victoria Maple Leafs, may wind up wearing San Francisco Seal colors during the next Western Hockey League campaign.

Most "interested" in the "Scooper" is Seals' manager Bud Poile.

Victoria manager Buck Houle wouldn't comment on the rumor but at the same time he admits "we're always looking for a way to better our position. If we get what we feel will be a better goalie, naturally we'll let Millar go."

Poile's chances of acquiring Millar depend on how the goalies are spaced around the Toronto Maple Leaf farm system following next week's draft meeting.

Houle, Vancouver's Max McNab, league president Al Leader and other WHL nabobs head for Montreal this weekend.

Baseball Draft Would Eliminate Costly Bonus System

By LEO H. PETERSEN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league club owners, tired of wasting millions of dollars in bonus money on untried youngsters, have devised a new and what they hope will be a cheap way to lure new talent into baseball.

It's a free agent draft, which the club owners claim was designed to give the poorer clubs the same opportunity of signing a potential major league player as the rich clubs. They also claim, with tongue-in-cheek, that money was only a secondary consideration.

Before the free agent draft was devised, each of the 20 major league teams had to bid against each other for the services of a college, high school or sandlot player who showed enough promise to warrant a major league trial.

The bidding for these players became intense and expensive, bonuses of a hundred thousand dollars or more became commonplace with the richer clubs winding up with the most talent.

Besides costing money, this free bidding system created a lot of ill will and just wasn't in keeping with the tight-fisted fiscal policies of most club owners.

Only one of about six of these high-priced bonus players ever became major leaguers and the established stars, who had to battle tooth and nail for salary increases, didn't relish those high bonuses because they figured it was taking money out of their pockets.

Although realizing it could result in the termination of baseball's anti-trust exemption, major league officials decided to do something about it.

As a result, on Tuesday the representatives of the major league teams will meet in New York to select the players they hope will be the baseball stars of tomorrow. It will be at least a two-day affair for Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick disclosed that the New York Yankees have 600 players on their list of possible draftees.

The free agent draft will work this way:

Each major league club, with the teams finishing lowest in the standings last season getting the first choices, will select one player from the list of youngsters they have scouted or have heard about. In efffect, that player, whether he likes it or not, becomes the exclusive property of the club which drafted him.

If the player does not like the terms offered him, his only alternative is to sit on the sidelines for six months. After that, he goes back into the "pool" and can be selected by a different club. The chances are slim that the second club would offer the player more money than the original club.

After the majors get through drafting, the minor league teams will make their selections. The clubs in the two triple "A" leagues—the highest classification in the minor leagues—will be permitted to select two players each. Then the teams in the four double "A" leagues will be allowed to draft four players each. The clubs in the single "A" minors—there are eight class "A" leagues—can draft any number of players they wish. As in the case of the major leagues, the players drafted by the minors must sign with that club or wait until six months to be drafted by a different team.

Actually, all players drafted by the minor leagues will be under the control of the major league teams, for they own, either directly or indirectly, practically every minor league team.

It is the fervent hope of major league club owners that the draft will do away with the high bonuses of the past.

There are no guidelines on how much money a club can offer a player it drafts, but there's little doubt that those juicy bonuses are out.

How expensive the old system of signing youngsters to bonus contracts could be is revealed in the 1964 financial statement of the Baltimore Orioles. Baltimore is one of three publicly-held firms in major league baseball and must file annual financial statements with the Securities and Exchange Commission. (The others are the Milwaukee Braves, who will move to Atlanta next season, and the San Francisco Giants.)

The Baltimore statement showed that the Orioles had pledged $800,000 in bonus money and $920,000 in scholarships for promising talent. The scholarship money went to promising high school players so they could go to college.

There is no way to estimate how much money this new draft may save baseball, but one club owner guessed that the amount of bonus money will be cut at least 75 per cent. If that is the case, it would mean a saving of $600,000 for Baltimore.

It looks like baseball has plugged a big leak in its financial dike.

Atlanta Choicest Plum In Expansion Orchard

NEW YORK (CP)—Five cities appeared to have the inside track as the National and the American Football Leagues prepared to battle over expansion.

Eighteen cities, among them Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, have been mentioned in expansion plans by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle and his AFL counterpart, Joe Foss.

But Houston, with its celebrated domed stadium, and Atlanta, with a new $18,000,000 park, were reported Friday as the NFL's prime objectives with Boston also a serious possibility.

The AFL, meanwhile, has its eye on Philadelphia, Chicago and Atlanta.

Foss acknowledged that his league will probably take concrete action at a directors' meeting next Monday and Tuesday in New Jersey.

"To say it will be Philadelphia and Atlanta is guesswork," he said. "They are two fine cities and we'd like to have them, but we have 50 or more applications."

Other AFL prospects besides Chicago include Miami, New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Vancouver, Cleveland, and Detroit.

TORONTO A POSSIBILITY

Cities considered for NFL franchises include Montreal, Toronto, Boston, Cincinnati, Houston, Memphis, Phoenix, Seattle, Portland, Miami, Atlanta and New Orleans.

Both leagues are considering New Orleans, Atlanta and Miami. In addition, the NFL already has franchises in six of the nine cities mentioned by the AFL — Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Detroit and Cleveland.

The real battle could develop in Atlanta. The southern city has been after an AFL franchise for some time and is apparently miffed with the NFL for passing it by in favor of St. Louis when the Cardinals were moved from Chicago.

Efforts to have AFL teams in San Diego and Denver moved to Atlanta have failed, but the new stadium, sure-fire attendance and a big television audience in the South make the city a plum for both leagues.

SIGNS NBC CONTRACT

The AFL, currently composed of New York, Boston, Buffalo, Kansas City, Houston, Denver, San Diego and Oakland, has signed a five-year, $36,000,000 television contract with NBC.

The NFL's two-year contract with CBS, at $14,100,000, expires after this season.

Rozelle's expansion plans call for the NFL to be split into two eight-team conferences each with two four-team divisions.

"I think what they're really hoping to do is sell separate TV contracts for both conferences," Foss said. "They may try to double their TV money."

A domed stadium figures in franchise. Toronto businessman Lawrence Shankman said Friday he will build a 40,000-seat dome costing $21,000,000 to gain Toronto's designs on an NFL a team.

Skating Rules Will Remain Controversial

VIENNA (AP) — Figure skating's controversial judging rules will remain controversial as a result of disagreement at a congress of the International Skating Union Friday.

The figure skating commission of the 22-nation body split over proposals to re-evaluate free skating in championships by awarding it the same number of points as compulsory skating.

Under current rules, compulsory skating is valued higher—60 points to 40—by the jury than free skating despite the fact that the latter is the real eye-catcher in international competitions.

Half of the ISU delegates wanted a new ratio of 50-50 and the other half favored the old rules.

SOCCER UPSET AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK (UPI)—A newly-formed team of German immigrants, whipped West Ham United of England, 2-1, in a soccer upset here Friday night.

Hot Putter Puts Boros Into Lead

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) Julius Boros continued his mastery of the rugged Warwick Hills Country Club course Friday as he took a two-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the $100,000 Buick Open golf tournament.

Boros, flirting with trouble most of the way, came up with a two-under-par 70 to go with his opening day 69 for a 139 total.

The 45-year-old veteran picked up four birdies and went one over par twice during his round in which he had six one-putt greens and a total of 29 putts.

The field of 144 was cut to 70 for the final two rounds today and Sunday.

Steve Spray, who held the first-round lead with a 68, settled for 141 after a 73 Friday and a seven-way tie for second with such notables as defending champion Tony Lema, Jack Nicklaus, Doug Sanders, Bert Weaver, Johnny Pott and Gary Player.

Player turned in one of the day's best rounds—a 68—despite a three-putt green on the 18th.

The three Canadians were eliminated from further competition when they failed to post scores of 150 or lower.

George Knudson of Toronto and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., both had two-round scores of 151. Knudson shot a 73 Friday and Panasiuk a 76.

Al Johnston of Montreal shot an 83 Friday and bowed out with a two-round total of 164.

Elston Howard Back on Roster

NEW YORK (AP) — Catcher Elston Howard was taken off the disabled list by New York Yankees Friday.

Howard, the American League's most valuable player for 1963 and a .313 hitter last year, was placed on the disabled list May 3.

Long Look the Best In English Classic

EPSOM, England (Reuters) — The American-owned filly Long Look won the 187th running of The Oaks at Epsom Downs Friday.

Winning The Oaks, England's top race for fillies, was worth about £30,000 ($90,000) to Long Look's owner, Jimmy Cox Brady of the New York Jockey Club.

Mabel, an English horse, was second and the English filly Ruby's Princess third.

Long look started at odds of 100 to 7; Mabel at 13 to 2 and Ruby's Princess at 33 to 1.

Long Look was bred in the United States by Ribot out of Santorin. Although owned and bred by an American, it was rated an Irish entry because it was trained in Ireland by Vincent O'Brien.

The three-year-old filly was ridden by Australian jockey Jack Purtell.

The American horse won by a length and a half. Three-quarters of a length separated the second and third - place finishers.

TWO-HIT TRIUMPH

Southpaw Lifts Sooke Near Top

Southpaw Glen Bullen was the big lumberman Friday night at Heywood Avenue Park and Sooke Forest Products are only half a game from first place in the Senior Men's Softball League.

Pitcher Bullen chopped down Victoria Luckies on two hits while the Forest crew was making three hits do the job for a 4-0 triumph.

Bullen struck out 14 batters, including five in a row, and walked six. He also slashed a run-scoring single in the opening inning after Tim Goudie's sacrifice fly had given Sooke its first tally.

JACKSON TOO LATE

Two more runs arrived in the fifth on Ron Sullivan's double and one of the three errors Luckies committed during the game.

Things might have been different if Barry Jackson had started on the mound for Luckies. Jackson came on for Bob Haldane in the fifth and no-hitted Sooke the rest of the way, striking out six men in the two frames he worked.

First place will be at stake Sunday when Sooke meets pace-setting McLarens in the second of three games scheduled at the Heywood diamond.

Minnesota Sends Allen to Denver

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota twins put second baseman Bernie Allen back on the active list Friday and immediately optioned him to Denver of the Pacific Coast League to play himself into shape.

Allen underwent knee surgery last October, but the knee did not heal as expected this spring. He had been on the inactive list since the season opened.

University School Keeps Track Title

They are still growing them quick and strong at University School.

For the second successive season, the track team from the boys' school, has gone through an undefeated campaign.

Winner of six successive meets last year, the University squad this season had defeated Oak Bay, Victoria High, Esquimalt and Claremont in dual meets.

Those efforts served as warm-ups for the University School's biggest test—the championship meet at Vancouver for B.C. independent schools. The Mount Tolmie lads retained their title in that one by defeating squads from Shawnigan Lake, Brentwood College and Vancouver St. George's.

They have one more meet on the list. Next Thursday at Duncan a combined University School-Oak Bay High team meets a combined Shawnigan Lake-Cowichan High squad.

Among outstanding efforts by University School athletes this season were:

Russ Fish, 15.7 seconds for the 120-yards high hurdles and 51.4 seconds for the 440 yards; Neil Fraser, 10 seconds for the 100-yard dash; Chuck Holm, 21 feet, four inches in the broad jump; Tony Zedick, 49 feet, two and three-quarter inches for the shut put.

Two Share Silver

Edna Hay and Camille Passmore shared silver division laurels Thursday in a women's par competition at Royal Colwood Golf Club.

Eileen Ewing won the bronze division and Hattie Peters topped "C" division swingers.

HOMES and GARDENS

Split-Level Houses Now on Increase

An increasing number of sloping lots with rough terrain now are being used as home sites.

As the number of available level lots decreased, builders found they could terrace rougher land, design split levels, or build houses with entrances on two levels.

Terrace steps surfaced with a durable material such as ceramic tile are used to held the soil as well as for their decorative effects.

WHAT LAWN FOOD FILLS THE MENU FOR YOUR LAWN?

The one that gives the results you want! One with quick-action plus slow-release—feeding controlled-release nitrogen in a formulation balanced for lawn grasses. A lawn food with a concentrated formula on a lightweight carrier for easy handling and application . . . a compact product that gives large area coverage.

JUST TAKE YOUR PICK OF THESE TWO FORMULATIONS

Apply in early spring.

Apply when weeds are growing.

ONE A STRAIGHT FERTILIZER: (LAWN GREEN)

THE OTHER A FERTILIZER-WEED KILLER: (WEED-'N-FEED)

LAWN GREEN—20-10-5 fertilizer. For best results feed your lawn first thing in spring while grass is "Nitrogen-starved". Thickens up turf remarkably. (For rejuvenating a really impoverished lawn try two applications in the spring). Controlled release—one application feeds for 1-2 months or longer. 22 lb. bag covers 5,000 sq. ft.

WEED-'N-FEED—The same remarkable 20-10-5 fertilizer as Lawn Green but containing a weed killer to remove those dandelions and plantains. Apply with a lawn fertilizer spreader when weeds are actively growing. Weeds as it feeds!

Applied as a liquid spray, Gardal leaves no visible powder or dust deposits. Its systemic insecticide and systemic fungicide go right inside the plant. The systemic insecticide distributes itself throughout the entire plant, protecting tender new growth from insect damage for up to two weeks after application. Systemics cannot be washed off by rain, since they are within the plant.

TRY BEING DIFFERENT

Little Things Mean a Lot

By PAULINE GRAVES

Are you looking for ideas to spark up your home?

Are you tired of the same painted walls and wallpaper patterns?

Why don't you dare to be different and try new ideas.

You can do a lot with molding, for example.

Paint it a light color and put it on dark walls, as was done in this house. Or try the reverse and put dark molding on light walls.

In this instance, the light colored molding gives a lot of interest to the space above and below the bookshelves, making the wall more important than if the space were blank.

The idea certainly isn't restricted to living rooms either, but can be used to dress up kitchens and bathrooms.

You can find all types of molding in your local lumber yard.

In fact you can change the scheme of your room with your choice of design, for some are frankly French Provincial, others hint at Spanish or Italian and the more severe lines are for contemporary rooms.

If you are bored with the plainness of your kitchen, paint the cabinets French blue, outline door panels with white molding, add French Provincial brass hardware and you will have a kitchen with old world charm, especially if you place some copper or brass pots here and there.

Another idea from this handsome corner is the combination of wallpaper and plain walls.

The pattern goes best on a wall with no architectual interest and the painted surfaces surrounding it seem almost like a frame.

Remodelling Can Be Rewarding

Remodeling a home can be a rewarding experience for a home-owner—if he gets a good job at a fair price.

This can be assured by following some tested rules.

A remodelling contractor should be chosen with care. Check on the company doing the work.

Ask friends if they know of a good contractor or check with the local Better Business Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

If you decide to ask for bids, get at least a total of three bids for your job, specifying what is wanted and spelling out exactly what materials are needed.

A bid should cover all materials, accessories and labor.

Finally, never make a deal without putting it in writing and if you ask the contractor to make changes while work is in progress, ask him to put the costs for the changes in writing, too.

It's also wise to have a lawyer check a written contract to insure protection.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Finish planting the bedding annuals, completing the scheme decided on in early spring.

New plants in rock gardens, rock walls, and in the borders will need spraying with water during sunny and windy days until they are well established.

Tulips may be lifted for storing until fall if leaves are beginning to wilt or turn yellow. After a few days, clean and hang in nylon stockings in an airy, shaded place for summer.

As bedding plants get well settled in, alternate plants may have centre growth removed to induce bushiness.

The kinds which are improved by this treatment are schizanthus, clarkia, snaps, godetia, annual chrysanthemum, scabious, salpiglossis and cosmos.

Prune spring blooming shrubs, by cutting back the branches which have bloomed.

Forsythia, the spring spiraeas, Kerria, and the heathers just gone out of flower.

Remove all suckers from base of fruit trees. They will be growing from the rootstock, and are useless for fruiting.

Put out plants of sweet corn started indoors in peat pots.

Squash plants, sweet peppers, okra and eggplants may all go out now.

Cultivate carefully between vegetable rows, not disturbing the roots reaching out for moisture.

Expert Always Best

In any major rebuilding and remodelling project about the home, consult the experts.

For example, if you plan to install ceramic tile on walls and floors, see your contractor for help in selecting the type, color and design.

Extensive alterations should not be undertaken without first getting the advice of your architect. For a decorating job with a flair, your interior decorator is the specialist to see.

Tibetans Purged

DARJEELING, India (AP)—China is purging many Tibetan officials who collaborated in the Communist rule of Tibet, unofficial reports reaching northern India said this week. Victims of the purge are accused of secretly supporting the Dalai Lama, the nation's exiled ruler, the reports said.

JACK BEASTALL ADVISES . . . . . . GIVE THEM A SHADY DEAL

When Sun Gets Up—Plants Play It Cool

Too much sunshine in a garden can be as big a problem as too much shade.

This condition exists in new housing developments.

Quite often young shade trees have been planted but it will take several years before sufficient shade is available for outdoor living or for plants which prefer dappled sunshine and shade.

Gardeners who visit commercial plant-growing establishments will have noticed that a shade-house, or lath-house, is a standard feature of the layouts, and these could be copied to advantage by home gardeners.

Jack

The uses of such a structure, and its design, is only limited by the imagination, for it could be the focal point of the garden, the centre of the family's summer outdoor activities and provide a certain amount of shelter for plants during the winter.

A shade-house, or lath-house, is designed to give alternate light and shadow to plants and is constructed of a skeleton framework to which plaster laths or one-by-three strips are attached.

The strips run, preferably, north and south so that the bars of shadow move across the plants as the sun travels from east to west.

Spacing between the strips of wood determines intensity of light within the structure.

For flowering plants this needs to be considerably more than the average gardener imagines.

Ideal conditions for most plants is obtained when a given area receives 20 minutes of sunshine followed by 20 minutes of shadow.

The beginner can learn a lot by driving into the soil a few upright stakes of different widths and marking the movement of the sun and shadow bars across a plant.

A one-and-one spacing, or the space equal to the width of a slat, usually provides too much shade.

A space equal to twice the width of a slat (one-and-two spacing) is much better.

The structure can be designed with three walls (east, south and west) and an extended roof to cover a patio on the north.

It can cover a bed of plants, such as shade-loving foliage plants so important to hobby flower arrangers, also have shelves for house plants. Baskets of begonias or summer annuals may be hung from the roof around the sides or where needed.

A simple temporary structure can be made from snow-fencing draped over a bar supported by two posts to form a tent.

The only drawback is that the slats are horizontal instead of vertical and therefore do not provide the moving bars of light and shade, but it is quite ornamental as a garden feature.

The dappled-shade and free-air movement provided by a lath house is more congenial for both plants and people than the shelter provided by a structure of colored sheet plastic.

One very good design seen, included two walled-in sections (north and south) with a wide-roofed passageway between to form a patio floored with crazy paving for chairs, table and barbecue.

Coupled with careful positioning of ground plants under the wall-in sections, climbers on the posts, potted plants on the shelves, and hanging baskets, what could be more inviting on a hot summer afternoon?

SIMPLE SOLUTION IS CHEAPEST

A simple solution to that yen for a new room is a room divider system.

It's not easy and it's not inexpensive to knock down interior walls or put up permanent new ones, but room dividers are something else again.

Room dividers consisting of floor to ceiling pressure poles and screw-on panels make it easy to re-do an interior.

And unlike new, permanent walls, room divider systems can be easily dismantled for yet another interior partitioning attempt.

Nation-Wide Strike Feared on CN Line

TORONTO (CP) — Possibility of a nation-wide strike by 23,000 non-operating Canadian National Railway workers hinges on company-union talks in Montreal Monday.

The talks are being held to consider the walkout by express and freight employees in Ontario protesting disciplinary measures by the railway, specifically a demerit points system against workers who break regulations. The walkout is in its fourth day today.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) advised its locals across Canada Friday to prepare to support the 2,000 men now on strike.

A spokesman said such support could result in walkouts across the country or be limited to general financial assistance for the Ontario members.

Union President William J. Smith and CNR President Donald Gordon are to meet in the Montreal talks.

In Toronto, union officials said that unless the railway gives assurances it will not take reprisals against the strikers, the walkouts will spread across the country.

PROTEST DEMOTION

The strike started Wednesday in Toronto when express workers left their jobs to protest the demotion of a truck driver with five years' standing to the position of porter. By Wednesday night, other Ontario centres joined in support and the CNR had to cut off express shipments in and out of Toronto.

The demerit system is the major grievance. Misdeamors are punished with demerit points graded to the seriousness of the error and the amount of cost involved in rectifying it.

An accumulation of 60 points results in a hearing before a board of review which has the power to suspend an employee. The strike started when the driver collected the maximum points for losing a carton of freight.

A national strike would affect all CNR freight shipments by rail and air in Canada. Air Canada's freight and express service would also be affected because the CNR does the pick-up and delivery for the airline.

It could disrupt passenger service if extended to sleeping and dining car conductors, porters and waiters who are members of the union. Also in the union are employees of railway hotels and ferries.

The Toronto walkout has spread to Hamilton, Brampton, London, Oakville, Ottawa and Brantford.

A wildcat strike by Local 185 in Windsor, Ont., was directed against working conditions there. A union official denied any connection with the Toronto strike.

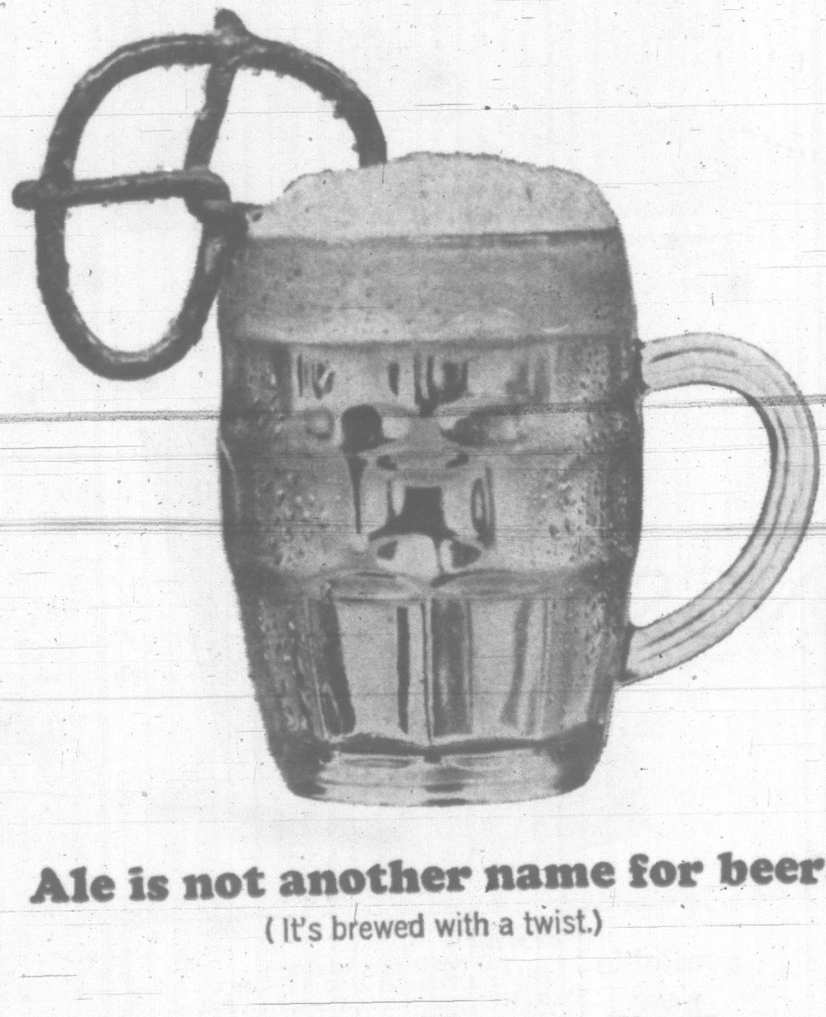
Japanese Cabinet Out

TOKYO (Reuters) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato Thursday swept out all but one of the cabinet ministers he "inherited" when he took office six months ago.

Only Etsusaburo Shiina, 68-year-old foreign minister, retained his post in the list of 17 ministers announced.

Observers believed that Sato, 64, had originally considered replacing Shiina also.

Observers did not expect to see any significant changes in Japanese foreign or domestic policy following Sato's sweeping reshuffle of the administration.



Ale is not another name for beer.

(It's brewed with a twist.)

We brew Ale that way on purpose. We use different ingredients. A different recipe. For a very different flavour. Would we like you to switch from beer to Ale? Certainly not. (We brew some pretty fine beers, too.) There's room in your fridge for both—and a time for each. Which times are Ale times for you? No one can say for sure. But think of the fun you'll have finding out.

FATHER BITTER AT POLICE

Five Days of Terror For Murdered Girl

CLOVERDALE (CP) — Roy Porterfield of Delta said Friday night his daughter Marlene, 20, lived in terror for five days before she was shot and killed in an ambush.

Mr. Porterfield said police had been told of threats his daughter had received. He said he was bitter no police action had been taken prior to the death.

A man had come to their trailer court home and threatened in the presence of police he would shoot her, he said. The police had told him to leave her alone.

He said she had moved in with friends following a beating suffered at the hands of the man.

The girl was shot in the back with a high-powered rifle as she walked along the street about 100 yards from her friends' house shortly after 7 a.m. Friday. The friends, Mr. and Mrs. Don Nugent, were with her.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Columbian Hospital.

Mr. Nugent said "We were walking . . . Marlene was in the middle.

"When I heard the explosion I thought someone threw a firecracker . . ."

Marlene fell to the pavement on her back.

Police said they found a sniper's nest in the bushes nearby.

A .303 calibre rifle was located in a basement excavation near the scene.

Police, using a tracking dog, arrested a man within an hour of the shooting.

Frederick Mytron Turner, 30, Marlene's brother-in-law, was remanded without plea to June 11 when he appeared before Magistrate H.W. Ellis on a charge of capital murder.

Turner was described as a self-employed truck driver who had been married to Marlene's sister Doris, 27, for 10 years. They have two children.

U.S. VIEW OF CANADIANS IN SURVEY

'WE'RE SLOW AMERICANS RULED BY THE BRITISH'

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — What do Americans really think and know of Canadians?

Some of the answers are contained in a definitive study of United States feelings toward Canada produced by a firm that specializes in motivational research.

The 120-page report is being made available to interested parties, at $25 a copy, by the Ontario department of economics and development, which commissioned the study.

The department was interested mainly in learning how to sell Ontario-manufactured products on the U.S. market. It gave the job to the Institute for Analytical Research, of Peekskill, N.Y.

And how did the Institute find Canadians are regarded by Americans?

First of all, the report says we're looked upon as the "respected strangers."

Secondly, we're thought of as "slow Americans."

And thirdly, the American attitude toward the Canadian is said to be best described as one of fraternity, kinship or affinity.

A significant finding was a surprisingly favorable attitude among knowledgeable northerners in the U.S. towards a merger of Canada and the United States.

IGNORANT OF POLITICS

Yet, the Americans were found to be severely ignorant about Canada's present political state. About 38 per cent of those interviewed felt Canada was not independent but was ruled by Britain.

There was an implied criticism that a country which was so much like the United States lacked the American initiative or strength of character to achieve full independence from Britain as did the U.S.

This alleged lack of aggressiveness among Canadians was an impression found among more than 80 per cent of those interviewed. And so the researchers concluded:

"If one were asked to describe a Canadian in the simplest and most succinct language, it would not be surprising to hear U.S. Americans characterize a Canadian as a 'slow American'."

As for the term "respected strangers," the report has this to say:

In general, we found the feeling of respect and admiration that U.S. Americans have for Canada and its people is based on its great natural resources, its friendliness and devotion to peace, the kinship of a similar tongue, and its record and promise as a military ally.

"However, all this is beclouded by U.S. Americans' widespread ignorance about the crucial facts of Canadian life."

SEEN AS SOLID CITIZENS

Whether or not Americans were ignorant of the way of life in Canada, they had sterling thoughts regarding the solidity of the Canadian citizen.

"Almost without exception our respondents regard Canadians as honest, hard-working, trustworthy people of high moral calibre," the researchers found.

This, however, was not considered altogether good when it came to selling Canadian-made products in the states. The stolid Canadian assets were referred to as "Sunday school qualities."

"Lacking is any strong feeling in the world community, that they have made and are making a mark on world history," the report says.

What was needed to sell Canadian products in the U.S. was to make them more exotic, more foreign, more unique.

Arthur Mayse

On Friday evening, I spaded the bed under our kitchen windows, and the green-thumb half of our partnership completed our spring planting by setting out two flats of salvia.

Then she trickled a pinch of 6-8-6 into little holes behind each plant, watered the commercial fertilizer in with a fine spray, set out earwig tonic, and that was that.

Our gardening was not always thus. I don't mean that we're especially skilful, or never make mistakes. But we are no longer likely to stake and tenderly nurture pigweed, or, as we did when sojourning in Vancouver, plant potatoes in soil that should first have been worked over with a jackhammer.

Our triumph of mis-gardening was achieved in Toronto, however, when it became apparent that our scrofulous front lawn needed an assist that nature refused to furnish.

★ ★ ★

At that time in our marriage, for reasons unclear, I was rated a knowledgeable gardener.

"What that grass needs," I expounded, as we sat in the shade with tall glasses, watching the ants raise yet another hillock, "is fertilizer, and there's no fertilizer like good old manure."

So we checked the Tely classified, and ordered a load of good old manure from a farm out past Malton airport.

It arrived with the first summer heat-wave.

"Where shall I dump it?" the guy asked; and I indicated the edge of the lawn.

"Right there, I guess."

The farmer shrugged. "Well," he said, "it's your grass," and got busy with a fork.

Win came around from the back. She checked as if she had run into an invisible barrier, then fled, to return cautiously after the truck had rattled off down the block.

She asked, "Will it smell like that for long?"

"I don't know," I told her, "but let's hope not."

With spade and rake, I distributed the smoking mound.

Later, through closed windows, we looked out at the reeking carpet. Its range, we estimated, was about 60 feet. This we deduced from the actions of passersby, who at that distance from our property, would either lower their heads and charge past, or cross the street.

"Anyway," I said without much conviction, "it's what the grass needed."

★ ★ ★

Our lawn quit smoking after three days, and we began to hope it would now cast a less startling aura. To help the process, I watered it. Next morning, when the sun hit it, people began crossing the street when they were 50 yards away. Just before noon, a sanitary inspector came calling.

"Look, mister," he said to me in a choked voice, "that stuff isn't exactly desert flowers. You got to get rid of it."

"Where?" I asked him.

"Your problem," he replied, already retreating.

So I buried our mluch deep under the living room windows, where it rotted as it should have done in that rascally farmer's barnyard. Where it wasn't bald, our lawn was an interesting yellow. We laid down new turf. Our neighbors took to inviting us over for coffee again.

Next year we planted salvia under the windows, and Jack's magic beanstalk didn't grow faster. Admittedly, it was a tall variety. But, so help me, before the summer was over, that scarlet flood rose level with our window-ledges.

Strollers who frequently paused to admire and envy would ask how we achieved such growth . . . a question for which we had a ready answer:

"There's nothing," we told them blandly, "like good old manure!"

Man Pleads Guilty After Woman Hit

A motorist who hit an 86-year-old woman in a crosswalk on Douglas Street Friday night pleaded guilty today to dangerous driving.

Gordon Kipp of Jordan River was remanded to next Thursday for sentence and released in his own recognizance.

Sergeant Bob Peterson said that Kipp knocked down Mrs. A. F. Cunningham, 661 McKenzie, as she crossed Douglas in a crosswalk at McKenzie shortly after 7:30 Friday night.

Mrs. Cunningham was in the middle of the road when she was hit, he said. The woman is reported in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Sgt. Peterson said Kipp admitted he saw the flashing amber light that marks the crosswalk. He told police he was travelling about 40 mph in the 30-zone.

A breath test showed Kipp had a blood alcohol content of .14 per cent.

Magistrate William Ostler remanded Kipp for sentence after he asked to be allowed to keep his licence for use at work.

PSYCHOLOGIST'S METHOD

Number Tests Probe Brain Ills

By LESLIE MILLIN

An Indiana psychologist said today psychological testing can tell a brain surgeon "a tremendous amount" about a patient before any surgery is performed.

Ralph Reitan, of Indiana University Medical Centre, read a paper on Diagnosis Techniques in Neuropsychology to a meeting of the Canadian Psychological Association.

He said in an interview tests have been developed by himself and others that tell a brain surgeon the precise location, type and extent of damage.

"We have to be careful in discussing this," he said, "because it is a very complex matter. It's not a case where one simple test gives you one simple positive answer."

A simple test might measure a patient's ability to reason with abstract ideas — his handling of mathematical concepts, for instance.

Marked impairment of this ability, as shown by his answers, would indicate possible brain damage in the front part of the brain.

Dr. Reitan said location and type of brain damage can be inferred on the basis of ability changes.

One example of this is a patient with severe damage to the part of his brain containing the speech centre.

Doctors have known for centuries that an injury to the left side of the head often leaves the victim unable to speak.

He said his studies have also shown the brain can make enormous spontaneous efforts to recover from damage.

One of his patients had her intelligence virtually cut in half when one of the major blood vessels to the brain collapsed.

In three months, she had recovered to the point of having about normal intelligence—even though surgeons discovered the blood vessel was still useless.

"Other blood vessels took over the work. It was a spontaneous recovery, but not quite complete. She had been a bright woman before the artery failed," he said.

GOVERNMENT VETO PROTESTED

'Petition Rejection Not Fair, Legal'

"One year's hard work down the drain."

That's the way the organizer of a petition to merge the View Royal panhandle with Esquimalt described rejection of the petition by the provincial government.

Mrs. W. P. Rankin, 1440 Craigflower, said today she can't see where it is legal to break a valid petition.

"We are not going to take this sitting down," she said.

"It is not fair, right or legal that our petition be thrown out."

The petition got 62 per cent approval from panhandle residents to join Esquimalt.

Property owners in the municipality approved by 72 per cent the proposal to merge with the panhandle.

But Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said this week Esquimalt and View Royal must start afresh for a merger.

He said he was following a recommendation by a provincial commission studying the merger scheme.

"I don't think this government, Campbell or anyone else should be able to do this," said Mrs. Rankin.

She said if residents of View Royal generally want to participate with the panhandle section in fresh talks, "we'll go along with them."

But if they don't, then panhandle residents will have to start all over again.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said the petition now is a dead issue, adding it "is too bad it has been thrown to one side."

Mrs. Rankin said she is fed up with septic tanks, no street lights and sidewalks.

There were "a lot" of improvements panhandle residents would be entitled to if they merged with Esquimalt.

'People Can't All Live In High-Rises'

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Emotion overpowers reason when sewage disposal is debated, Saanich councillor Leslie Passmore said today.

Any unbiased person would see that the Northridge treatment plant is the least undesirable method of disposal for Saanich and the entire district, he said.

"I would venture to say not 10 per cent of the people objecting have seen a treatment plant," he said.

It was possible to halt all housing in unsewered areas, he said, but this is unrealistic.

"Where are the people going to go? We can't stop people getting married and wanting houses. They can't all live in high-rise apartments at $125 a month. It's just not reasonable."

The latest outcry about sewage disposal came when the Pollution Control Board approved extension of the Northridge plant to discharge a further 35,000 gallons a day into Colquitz Creek which flows into the Gorge.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said Saanich is giving precedence to a subdivision over the health and welfare of the Gorge district.

SEWAGE PLANT

But Mr. Passmore said Saanich backed the sewage plant's extension because it was felt in the best interests of everyone.

Because there is not enough room for everyone in sewered areas of Greater Victoria, some people must live in unsewered places.

When this happens, there is a choice: Septic tanks or treatment plants.

"And all of us know what septic tank effluent does for the district," he said.

When enough persons moved into an unsewered area they could afford to pay for a regular sewer pipeline.

But a pipeline bylaw won't be passed in a sparsely-populated area because few could afford the cost.

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Long-Time Alderman, School Trustee Dies

Francis Greville Mulliner, a genial Irish gentleman who became one of the best-known civic leaders in Victoria for more than 30 years, died Friday night.

The retired alderman spent 10 years on council, 10 years as a school trustee, and also spent some time as chairman of the Royal Jubilee Hospital board.

He was one of the driving forces behind the streets program in Victoria West—a district which until that time was the orphan of the civic family.

He was elected to the old Victoria School Board in 1934 and was later school board chairman for three years. He also became president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

A lifelong Conservative, he was treasurer of the federal association here for 20 years.

Mr. Mulliner was born in Dublin in 1881 and spent his boyhood in Liverpool, England. When he was 16 years old both his parents died and he came to Canada.

BAGGAGE AGENT

He began working on a farm near Hamilton, Ont., then moved to Victoria in 1907 as an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He eventually became baggage agent for the B.C. Steamship Service of the CPR, retiring in 1944.

In 1912 he married Jessie Pleasance Case, recently arrived from Norfolk, Va.

They have two daughters, Mrs. Peggy Freethy of Victoria and Mrs. Betty Kearney of Montreal. Mrs. Mulliner is at home on Vancouver Street.

Funeral service will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m. in St. John's Anglican Church with Canon George Biddle officiating. Cremation will follow.

Cost of birth certificate from Alberta was increased April 1 to two dollars a copy. Previous Ask the Times answer quoted one dollar.

C. Saanich Merge Bid Launched

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A move is afoot to unite a part of the unorganized district of North Saanich with Central Saanich municipality.

J. C. Erikson, president of the John Dean Ratepayers' Association, said today a proposal has been made for the amalgamation of the area south of McTavish Road with Central Saanich.

This would leave the remainder of North Saanich with the choice of either becoming a separate municipality or amalgamating with Sidney.

A Dean Park ratepayers' meeting to discuss the proposal will be held at Sandsbury Junior Elementary School on Monday at 8 p.m.

This will be followed by a public meeting at North Saanich Secondary School Wednesday at 8 p.m. to discuss incorporation and other alternatives. All ratepayers' groups have been invited.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will address the meeting.

Mr. Erikson said many residents in the Dean Park area feel it would be more advantageous to join Central Saanich than forming a separate municipality.

AMALGAMATION

"Personally I would prefer amalgamation of the whole of North Saanich rather than a portion of the district," he said. "But the partition proposal has its merits."

Reasons for some people south of McTavish Road wanting to secede from North Saanich are:

- Central Saanich with its Elk Lake waterworks controls the water supply for the whole of the north of the peninsula. Thus their water needs would be taken care of before other areas.
- The municipality is fully equipped with facilities to administer a new area. It has a new hall, an experienced administrative staff and a public works department.
- There is no conflict of interests between Central Saanich and the district immediately north of the municipality.

While Central Saanich Council has taken no part in the discussions for incorporating North Saanich, it is well known that some councillors would prefer taking in the area south of McTavish Road rather than amalgamating the whole area.

J. B. Cumming, president of the North Sidney Ratepayers' Association, who made a special study on making North Saanich a separate municipality, said he would like to see "amalgamation of North Saanich, Sidney and Central Saanich."

"I feel amalgamation of the whole North Saanich peninsula would be the best thing for all," he said. "But the people are not ready for this yet. It may come eventually."

Hospital Board Names Chairman

New chairman of the board of management at St. Joseph's Hospital is Fred E. Norris, office manager of Victoria Press Ltd. and Oak Bay representative on the board.

Elected Thursday, Mr. Norris succeeds retiring chairman Lieut.-Col. W. J. Mosedale, who has served as chairman since February, 1962.

New vice-chairman is William Guild, manager of Radio Station CJVI, who also heads the board's public relations committee.

YOUNG SAILORS today received polishing touches on their four-week nautical instruction sponsored by the Victoria Outboard Club and the Victoria Daily Times. The youngsters pictured in boats supplied by the Oak Bay Marina are some of the 40 between 12 and 16 taught the elementary facts of outboard motor boating. HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS WARNED AT GRADUATION FETE

Do Not Plunge Into 'Smooth Porridge of Society'

Graduating high school students were warned Friday night against drifting into a world of pre-digested values.

Walter D. Young of the faculty of economics and political science at the University of B.C. told the 315-member Oak Bay Senior Secondary School that society regards sex, religion and politics as conversational taboos.

"With these ruled out, what else is there to talk about?"

He told the students to avoid "joining the smooth porridge of society where you do not exercise your ability to examine yourself and the society you live in."

Recognition ceremonies involving 1,000 students were held at Victoria Secondary, Mount View, Esquimalt and Oak Bay. Parties followed at all four schools. No incidents were reported from private, all-night parties which have become a tradition with graduates.

Prof. Young told the Oak Bay students to be prepared to challenge the status quo.

"Despite our leisure, today's man is more controlled than in control. In our mass society we are standardized and homogenized, dominated by government and advertisers," he said.

He criticized the high school curriculum with particular reference to social studies.

"In Social Studies 30 you're not taught the truth about politics. You're told nothing of party politics. Today the truths of politics, business and religion are passed over."

Upswept hairdos and new business suits seemed to add an extra maturity to the Oak Bay students as they filed into the auditorium at the beginning of the evening and took their place on the tiered bleachers.

Conducting the exercises was principal, J. G. Wallace. Other speakers were H. M. Evans, registrar for the department of education, and J. W. Porteous, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Following the introduction of the graduating class by vice-principal, W. D. Oliver and Mrs. R. Gordon, the class valedictory was given by Barry English.

The choir of the graduating class sang two selections with music being played by the school band under the direction of David Dunnet. Rev. C. D. Blencoe gave the invocation and benediction.

When the exercises were over, some of the newly-acquired maturity of the students vanished as they posed for pictures, chatted with their parents and prepared for an evening of fun.

Valedictorians at other schools were Thomas McKeachie at Victoria Secondary, James Forward at Esquimalt and Caroline Bailey at Mount View.

Dean Robert Wallace, dean of administration at the University of Victoria, gave a preview of things to come to the 338 graduates at Victoria Secondary.

Advice from the business world was brought to Mount View graduates by Robert D. Ferguson, manager of the Victoria branch, Montreal Trust.

Herbert Bruch, MLA, was the speaker at Esquimalt Secondary ceremonies.

New Program Updates Canadian Girl Guides

VANCOUVER (CP) — Great changes are taking place in the 250,000-strong Girl Guide movement in Canada in an attempt to keep up with the youngsters.

"Girls are maturing more quickly nowadays and there has been an upsurge of the youth population," said Mrs. W. A. H. Filer of Ancaster, Ont., national program commissioner responsible for all tests and badges across Canada.

Here to attend the annual meeting of the Canadian council, Girl Guides of Canada, Mrs. Filer said "we keep hearing that half the population of Canada is under 21.

"In order to keep in step with the changing pace of education and keep up with the young people, we decided to set the girls into the programs earlier."

New age groupings have been set up for Brownies, Guides and Rangers, new handbooks for girls have been written and the waiting period before earning badges has been eliminated.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Doubting Thomas!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I sure get a kick out of your column. I don't suppose you really write all of it yourself. You probably have a staff of writers. And that picture of you is a lulu! How old is it? I'll bet you're really a fat old maid taking out her frustrations by telling other people how to run their lives. You get a letter with just one side of the story and you hand out advice like you knew all the answers. I'm a 31-year-old bachelor. And if that's your picture, and it's not 20 years old, I might even ask you to marry me. (How would you like to live in Toronto?)

WOODY.

DEAR WOODY: I don't have any writers, so I'll take all the credit for what is printed here. (And all the blame, too.) I don't give advice, I express an opinion. To give advice one must know both sides, but I do the best I can with the facts I have, and if I am able to help, I'm happy. The picture is mine, and it's comparatively recent. Toronto would be fine with me, but I'm 15 years older than you, and very much married, so I won't hold you to your offer.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 years old and just had the most bewildering proposal of marriage. He's a young man I've known a long time, but I never dreamed he was thinking of me as "wife material." He said he would marry me if I got my nose fixed. Now, I do have a big nose, but I accepted it as part of me, and it goes with my face, so I never considered getting it fixed. Frankly, I don't think it would make that much difference. It's not as though my nose stands between me and my being a perfect beauty. This young man would make a good husband, but I wonder if I should take his proposal under consideration.

MISS S.

DEAR MISS S.: If your nose has never bothered you and you've never considered getting it "fixed," tell the young man that your nose goes where you go. And if he doesn't want you, nose and all, heaven knows he's not for you.

DEAR ABBY: Can you answer a few very simple questions for me? I am the mother of four children and this is very important to me. What is the correct definition of "common-law marriage"? Where is it recognized? What does "community property" mean? Is that the same all over? Exactly what is the legal definition of "bigamy"? And finally, what does "extradite" mean? I thank you.

GETTING NERVOUS.

DEAR GETTING: You don't need a dictionary—you need a lawyer. I suggest you get one immediately.. It's his business to keep a confidence, so don't be afraid to tell him the truth.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Poor Dad," whose college freshman son borrows his neckties, to count his blessings. When sonny gets to his second year, he'll probably do his best to sever those "family ties" you advised him to strengthen. My son, now a sophomore, wears a beard, seldom gets a haircut, dresses in jeans, sweaters and boots. And as a point of honor —NEVER wears a tie. The day he borrows his Dad's ties will be the day we'll all sigh, "Thank heavens he's back to normal!"

BEATNIK'S MOM.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NO SUCKER": Better allow yourself something for "courting." Most girls want to marry a man who saves money, but very few care to go out with him.

YWCA Urges Income Tax Relief

Ask Help for Working Mothers

SASKATOON (CP)—The Young Women's Christian Association of Canada Wednesday urged the federal government to provide income tax relief for working women who must provide day care for children, aged or other dependents.

The relief was urged as part of a five-section resolution on continuing education during a session of the YWCA of Canada national convention.

Another section asked the YWCA at national and local levels to "clearly put forward to the government and the public the sound reasons for providing federal and provincial grants for other than full-time students at universities."

This, the resolution said, would offer financial encouragement to the universities to enroll part-time students in day time as well as in evening degree-granting courses.

One section resolved that YWCAs place greater emphasis on service related to continuing education for women by experimenting with new methods of teaching adults in informal settings.

The resolution urged that the YWCA explore vocational counselling needs of girls and women and the resources available to them; exert influence toward the establishment of adequate vocational counselling services; and support the establishment of comprehensive training facilities on a professional level for vocational counsellors.

Delegates also approved a section asking local YWCAs to take responsibility for interpreting to the public the needs for supportive services for working women with family responsibilities and the need for recognized status for homemaking services.

Local associations, the resolution said, should explore with other groups ways in which women may be recruited, selected, counselled and trained for employment in day care and homemaker services.

The lengthy resolution was one of six on education and the family placed before the delegates Wednesday afternoon. One was tabled for rewording by the resolutions committee. The other failed to reach the floor before adjournment.

The resolutions preamble said it had been demonstrated there is a need for education of women for the multiple roles which they carry in today's society and that women with family responsibilities comprise an increasingly large part of Canada's labor force.

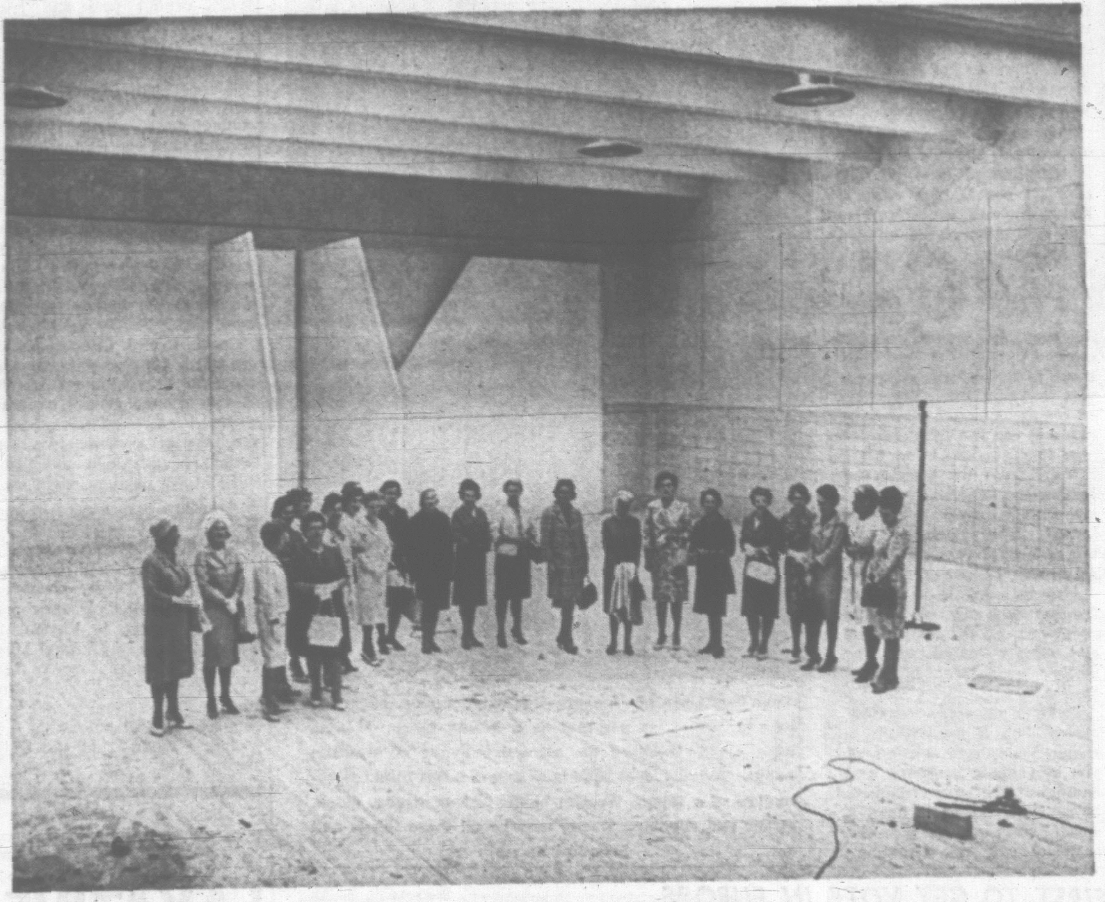
Enthusiastic over their first glimpse of the beautiful McKinnon pool, named after well-known Victoria athletic and swimming coach Archie McKinnon, are these seven mothers of keen future and former 'Y' swimmers, from left, Mrs. E. Warburton, Mrs. N. A. McDiarmid, Mrs. A. B. Macfarlane, Mrs. R. C. Ellis, Mrs. W. C. Mearns, Mrs. J. S. Wilson and Mrs. P. C. Meredith. The 25-metre pool is tiled in pale blue and is truly a marvelous training ground for Victoria's future Olympic hopes, besides being an added recreational facility to the city's growing community.

High on the roof of the new YM-YWCA building is the outdoor 100-yard running track. It is here that young enthusiasts will be able to train with confidence. The 17-lap track is surfaced in an asphalt composition material to provide an all-weather surface which may be run on in track spikes with no damage. Mrs. George Wheaton, left, a supporter of YM-YWCA activities for many years, is pictured with two members of the Women's Auxiliary to the YM-YWCA, Mrs. R. J. Champion and Mrs. G. E. Burrell, at the track site which looks out over the city.

New YM-YWCA

The Cross in walnut finish is the focal point of the tiny inter-denominational chapel, in the new building. The matching walnut-finished wall is a superb contrast to the sky blue tone used throughout the room. Viewing the chapel for the first time are auxiliary members, left to right, Mrs. G. Walton and Mrs. H. R. Halls.

Arranged by
JUDY CREIGHTON,
Women's Dept.



Basketball, badminton, volley ball and many other sports activities will take place in the spacious gymnasium which measures 56 feet wide by 82 feet long. As many as 800 youth members can be accommodated in the gymnasium in the many activities offered by the YM-YWCA. Here, members of the Women's Auxiliary admire the bright room. Though still under construction, it is hoped that the new building with its many facilities will be open for use at the end of June.

Basking in the sunlight on the unique patio court in the centre of the building is Mrs. A. H. Sheard, first president of the amalgamated Victoria YM-YWCA, initiated four years ago. Red brick walls line the court and pictured behind Mrs. Sheard is the YM-YWCA crest in brick and the space where the cornerstone will be laid. Two square pools enhance the patio court where residents and visitors will be able to relax on benches of teakwood.

A very modern and brightly decorated lounge will greet women residents on the second floor of the dormitory section in the new building. Decorated in a canary yellow tone with walnut contrast, the lounge has a separate kitchenette where residents can make light snacks. Members of the Women's Auxiliary are presently working around the clock making draperies for the lounge and bedrooms. The dormitories will accommodate 31 residents in single and double rooms. Each bedroom is decorated in pastel colors with one wall in pin-striped wallpaper. Another feature is the built-in bureau drawers and cupboards, allowing more space and comfort. Pictured from left to right with material they are making into drapes are WA members Mrs. H. P. R. Brown, Mrs. H. O. Past and Mrs. J. M. Drummond.

Food has not been neglected in the building plan as can be seen in this picture of the cafeteria still under construction. Floor-to-ceiling windows add light to the attractive room and circular snack bars give an atmosphere of companionship. Due to the present absence of stools, four members of the auxiliary sportingly agreed to being 'shot' on one of the bars. They are, from left, Mrs. D. T. Burr, Mrs. H. C. Johnston, Mrs. A. D. Avery and Mrs. H. F. Hallatt. The building is spacious, well lit and houses clubrooms, an all-purpose activity hall, administration offices, a large main lounge decorated with Indian masks, and modernistic teak furniture. There are separate shower and locker rooms, a youth activity lounge and a health club. In fact, the new 'Y' building is a tremendous addition to the community and all those who have participated in the building campaign can be proud of the finished product.

These Rival Summer Itself for Beauty

By Penny Saver

One of my neighbors from down the block has just returned from a month-long trip to Hawaii. Lucky girl! She has the most beautiful tan—a warm, golden brown coating to her skin. She and the rest of the girls in the neighborhood "coffee-klatch" were sitting in my kitchen yesterday and discussing this wonderful vacation.

"One thing I discovered, as soon as I returned," she said, "is that my old lipstick just doesn't go with the rest of me—it's too red and seems to clash with the sun-tan."

Well, I have the answer to her problem with a whole new line of lipstick and powder duos—designed with summer and suntans in mind. These make-up miracles are on sale at $2.25 and are they beautiful! I suggested to my friend that she try one shade I discovered which echoes all the warm, golden tints of her skin—with a subtle shading of pink as a highlight.

The delightful shades of lipstick are available for all complexion tones—alabaster white to brown—and they capture the golden, copper and beige tones created especially for summer.

The powder is a perfect match for the lipstick it accompanies. Specially formulated, it not only takes the shine from noses, it also carefully conceals blemishes and gives the face a light covering for an even tone.

Another item I discovered is also wonderful for summer—a new type of light fragrance. This particular perfume has a subtle delicate scent, reminiscent of a bouquet of exotic blossoms from far-away places.

Available in everything from bath oil to spray cologne, you can buy the products for prices ranging from $1.75 to $3.50. All are attractively packaged in containers of warm sandy yellow accented with coral bands. Even the packaging is summery.

For the young miss who likes to be "just like Mommy," here's a suggestion. I noticed, selling at $1.50, an attractively packaged little gift set of bubble bath and light scent made especially for the younger set. This has a very light young fragrance and is perfect for a birthday or special occasion gift.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Cleanliness Is Essential When Treating Blemishes

Pimples are a real handicap to many. They are not only detrimental to a most attractive appearance, but may also affect the personality because of the self-consciousness they sometimes cause. Physical defects should not do this, but they often do.

Lowman

Many a pimple has turned into a real problem because the victim picked at the face. Never touch a pimple with your hands. You should take even one pimple seriously because you can easily spread the infection.

Pimples are often the result of blackheads which have been picked at and squeezed and become infected. Sometimes infections in the body are responsible for acne. Diseased teeth or tonsils or sinuses are examples. Some people react badly to certain foods. Chocolate and highly seasoned foods are often offenders. The person who has acne should have a well-balanced diet, but simple foods and not all the fancy trimmings.

If you have blackheads, wash your face with soap and water several times a day to remove the excess oil. If you wish to remove a blackhead steam your face first by holding the head over a bowl of hot water. Cover the head with a towel to keep the steam in. Use one of the little gadgets especially designed for removing these enemies. First disinfect the instrument and also the skin surface with alcohol. If you are going to use your fingers to squeeze the blackhead out, place sterile gauze under your fingers. Afterwards apply more alcohol.

Cleanliness is most important. Be sure that your powder puffs and washcloths are meticulously clean every time you use them.

Frozen Raw Trout Becomes Gourmet Dish In North

CAMBRIDGE BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—An appetizer of raw, frozen trout, followed by a main course of caribou ribs and Eskimo ice cream may not be everybody's favorite dinner menu.

But at a recent dinner sponsored by the N.W.T. Residents' Association in Cambridge Bay many of the 100 white and Eskimo diners had second and third helpings.

Purpose of the dinner was to raise money for a community hall and to introduce association members to some foods native to the area 1,000 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Residents in several northern communities helped gather food for the Arctic dinner. Hunters in Coppermine, N.W.T., several hundred miles distant, trapped two caribou. As late as the afternoon of the meal, two Arctic hare were shot and popped into the stewpot.

Association chairman Fred Ross almost caused several diners to lose their smiles of well-being following the feast when he disclosed that Eskimo ice cream was in reality a mixture of cooking oil, snow, sugar and berries.

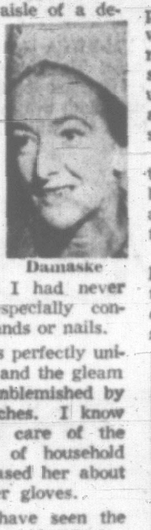
IN STEP WITH STYLE By NONA DAMASKE

True Tale on False Fingernails

Sometimes column inspirations come unexpectedly. Wednesday, I stopped midway down the aisle of a department store to chat with a friend. As we exchanged the usual conversational gambits I could not help noticing how attractive her hands appeared. We have been casual friends for years and I had never before been especially conscious of her hands or nails.



Damaske

Each nail was perfectly uniform in length and the gleam of color was unblemished by nicks or scratches. I know Margaret took care of the usual number of household chores so I teased her about living in rubber gloves.

You should have seen the sly smile as she said "My day is complete. I have put one over on our fashion editor." Margaret was wearing false nails and although I examined them closely I just couldn't tell.

As we were in a store that sells all beauty items she took me over and showed me the colorful display. The sets come in two widths . . . regular and slimline. The overall length is longer than average and you file them to your own specifications. The filing is done from the cuticle end so that the beautifully shaped and finished tip is never disturbed. The package contains 15 nails . . . one extra set in case of loss or damage.

Also included is a tube of fixative and one of fixative remover. All the instructions are clearly stated and the whole procedure is very simple.

There is an unlimited color choice but if you want to change your shade at any time you can apply ordinary nail enamel. The only requisite being that you must have a special remover as the nail material will not accommodate the usual acetone remover.

There are a number of products on the market now which are recommended for nail growth and they help some people. I have been using one for about six months and find my nails are slightly stronger and break less often.

We all know about the gelatine routine and that, too, may be of some help. One thing about gelatine, being pure protein it cannot do any harm.

I have a friend, who through habit and nervousness, continuously picked at the tips of her nails causing them to split and peel away. She tried many things and finally decided to have a salon manicure each week to see if that would help. She is pretty well cured . . . the cost of the manicure and the attractive appearance of the bright polish has made her very careful not to disfigure the professional job.

There are people, however, who never seem to be able to grow attractive nails. This is sometimes due to the type of work they do and sometimes due to the fact that some people just have poor nails. For special occasions a $2.95 false nail kit could be a moral builder to these women.

Your hands can be as expressive as your face, charming as your smile, as personal as a beauty mark. Women have always realized the attraction power of beautiful hands. Today's ideal hand is no longer a soft little marshmallow of a thing. We like hands to look strong, quick, clever and capable. Hands may be all these things and beautiful as well.

FIRST TO GET VOTE IN EUROPE

Dutch Women Play Minor Roles

THE HAGUE — Three generations of queens have ruled the Netherlands and the next sovereign probably will be a queen, too.

Dutch women were among the first in Europe to gain the right to vote—in 1917.

These two facts might lead the foreign observer to expect that Dutch women participate largely in the political life of the nation. But they don't.

There are only three women burgomasters (mayors) in the country, and one took over the office from her husband when he was deported by the Germans on April 16, 1945, and never returned.

There are 14 women among the 150 members of the Second Chamber (house of representatives) of parliament and four among the 75 members of the First Chamber (senate).

Holland's history records only two women government ministers. Dr. M. A. M. Klompe, an unmarried doctor of medicine educated at Utrecht University who had previously been a secondary school teacher, was minister of welfare from Oct. 18, 1956, to July 24, 1963, serving in three cabinets.

A member of the Catholic People's Party, she was replaced in the Marijnen cabinet (which resigned recently on the issue of television) by a woman of the Liberal People's Party for Freedom and Democracy, Mrs. J. F. Schouwenaar-Franssen, a widow with two sons and one daughter.

This is the sum of female participation in politics, except for a few municipal councillors.

There is some penetration of business and professional spheres with a fair number of woman doctors, specializing particularly in the care of children, and a slowly increasing group of lawyers with a few judges (especially in juvenile courts) and notary publics.

The scant role women play in business can be explained partly by legal disabilities.

Despite the early winning of the right to vote, married women remained under the tutelage of their husbands until 1957. Before then, a married woman could not have a bank account in her name, could not buy or sell property without her husband's permission, and his signature was required on any document entailing legal obligations.

Tiny Orchids Centre Bouquet Given by Bride to Grandmother

A cascade bouquet of pale pink miniature orchids, lily of the valley and ivy was given to the bride's grandmother, Mrs. H. Parker, by Joan Catherine Pimm, following her recent marriage to Robert Donald Roger.

A cape of scalloped French lace topped the bodice of the floor-length gown of white nylon over satin. Slightly en train, the gown, styled on princess lines, featured appliques of French lace and seed pearls and sleeves ending in lily points. Her scalloped-edged chapel-length veil misted from a coronet of seed pearls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Pimm, 298 View Royal Avenue. Groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Roger, 486 Roger Street. Mr. Pimm gave his daughter in marriage.

Lily of the valley and baskets of spring flowers decorated the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses for the ceremony at which Cliff Roberts officiated.

Mrs. A. Kurik played the piono during the service.

Matching gowns of turquoise peau de sole were the choice of matron of honor Mrs. M. Hanlon and bridesmaids, the Misses Claudia Robertson and Barbara Pimm, sister of the bride. All wore rose petal hats, edged with tulle, and carried cascade bouquets of pink carnations, lily of the valley and ivy.

Patty MacDonald was flower girl for her aunt in a pink frock trimmed with lace. A toning floral headband and a basket of turquoise daisies completed her outfit.

Tom Bennett was best man. Guests were ushered to their pews by Mike Hanlon and the groom's brother, Allan Roger.

A tiered wedding cake made by the bride's mother and decorated by the groom's aunt, Mrs. R. Roger, centred the bride's table for the reception which followed in the Carlton Club. White candles and lily of the valley completed table decorations.

Dr. Ronald Grant proposed the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip motoring to the Southern United States, the bride donned an Italian imported suit of skipper blue, highlighted with white pleats in front of the skirt. Accessories in white completed the outfit.

The couple will make their home in Victoria.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

I treated myself to a tour of one of our tourist attractions the other day. After my first visit to Spencer Castle, I came away more impressed with its imported glories than with the Canadiana which its present owners promote in their brochures.

Having been born and raised in Europe, I'd become accustomed to administering the title, castle, to ancient structures that seemed to share two things in common, awe-inspiring grandeur and, just as impressive, evidence that warmth and comfort were ignored in their architects' deliberations!

Spencer Castle falls into neither of these two categories. Built in the early 1900s by Henry Sandham Griffith, the gracious tudor and granite home hints of no blue-blooded pomposity or frigidity. Rather, it bears evidence that Mrs. Kate Spencer must have been delighted with its comfort when her late husband, the department store magnate, David, bought it for a family home.

Leaves You Breathless!

Perhaps its present name is attributed to the four-storey granite stone turret with its battlement that looks out on a view that's guaranteed to leave us breathless . . . that is, if the climb hasn't already produced the same effect.

Although some of the family treasures are still there to be seen (Mrs. Spencer's bedroom has been kept in its former decor and with its original 1860-built bed), to me they were all of secondary interest compared to the European paintings and china that have recently been hung by Miss Alyx Toppin, the home's guide and art director. And, although these treasures only saw the Canadian scene when they arrived with their owner, Miss Toppin, 10 years ago, their European flavor is anything but out of place in their new setting.

I have never seen anything more beautiful than the brace of Italian Capo di Monti plates in one upstairs room. Created by craftsmen in the palace of King Charles III when he was King of Naples, the two plates create a hunger for the exquisite workmanship of the 1700s.

Paintings From the 1500s

One of the oldest paintings to be seen was executed on wood in 1525. It shows the Queen of Sheba appearing before King Solomon.

Just as fascinating is the 1600 painting by Weis that shows the life story of those unfortunate brothers, Romulus and Remus. With meticulous care, the artist has traced their history-making experiences with a beauty rarely seen these days.

It would be difficult to select a painting from this collection that would not merit close attention. Certainly, one of the most outstanding is the 16th century creation of Schiavone which portrays the mystical marriage of St. Catherine and the Holy Family.

The quality of color is delicate and Miss Toppin tells me that the painting is the only one by this artist to be found on the North American continent.

Less awe-inspiring but still demanding its own share of attention is a color print of a painting by the late Sir Winston Churchill. This is now out of print and was originally produced by the Medici Society of London.

Assumption In Baroque

Another unusual exhibit is the 17th century Austrian painting showing the Assumption of the Virgin, executed in baroque.

Miss Toppin has been so busy hanging her treasures, that there's been no time as yet to list their numbers. She estimates there must be about 50.

Some she collected but most were inheritances. Many of her purchases reflect the knowledge that went into her selection. Much of this knowledge came in the form of her father's advice. Victor Aubrey John Toppin, CVO, FSA, is world-famous for his publications on paintings and museum pieces.

Someday I hope to go back and have another look at Spencer Castle. This time, I hope to be able to keep its imported trappings in my subconscious and concentrate on the house, furniture and well-kept gardens. I have a feeling that it will be a losing battle.

This is the first such ball to be held in many years. Among those at the affair were, left to right, Mr. R. Eldridge, Mrs. Eldridge, convener; Dr. and Mrs. C. Y. Brown; Mrs. R. Exquisite Redingote of Lace Accents Gown of Peau de Soie

A full-length redingote of Chantilly lace topped the floor-length gown of white peau de soie worn by Margaret Jean Austin, this afternoon, when she became the bride of Ian Murray McIntyre.

The fitted bodice of the gown, made by the bride's mother, was styled with a high scallop-edged neckline and long sleeves. Her Chantilly lace veil misted to elbow-length from a white peau de soie cap. She carried a small white Bible topped with white glamelias. The bride entered the church on the arm of G. V. Reed, Calgary.

Dr. N. S. Noel officiated at the double-ring ceremony in St. George the Martyr Anglican Church which united the daughter of Mrs. John Petrie Austin, 2909 Richmond Road, and the late Mr. Austin, and Mr. and Mrs. Angus W. McIntyre, 2684 Dewdney Avenue. Mrs. Austin gave her daughter in marriage.

Soloist Miss Eleanor Duff sang "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee" during the signing of the register.

Floor-length gowns of pink peau de soie, topped with antique pink lace jackets, were the choice of maid of honor Miss Sylvia Austin, the bride's sister, and bridesmaids, the Misses Karen McNamara and Barbara McKenzie. Headpieces were self-fabric flowers edged with tulle, and they carried cascade bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Flower girl Janet Lorimer wore a frock of white embroidered organdy, highlighted with a pink sash. She carried a basket of white daisies and pink streamers.

Best man was Douglas Stewart and ushering guests to their pews were Lorne Ross, Gerald Taylor and Robert Harris.

An antique silver vase containing pink princess roses and fern topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table for the reception following in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. J. D. Lorimer proposed the toast to the bride.

Following a honeymoon trip motoring down the west coast of the United States, the couple will make their home in Penticton.

For travelling, the bride donned an ivory knit suit and turquoise hat. Bone accessories and a dark mink stole completed the outfit.

TROUBLE LEADS TO TITIVATING

SASKATOON (CP) — Studies in Montreal show that many women react when in trouble by attempting to improve their personal appearance, a Montreal social worker said this week.

Mrs. Phyllis Poland, a social worker at the Montreal Mental Hygiene Institute, told the national convention of the Young Women's Christian Association of Canada that women under strain often turn to a new hairdo or a physical fitness program for a lift.

"This is a healthy, active approach to problem-solving," she said, but in many cases it isn't enough.

Mrs. Poland said physical fitness programs and hairdos may provide a lift, but often fail to get at underlying causes of strain and tension.

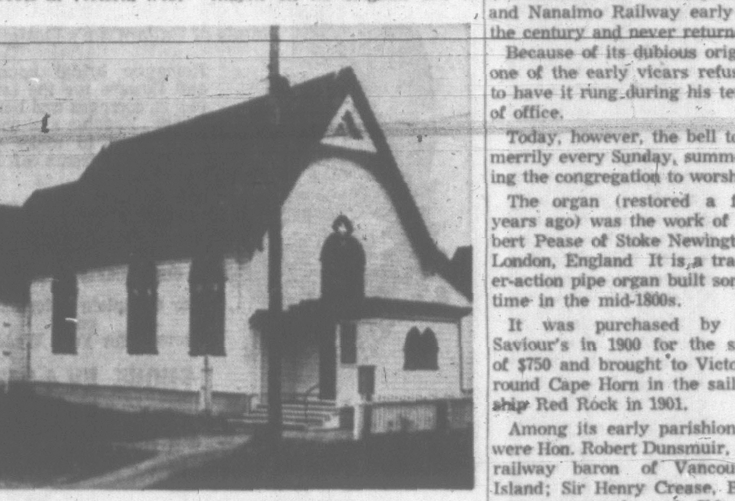
SPECIAL CLAIM TO FAME

Church Marks 74th Year

St. Saviour's Church, the attractive white-walled building at the corner of Henry and Catherine Streets in Victoria West—celebrated its 74th birthday, May 19.

It is the oldest Anglican church on its original site in the city of Victoria and it has a special claim to fame: it's church bell was borrowed from a locomotive on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway early in the century and never returned.



ST. SAVIOUR'S CHURCH
. . . on original site

Because of its dubious origin, one of the early vicars refused to have it rung during his term of office.

Today, however, the bell tolls merrily every Sunday, summoning the congregation to worship.

The organ (restored a few years ago) was the work of Albert Pease of Stoke Newington, London, England It is a tracker-action pipe organ built sometime in the mid-1800s.

It was purchased by St. Saviour's in 1900 for the sum of $750 and brought to Victoria round Cape Horn in the sailing ship Red Rock in 1901.

Among its early parishioners were Hon. Robert Dunsmuir, the railway baron of Vancouver Island; Sir Henry Crease, B.C. attorney-general, and Edward Crow Baker, MP for Victoria in the House of Commons.

The present vicar is Rev. Richard Mugford.

New 'Union Hymnary' To Get Field Test

TORONTO (CP)—Hymns proposed for the new hymnary for United and Anglican Churches will be tried out first in a dozen churches across Canada, the Toronto conference of the United Church of Canada was told Wednesday.

The two denominations have agreed to study the principles of union.

Updating Of RC Church 'Not Betrayal'

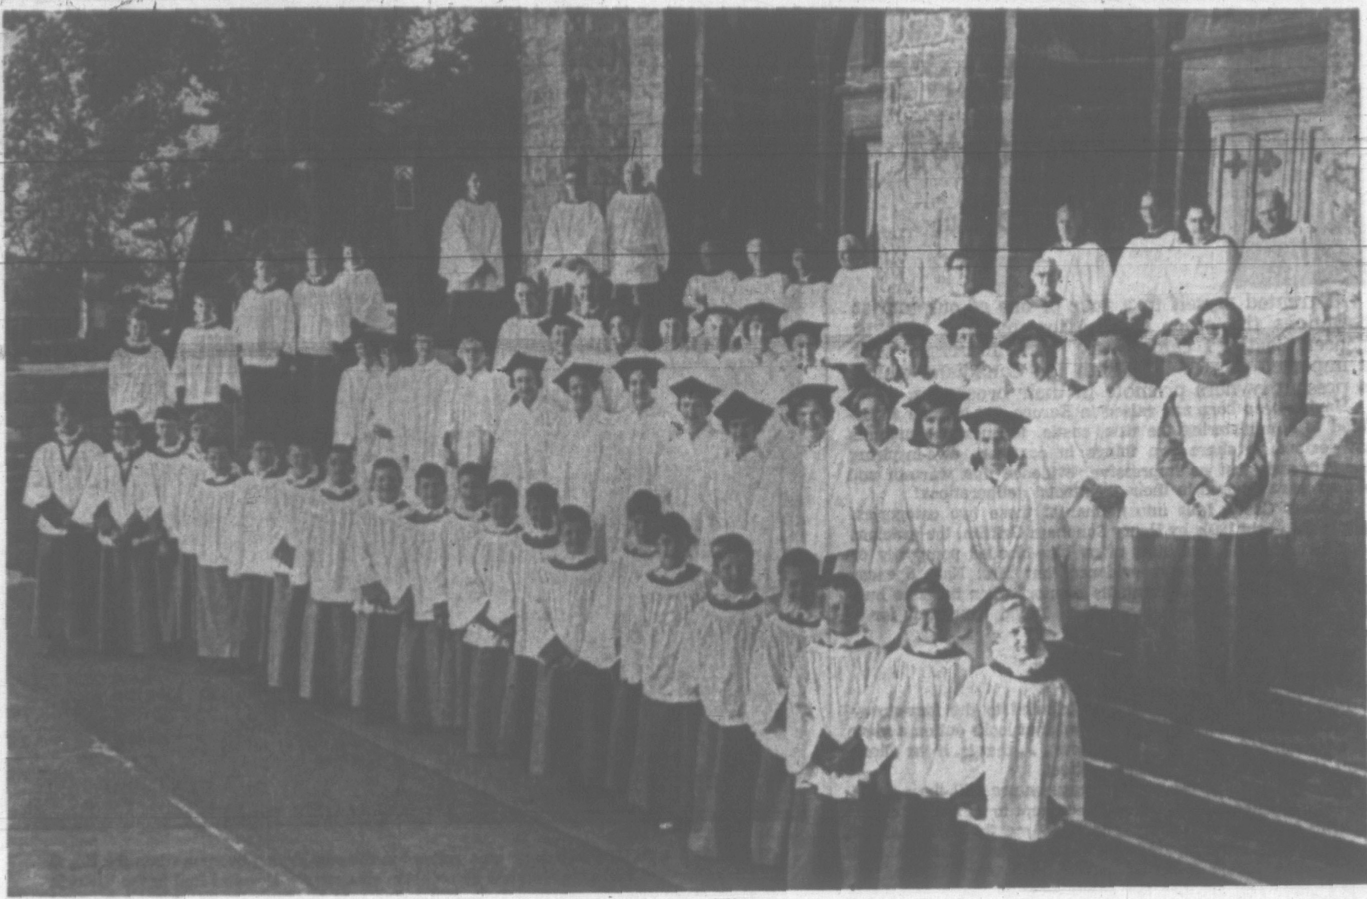
MONTREAL (CP) — There is a feeling the updating of the church is a kind of betrayal of the church's past, Archbishop Paul Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal said here.

Cardinal Leger made the comment while addressing delegates to the 11th national social life conference at Loyola College.

The three-day conference was sponsored by the English-speaking Roman Catholic bishops of Canada.

"The ecumenical council is not trying to desupernaturalize religion," he told the 500 political, educational, industrial and clerical specialists from across the counry who converged to discuss the role of the Christian in the community.

"It is seeking means to present the vital living reality of the mercy of God in such a way that somehow, some day, all men will know their home is in the mystical body of Jesus Christ."



Christ Church

Church choirs, big and small, have often been called the backbone of a nation's music. They raise the morale of the service and keep up the tempo of the singing. Every Saturday, The Times will publish a picture of a Victoria choir.

FAMOUS for its tone and balance is the mixed choir at Christ Church Cathedral comprising more than 60 men, women and boys. Since 1959 the choir has been trained and rehearsed by organist Richard Proudman, who studied under Boris Ord at King's College, Cambridge, England. It includes such famous voices as those of Bill Dyson, the 12-year-old boy soprano, and Norma McCurdy who won the Rose Bowl in this year's Victoria Music Festival. (Photo by Halkett.)

Favor Abolition

Members of the House of Commons in Ottawa will soon have to vote on the issue of whether hanging should continue.

The Canadian Churchman official organ of the Anglican Church favors abolition of the death penalty and urges church members to write to their MPs urging them to vote against capital punishment.

In a leading editorial it quotes George Bernard Shaw as saying:

"Criminals do not die by the hands of the law. They die by the hands of other men."

"We further suggest that it is time the Canadian people were released from the responsibility for such deaths," says the Canadian Churchman.

Rev. Dr. Leonard Hatfield, former general secretary of the Anglican Church's Council for Social Services, writes:

"Capital punishment has no place in a society which believes that human life is precious and should have the protection of due process of law."

Presbyterian, United Meet 'Stunned'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Free Press says representatives of the United Church of Canada and the Presbyterian Church have been meeting in secret sessions in Toronto for six months in an attempt to lead to closer affinity between the two bodies.

It says the talks, involving 10 men from the two churches, were revealed following an announcement this week that principles of union had been agreed upon by committees representing the Anglican and United Churches.

The newspaper quotes an unnamed source close to the United-Presbyterian talks saying the committee was "a little stunned" by the announcement that union between the Anglican and United Churches could take place within 10 years.

It says five members of the articles of doctrine committee of the Presbyterian Church in Canada have been meeting since November with five members of the United Church's home mission board.

The discussions ended temporarily this week at Knox College, Presbyterian college at the University of Toronto, it says.

They are to resume in September with a larger delegation from each church taking part.

22 CANADIANS TO VISIT FORMOSA

TORONTO (CP) — At least 22 Canadian Presbyterians plan to leave Vancouver Friday, June 11, on a 17-day tour of Formosa, Hong Kong and Japan.

Sponsored by the general board of missions of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the tour basically is to give Canadian Presbyterians an opportunity to join in June 20 celebrations on Formosa for the 100th anniversary of Christian missionary work on the island.

Leaders of the tour will be Rev. Hugh A. MacMillan, former church moderator, and Rev. DeCourcy Rayner, editor of the Presbyterian Record.

Union 'Pitiful To Behold'

Canadians need a faith to live by and a self to live with, says Bishop Denys Rankilor of the historic Church of Our Lord.

The bishop will preach on this subject in his church Sunday morning.

"Our Canadian churches," he says, "supply the faith fit to live by—but only we as individuals can contribute a faith to live with.

"We are tremendously proud that we are Canadians. We present an image to our modern world and each of us is part of that image. But we must back it up with a faith fit to live with, a self fit to live with—and a way of democratic life which we can achieve only by support of a Christian church.

"Denominations mean nothing.

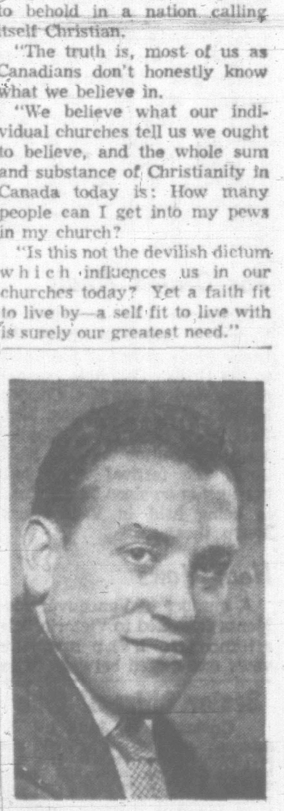
'PITIFUL TO BEHOLD'

"Plans for union of the Anglican and United churches, based on theological differences, interpretations of the Holy Communion, Baptism or other alleged sacraments, are pitiful to behold in a nation calling itself Christian.

"The truth is, most of us as Canadians don't honestly know what we believe in.

"We believe what our individual churches tell us we ought to believe, and the whole sum and substance of Christianity in Canada today is: How many people can I get into my pews in my church?

"Is this not the devilish dictum which influences us in our churches today? Yet a faith fit to live by—a self fit to live with is surely our greatest need."



GUEST soloist in First United Church Sunday at 11 a.m. will be baritone Jock Dunbar, just returned to Victoria from his home in Ayr, Scotland. After many years here, Mr. Dunbar moved to Scotland in 1963 and has since won acclaim on Scottish and English TV and radio.

NUN'S HABIT STREAMLINED

LONDON (AP)—Nuns at the Roman Catholic convent of Our Lady of Sion have introduced a streamlined habit with skirt hems raised eight inches to a foot.

The new garb also does away with the nuns' traditional white, starched collar.

The headpiece is smartened up and pushed back off the shoulders to hang smartly down the back, showing more of the wearer's face.

VERY REV. McLEAN SAYS:

Divorce Not Wrong But Often a Remedy

Divorces granted in British Columbia—I am told the average is around 200 a month—are listed regularly in the newspapers. They call for little or no comment, because they have come to be accepted as part of our revised way of life.

Believing that a great deal of this acceptance of increasing divorce is unthinking, I offer the following provocative statements in the hope that they may encourage thinking and stimulate concern:

Divorce is not necessarily in itself wrong. It is often a symptom—it may be a remedy—related to a sick or broken marriage. To forbid divorce, accordingly, provides no solution to the present-day problem of deteriorated or fractured marriages.

Divorce is not to be encouraged or regarded as anything but an exceptional expedient.

Primitive society, which imposed marriage rules, required that husband and wife should not separate except for "just cause." In modern society, the importance and value of marriage being still recognized, divorce must not be made easier for persons motivated by licence or desire for novelty.

If the marriage bond may legally be dissolved—divorce granted—only for "just cause," then this ground for divorce, in the interests of the human personalities involved and of society, must be adequate and without harmful side effects.

I believe that Canada's divorce law is unsatisfactory. It does not serve to promote the welfare of society and of individuals in our modern society as it was intended to do.

The present law does not permit the divorce court judge to consider whether the husband (or wife) has made a good home for his (her) family; whether he (she) has abused or abandoned them; whether he (she) has been a drunkard or a deserter.

All that the judge may inquire is whether there has been adultery; and the evidence he is compelled to accept often cannot establish this.

I am inclined to agree with those who say that Canada's divorce law should be revised—the grounds extended, with necessary safeguards, to include—say—wilful desertion, cruelty and incurable insanity. This need not increase the number of divorces. It would increase the number of honest divorces.

The teaching of Jesus, rightly understood, does not prohibit divorce for just cause. Nothing is to be gained by quoting "proof texts." Jesus' supreme concern is with the welfare of persons—spiritual beings; laws are means to this end.

Jesus, answering the question as to whether a man may put away his wife "for any cause," teaches that marriage should not be broken; the vow taken is a promise of lifelong fidelity. Speaking concerning the breaking of the marriage bond, He said, "Let not man put asunder . . ."

We have no record of any saying of His with respect to cases where the spiritual bond of love and fidelity has already been broken. What would He say—we may ask—with respect to a young mother deserted by her faithless vow-breaking husband? Would He say that a man-made law must tie her to him until death should part them?

Let His love, His righteousness, His concern for the souls of men and women be our guide in seeking a divorce law for today that shall best relieve distress and promote marital stability.

Rev. Dr. McLean has been minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for more than 26 years. He is a former moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and an alderman of the city council of Victoria. He was born in Ontario—the son of a devout Presbyterian family. And, perhaps because of this, he declined to join the union of Presbyterian, Methodist and Congational churches in 1925.

'One Church Not Lasting' Says Presbyterian Head

TORONTO (CP) — As the new moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Rev. James Allan Pops Munro of Toronto has one burning desire:

"Basically, I would like to see our communicant members and our adherents read and study about their own faith and the faith of others."

Mr. Munro said in an interview this week there isn't much point in a person calling himself a Christian if he doesn't know what he is saying. A person is judged, he said, by his profession of faith.

The man who was elected to a one-year term as moderator of the 820,000-member church in Canada is 66 years old and a native of Winnipeg.

Chatting informally between sessions of the church's 90th general assembly at Calvin Presbyterian Church, Mr. Munro said about union with other denominations:

"I don't look upon it as a sin to have denominations. Sometimes it's stated that to have brought up to believe of the other churches as branches of the one church.

"My idea of close relationship is embodied in something like the Canadian and World Councils of Churches, where you have a number of different names but where they are all united in concern and action.

"Union doesn't necessarily entail organic union."

DISCUSSED UNION

The Presbyterians and the United Church of Canada were talking a few years ago about organic union. Those talks have since ended on a note of discord. However, conversations between the two are continuing in areas of mutual co-operation and understanding.

"I'm afraid of a single monolithic structure," the moderator said.

"I'm afraid because it would be very difficult to keep the atmosphere of community alive. People would not be . . . as apt to take part in the affairs of their church."

Organic union of churches must never be imposed on the laity, he said.

"If organic union is foisted on the men and women in the hurly-burly of life, I don't think it will be lasting."

Presbyterians and Anglicans are currently talking on matters of faith and order, or what the Christian religion is and what the church and its ministry really are. But they're not talking organic union.

What about Presbyterian reunion with the Roman Catholic Church?

"I've always had good friends in the Roman Catholic Church, the same as I have had deep friendships among people of other denominations.

"However, I think it would have been a great sin if the reformers hadn't stood up against the church of their day and broken away from it. But let's not forget that many of those reformers died as Roman Catholics

Mother, 26, Ordained As United Minister

TORONTO (CP)—A 26-year-old Toronto mother Friday night was ordained as a minister of the United Church.

Mrs. William Bartram became a centre of controversy earlier this week when the colleges and student committee of the United Church's Toronto conference recommended she not be ordained. The committee reported some members felt her main reason for seeking ordination was "not so much the glory of God as the need for self-fulfilment."

Mrs. Bartram graduated from Emmanuel College at the University of Toronto in 1963, but decided not to be ordained at that time. She married and tried her hand for a while at teaching and writing.

Last month she applied for ordination through a local United Church and the Toronto centre presbytery.

Both organizations sent her request on without recommendation to the colleges and student committee. The committee suggested Mrs. Bartram be required to wait at least two more years and sent her application back to the presbytery for recommendation.

Toronto centre presbytery reversed the earlier decision Thursday and recommended Mrs. Bartram be ordained. The whole conference later ratified this decision.

People Being Trained For Ford Rally Here

Choir singers, youth leaders and ushers are now being trained for the big evengelistic crusade to be conducted here next September by Dr. Leighton Ford. To be held in the Memorial Arena, the crusade will run from Sept. 5 to 19.

"Prayer and diligent planning are needed if a lasting impact is to be made on the youth of Victoria," says Paul Leonard of the Leighton Ford team.

He has established offices for the crusade at Suite 280 in the Bentall Building, 1070 Douglas Street.

Anyone who would like to join the crusade choir or act as an usher is welcome to attend a recruiting session at the Salvation Army Citadel June 14 or in First Baptist Church June 16.

June 15 has been set as reservation deadline for special bus transportation to Victoria from all parts of Vancouver Island.

Every church in Victoria has been invited to participate in the crusade and a youth leaders' meeting will be held in Metropolitan United Church June 12.

More than 600 women have offered to open their homes for morning prayer meetings before and during the crusade.

They are invited to attend a pre-crusade rally in Victoria Senior Secondary School auditorium June 28 at 10:30 a.m.

VISITING United States for 17 days is Princess Christina of Sweden who arrived in New York Friday night. She will visit the world's fair next week and be the guest of Mayor Robert Wagner at a reception.

Japanese Violate Fish Pact

JUNEAU (AP)—Five Japanese high seas salmon boats were detected operating late Friday in waters closed to them by the International North Pacific Fisheries Treaty, said the Alaska Bureau of Commercial Fisheries.

Harry Rietze, regional director for the bureau, said a U.S. Coast Guard patrol plane with a bureau of commercial fisheries agent aboard spotted the five Japanese gillnetters.

The coast guard cutter Wachusett, on fisheries patrol in the area, was ordered to attempt to intercept the Japanese boats in closed waters. A fisheries bureau agent is also aboard the Wachusett.

Two of the Japanese catcher boats were spotted fishing at a point 60 miles south of Atka Island, in the Aleutians.

This location would place the two boats 28 miles east of the International North Pacific Fisheries Treaty abstention line.

Strikers Rapped

TOKYO (AP)—The government-run telegraph and telephone corporation today disciplined 155,434 employees who took part in two work stoppages for higher wages. Strikes by government workers are illegal in Japan.

STUDY SHOWS

Teachers Cool To PTA Groups

VANCOUVER (CP) — Serious doubts about the idea of parent-teacher organizations as useful partnerships are raised by a survey conducted by a Vancouver woman.

Mrs. Ethel Bentley, a former officer of the British Columbia Parent-Teacher Federation, sent a questionnaire to individual associations and interviewed teachers and principals.

"It became abundantly evident that although the PTA is ideally a partnership of parents and teachers there is actually no alliance.

"Not one person I talked with, or association that answered my questionnaire, linked parents and teachers as partners. Nor was there any mutual goal such as working together. And not one principal or teacher mentioned the need for help from parents."

One association president said he was convinced teachers and principals resent the number of meetings they had to attend.

FEEL THREAT

"The idea that teachers feel threatened by the PTA rang out time and time again," Mrs. Bentley said. "One principal said: 'When teachers are in the PTA they are second-class citizens because they can't say what they think.'"

It was evident that parents and teachers were never going to reach a true working partnership, and it was time for PTA policies and objectives, drawn up many years ago, to be revised.

Mrs. Bentley said the PTA might turn over the job of raising money for purchase of extra school equipment to a purely parent organization. It should then narrow its field and aim at becoming expert in a specific area, curriculum for example.

STOP MOTIONS

The PTA should also abandon the practice of passing a variety of resolutions in convention and then presenting them to the government.

"These resolutions are merely presented to the government and nothing much else is done to follow them up. Some resolutions have been presented as many as five times and still nothing has been acomplished.

"If the PTA's strength lies in being a pressure group in education, as is the consensus, then cut out the chaff, accept the challenge and work toward being an expert, well-informed group in a narrow special field."

DUNKERQUE ANNIVERSARY

Marking of Defeat Bewilders French

By CARL MOLLINS

DUNKERQUE (CP) — Posters in Dunkerque indicate the Frenchman's bewilderment at the idea of celebrating the anniversary of the rout of the British here 25 years ago—the evacuation of Dunkerque in 1940.

To make the French-British remembrance this weekend more palatable to Dunkerquians, the posters begin by announcing a victory worth celebrating, the liberation of the port June 6, 1945.

Then, almost as an apologetic afterthought, the posters add: ". . . et le 25th anniversaire des combats de 1940."

The remembrance of the evacuation of 338,226 troops before onrushing German armies between May 26 and June 4, 1940, has brought to this seaport 400 British veterans of Dunkerque, the band of the Royal Scots, scores of British tourists, three ships of the Royal Navy and 42 boats representing those "little ships" that helped at the evacuation.

By the time Dunkerque residents are celebrating their 1945 liberation Sunday and Monday, most of the British will have departed. For them, the main purpose was the service at the Allied memorial on the beach today when the veterans watched as the little armada of boats formed an arc offshore while an RAF Shackleton dropped a wreath of remembrance into the English Channel.

The little ships, representing about 700 that helped the Royal Navy evacuate a defeated British expeditionary force to fight another day, arrived here Friday in a holiday mood.

The pleasure yachts and working scows, yawls and trawlers, sailed from Kent at a straggly five knots, all that most of the aged craft could make and more than some could manage.

The speedier ships arrived in bright sunshine outside Dunkerque Harbor at about 2:23 p.m., nearly to the minute 25 years ago that the British admiralty signalled the end of the nine-day Operation Dynamo.

This time, however, weary troops awaiting rescue on the beaches were replaced by screaming stukas by circling gulls.

EXTRA SIGNIFICANCE . . . . . . TO TORONTO CELEBRATION

3,600,000 Hope—No Golden Jubilee

TORONTO (CP)—Thursday, June 10, is the United Church of Canada's 40th birthday.

Celebration of the anniversary is taking on extra significance because many of its more than 3,600,000 adherents are hoping it will not see its 50th birthday in 1975.

Instead, they hope to see their church and the Anglican Church of Canada united by then into a new embodiment of Canadian Protestantism.

Basic principles on which organic union could come were announced at the end of May. Union would make the new church of more than 6,000,000 second numerically in Canada only to the Roman Catholic Church, which had about 8,400,000 adherents listed in the 1961 census.

United Church ministers and congregations across Canada have been asked by church headquarters here to hold a 40th anniversary service either Sunday, or a week later. Their response has been so enthusiastic that a special order of worship required a second printing.

Rt. Rev. Ernest Marshall Howse of Toronto, present moderator of the general council, will preach in Toronto's 1,500-seat downtown Metropolitan Church Sunday, June 20.

Afterwards a plaque will be unveiled at 70 Mutual Street, the arena in which hundreds of Presbyterians, Methodists and Congregationalists met Wednesday, June 10, 1925, and solemnly dedicated most of their memberships to the emerging United Church of Canada.

Very Rev. George Pidgeon of Toronto, the first moderator, hopes to attend the unveiling. At 95 and with failing eyesight, he seldom leaves his home.

Another former moderator, Very Rev. James R. Mutchmor of Toronto, plans to preach at an open-air service June 20 at Kagawong Lake, not far from his birthplace at Providence Bay on Manitoulin Island in Lake Huron.

While the church prepares to celebrate its birthday with special services, it also has published an anniversary booklet by Grace Lane of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Rev. Fraser Munro of Sackville, N.B.

Mr. Munro, now retired, based his contribution on Moses' reminder to the Israelites that God had been with them during their 40-year struggle to the Promised Land from captivity in Egypt.

He concluded with the Lord's advice to Moses: "You have compassed this mountain long enough. Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." In between, Mr. Munro traced what he believed were similarities in the heritage of the United Church.

Mrs. Lane, wife of Rev. Homer R. Lane of St. Andrew's United Church in Moose Jaw, looked at her church's history from a different angle. She delved into the lives of Canada's pioneers and saw in them the importance of a vital faith. This she wrote, should be the backbone of Christianity in the United Church.

Rev. Ernest E. Long of Toronto, secretary of the United Church Committee of Ten on union talks with the Anglicans, said the work of his church is not finished. Its members must not dwell in the past.

Years ago the church declared itself to be a uniting force. Its members, said Dr. Long, must work with other churches in answering the prayer of Jesus for his disciples:

"That they may be one, even as we are one."

BIG MONEY CONFUSES HER

Success Has Not Changed Barbra Streisand

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve years ago Barbra Streisand was a beatnik kid who made 50 cents an hour as a baby sitter. Today her income is nearer $1,000,000 a year.

The onetime Flatbush gamin, star of the Broadway musical, Funny Girl, has become a show world empress.

Instead of a walkup flat, she dwells in a Central Park duplex that has nine glittering chandeliers. Once she dressed like a 1925 mannequin in a lower East Side thrift shop. Now few society women could match her wardrobe.

But as her 23rd birthday nears, Barbra finds herself still basically unchanged where she feels it counts most—inside.

"No one thing has made life very different for me," she said. "In a way I'm disappointed that it hasn't."

She still misses the kooky days when her ugly duckling dreams of turning into a stage swan seemed a pitiful jest except to her own desperately self-conscious self.

"What is suffering to one person is joy to another," she said in her paisley-colored theatre dressing room from which hangs a 10th glittering crystal chandelier, the symbol of her stardom.

UNHAPPY TEEN-AGER

"I went through a lot of adolescent pangs that were critical to me, but I never had to scrub floors or do anything like that.

"I was so gawky no one would hire me as a model. So I worked as a cashier in a Chinese restaurant for $1 an hour, and all the chow mein I could eat. I loved that.

"I also licked envelopes for a printing firm for $45.17 a week—and saved $15 of it. I always was saving. The main thing I didn't want to be was a typist. I let my fingernails grow long so I couldn't type."

In addition to her stage earnings, royalties from phonograph albums and other sources of income, Barbra has a contract with CBS television guaranteeing her $5,000,000 over the next 10 years.

"I'm fuzzy about the details, but it gives me creative control over my programs. That's the main thing. I don't have to get sponsor approval.

"Any amount of money over $50,000 confuses me. I feel you can live as well on $25,000 a year as on a million. You can ride in only one minousine at a time.

"I allot myself only $25 a week, and I never spend it all. I like to pay in cash. It gives me a great feeling.

"When I pay by cheque, I feel like I'm getting it for nothing—because it's just paper."

Big Laugh Coming Up For Guild

One of the funniest nights of the year could be opening night, next Saturday, at Langham Court Theatre, when Victoria Theatre Guild's production of the British farce-comedy, See How They Run, gets under way.

The mixed up doings are set in an English parsonage and involve the bewildered clergyman and his wife, played by Gillian Farr and Robert Kimber.

Director is Bert Farr who has indulged in some interesting anti-type casting by having attractive Vanessa Lax play the frustrated spinster whose first taste of liquor loosens up quite a few inhibitions.

Others in the cast are Gem Hewlett, Danny Christian, Connie Thomson and John Britt.

Theatre Guild box office is at Eaton's ticket centre.

LP's of the Week

Mono: "The Real Earl Hines, Recorded Live! In Concert" (Focus 335). Fatha, who was playing great jazz piano when Calvin Coolidge was president, is heard here in music from his first concert, which he gave at The Little Theatre in March, 1964. The listener quickly finds out why Hines has exerted such great influence in jazz. Stereo: "Golden Medleys" by Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians (Decca DL 74593). Guy takes his band through 36 songs, all of them evergreens. It's good listening.

NORTH BREEZES
Lots of talk lately about a Greater Victoria regional parks plan with the united municipalities buying land now for future park development, before it is all lost to private use.
The provincial government will pay one-third of the cost each year for land acquisition and development.
Good plan, but let's improve it. Let's earmark the work for summers only and recruit the job force from students requiring summer incomes. And let's get on with it.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

The vigorous and proliferating growth in the entertainment and fine arts areas of the local scene reminds me of what my parents used to tell me of the South African veldt they both knew so well.

"For weeks it would be dun and arid looking," my mother used to say; still marvelling after 30 years in Canada, over the miracle of nature in that enchanted land.

"Then there would come a great rain and overnight the whole veldt would be drenched in bloom like a vast multi-hued tapestry."

In other words, suddenly the climate had changed, a missing factor had been supplied and the reaction was immediate and brilliant.

This, it seems to me, is a good parable for what is happening in Victoria. The seeds of much of it have been here all along, but in the last year or so certain vital elements have been added and—lo—the desert springs into bloom.

Last week I mentioned some of the elements that have been responsible for the burgeoning, but I think that we must also acknowledge Ken Gravenor's introduction of the lunchtime concerts as having added something in the form of a stimulant.

Opportunity to perform and to be heard appreciatively as well as critically is of paramount importance to the serious student or amateur artist.

But until Mr. Gravenor came up with his idea such opportunities were much too few and far between in this city.

In fact, except for the once-a-year or semiannual presentations of certain organizations, Musical Art Society and Christ Church Cathedral almost stood alone in regularly utilizing a little of the best talent in the area.

But that even they did not begin to really tap the resources is clear for Mr. Gravenor, despite certain predictions, is not soon going to run out of a changing supply of artists, most of whom are worth anybody's time to go and hear.

But I am wandering a little from what I specifically set out to discuss in this column.

Music Careers Choice of Two

During the next few weeks I would like, from time to time, to talk about some of the advanced and serious students, especially those who are contemplating some type of career in music.

Two who are on my mind today are young men at the threshhold of their 20s, both gifted to an exceptional degree, both determined to make music their life work, both with a definite program of study for the next few years.

In each case there is this week, something special about them that makes them fitting subjects to lead off the series.

The two are Timothy Vernon and Norman Abbott; and as Timothy leaves the city on Tuesday to spend the next five years in Vienna this is also a note of bon voyage to him.

Tim Vernon was a boy soprano in Christ Church Cathedral Choir when I first met him. Many will remember he was the first Amahl in the unprecedented production of Menotti's Christmas opera, Amahl and the Night Visitors, in the cathedral six years ago.

A lovely voice, intuitive musicianship and dramatic gifts made his performance outstanding.

His voice broke shortly after and for the next two or three years he was strongly attracted to the theatre, especially when he won a senior secondary school festival scholarship that took him to Banff for the five-week theatre course.

By the time he entered the University of Victoria, however, music had begun to exert a stronger influence. Besides being a notably good piano accompanist, Tim had become an organist as well and soon was holding the post of organist and choirmaster at the church of St. George the Martyr at Cadboro Bay.

His first venture onto the conductor's podium took place while he was still at Victoria High School, but it was Otto-Werner Mueller's conductors' course last summer that convinced both Tim and his teacher that this was the field in which his promise was greatest.

No one knows better than Tim that the path he has set his feet upon is a long, tough and demanding one.

And he is quite aware that by leaving his home town, his familiar teachers, his circle of relatives and friends, and plunging into a great foreign metropolis which has one of the most formidable musical reputations in the world, that he is facing the acid test of his own endurance, determination and strength of character.

He knows that he can learn disciplines in this way that he needs; disciplines that, despite the excellent musical resources that Victoria provides at the moment, he can only obtain by such a move.

"When I have gained what I hope I will gain in the next five years," he told me, "I want to come back to wherever Mr. Mueller is then and work with him and assimilate his ideas musician that, in order to reap the full benefit of studying with him and assimilating his ideas and depth of understanding, one needs a fine, broad foundation."

So this is au revoir and good luck to you, Tim, and may you find what you are seeking to supplement your undoubted and rare talent.

Grown Up With the Sound of Music

It would be very difficult for Norman Abbott to choose anything but music as a career, considering that his entire 18 years have been lived in a constant atmosphere of music.

With his mother, Margaret, an accomplished, highly trained singer, his father a singer and deeply interested in music, his sister, Vivienne, an extremely good violinist (his eight-year-old sister, Jocelyn, is now also a scholarship-winning violinist) the life of the whole family revolves about a musical centre.

Norman has just completed his first year at University of Victoria and is quite certain now that music, perhaps in the teachingfield, is the only career for him.

A talented cellist, for two full seasons a member of the string section of Victoria Symphony, he is also a pianist who frequently partners his sister and has been in demand through high school and university as an accompanist.

A few years ago he added organ to his instruments and he now holds the post of organist at the Christian Science Church.

Besides his other gifts, Norman seems to be able to stretch the hours of the day in some miraculous fashion, for he has also found time to explore one of his favorite forms of music making—the chamber group.

With three other university students he has formed the New Century String Quartet.

His fellow players are Corinne Field and Don Kissinger, violins, and Betty Gahn, viola.

Next Friday, at the McPherson Playhouse lunch hour concert the quartet is tentatively scheduled to appear, playing the beautiful and brilliant D minor Quartet, Op. 11 by Tschaikowsky.

This work is the one in which the famous and popular Andante Cantabile is a movement, and which ends with a typically Russian trepak.

Gifted Teacher Was Inspiration

The New Century Quartet may not have played long together as a chamber ensemble, but the four members are friends of long standing and have shared many musical experiences, beginning in high school where they came under the stimulating influence of Mrs. Dorothy Evans.

They are, by the way, unanimous in acknowledging Mrs. Evans as having started them off on the right musical path, all having played in the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony Orchestra.

Also, they are all members of the National Youth Orchestra. Betty Gahn has been selected for four consecutive seasons; Corinne Field, for several; Norman is returning for his second year and for Don Kissinger this will be his first season.

Corinne is within a year of obtaining her B.Mus. degree from UBC, and plays in the Vancouver Symphony. Betty has completed her third year toward her BA and Don is a BSc in maths and physics. At present he is studying at Victoria School of Music.

Norman, who this week was awarded a Ford of Canada Canadian Centennial Performing Arts Scholarship, is a cello student of Hans Siegrist at the School of Music.

He was the first Victoria winner, three years ago, of the Congress of Strings $2,000 scholarship which allowed him to study for eight weeks at the Univeristy of Michigan.

Vital, earnest, an extrovert personality, Norman's enthusiasm when he discusses any music subject is infectious and never more so than when he is on his favorite—the quartet.

Cathedral Concert

Second in the new recital series at Christ Church Cathedral takes place Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Geoffrey Thornburn, assistant organist at the Cathedral is studying for his Associateship of the Royal Conservatory, Toronto, and Lynne Dougan, winner of the RCCO bursary in a music festival junior organ class, already has her ARCT with first class honors in piano, and after a few months study of the organ evinces a considerable degree of mastery of that instrument.

The two young organists will be heard in several fine numbers including works by Bach, Peeters, Purcell and Dupre.

A collection will be taken.

Banners to Herald Show Parade Dates

Banners will go up next week on the marquee of the old Safeway Stores Building on Douglas Street, near the Bay, which Festival Theatre Society has leased in a unique move to co-ordinate multiple-set construction and rehearsal space for its Show Parade 1965, administrator Allan M. Purdy said today.

"The banners announcing playdates will officially mark this headquarters building," Purdy said. "Unrestricted access to the centrally-located structure insures an economy of time and materials which will result in especially well-mounted productions."

He emphasized that the building's 6,875 square feet of usable space will allow for preparation of the four plays simultaneously. Early completion of sets will make possible rigorous rehearsal schedules for 60 actors, lighting technicians, costumers and property managers.

Show Parade will premiere Aug. 14 at McPherson Playhouse and will run daily except Sunday through Sept. 6. Complete program includes three major productions, special matinees of Children's Theatre and an international guest performer in an evening of music and ballet.

OPEN SHELF

By John Mika

How would you like to help produce a Dictionary of Canadianisms?

You'll get a chance during our national centennial in 1967 when the dictionary will be published by W. J. Gage Limited.

An open invitation to help with polishing it up and solving problems that have stumped the experts can be expected from Dr. M. H. Scargill, director of the Lexicographical Centre for Canadian English, who heads the research team.

His name sound familiar? It should be, he's a member of the University of Victoria faculty and it's quite a feather in our young university's cap that it has this research centre.

Certainly the Canada Council thinks so. It recently awarded $1,500 to the centre to help pay the costs of bringing the centre's associate director, Dr. W. S. Avis, here for the summer from Kingston where he is a professor at the Royal Military College.

They will be joined by Dr. Douglas Leechman, a retired anthropologist, and Charles Crate, an Alert Bay school teacher, for the preliminary editing of the 10,000-or-so words that will go into the first edition.

And that's where you might be able to help.

Anyone Can Get in on the Act

Dr. Scargill says that his team already is working on a supplementary list of words for the first revision which will include many of the words that have them stumped now on matters such as precise origin or pronunciation.

"We hope that people will be able to help us with these problems and when the dictionary does come out we also hope that they will write to us to add words we may have missed," he told me.

"This will be an historical book and help of that kind will be very important to the project."

The lexicographical centre's team has been working on this project off and on for a decade now.

It started with one more member, Charles Lovell, an American dictionary specialist, but be died five years ago.

That loss was a serious setback for the group but they have recovered and hope to see printing of the dictionary begin this December. Printing, proof reading and final editing will take more than a year but when the long struggle of these few men is over we will be richer for it as a nation.

And your help can be used if you have any special knowledge about some purely Canadian word or expression. When the time comes, look out for that dictionary—it will be one of the few you will find in your lifetime worth reading for its own sake.

Meanwhile . . .

Does anyone know how to pronounce Angkeok?

It's an Eskimo word for witch doctor and Dr. Scargill is not quite certain how it should be pronounced.

LOOKING AROUND AT ART

Duds and Delights in Jury Show

By ROBIN SKELTON

Not all the paintings in the current jury show at the Victoria Art Gallery are as exciting as the ones I mentioned last week, and I must admit that several times I wondered at the jury's charity. A Floral Montage by Doris Leedham Hobbs consists of a badly painted jug upon which dried flowers have been gummed with awful ingenuity.

Skelton

As an example of quaint idiosyncrasy this has its interest, but I can't see that its presence is justifiable on any other criteria than those of oddity.

Aileen Devereux's Birds of a Feather and Margaret Johnson's Sabots in March suffer from an opposite quality; they are quite simply dull and clumsily constructed. The former has areas of sheer sloppy workmanship, and the latter betrays no feeling whatsoever for the quality of paint.

W. B. L. Holms' Adoration of the Kings can justify its clumsiness, its naive use of color, and its poor drawing, by claiming to be a "primitive."

I am afraid that I feel that a "primitive," to be acceptable, must be more than gauche and whimsical; it must astonish us with a composition that may or may not be the result of a happy accident, but certainly causes in the spectator an excitement at structural and formal inventiveness.

Mr. Holms' work arouses in me only the most intense lethargy.

There must be such failures, I suppose, in all jury shows of this kind; the exhibition should represent all available manners as well as give us the best work submitted.

There are, in this show, a number of woodland scenes of acceptable competence, and a number of other commonplace works. Nevertheless, there are a far larger number of really stimulating works, of many different kinds.

Vicky Husband's Mykonos, for example, though little more than a travel sketch, is lyrical in feeling, and firm in construction.

The houses are sketched with an apparently off-hand ease, but the lines are precise in their use of hesitation and the color, so apparently haphazard, is most subtly related to the form and feeling of the whole.

This is not a great work, but it is well done, pleasing, and evocative. I hope we'll see more of Miss Husband's sketches.

Elizabeth Middleton's Indian ink Alprimex is promising rather than successful. The main part of the work is evocative of seashore rocks, the movement of water, and the slow erosions of time, and the technique used gives these forms a most sensual texture.

On the other hand, at the upper right hand of the picture, there are a series of quick slapdash ink lines that, by their carelessness, seem quite out of keeping with the remainder of the picture.

It is as if the artist got tired and simply filled in the blanks with squiggles and sweeps for want of a better idea.

Originality of subject matter is, of course, no criterion of artistic excellence.

Thousands of artists must have attempted to paint a building among trees, but very few have managed to produce such an evocative, mysterious, sensitive, and rhythmically complex work as A. H. Burrell, whose From the Studio, Maple Bay, is a complete answer to those zealots who state that all representational painting is meaningless in this day and age.

Mr. Burrell's work has all the rhythmic vitality that one demands from the more complex kinds of non-figurative painting, and it has as passionate a feeling for the quality of light as any French Impressionist.

Do not let the subject matter betray you into thinking this picture commonplace. Look at the paint. Look at the shapes. This is good stuff!

I have left myself very little space to comment on the other works that most pleased me (apart from those of Maxwell Bates, Ciccimarra, Harvey and Siebner, which, by a self-denying ordinance, I have decided not to enthuse about, though goodness knows they deserve enthusiasm).

The first of these other works is Pat Martin Bates' single print, Offrande a Une Ombre, which has all her usual inventiveness of texture, and more strength of composition than she usually manages. (Her larger work doesn't come off. It seems she has difficulties when working on a large scale.)

Then there's Biddy Gaddes' Meeting Place, in which forms that might be flesh, or might be stone, cluster together in disturbed sensibility, nuzzling, rubbing, stroking, and lying still.

It is sensitive in coloring, and if the over-all composition is a little tentative, this is more than compensated for by the strength of the forms at the centre.

Another interesting and bold work is Gwen Farquhar's Stretch of White. Notice the way the black forms reach into the white space, each one unlike its neighbor, each approaching the central question with a different gesture.

And having looked at all these, reserve some energy to look at, and admire Leslie J. Harper's Polite Letter With Margins. It is simply splendid.

I like it so much I don't want to talk about it: I just want to say "Coo! There's Painting for you!" Don't miss it.

Range and Sensitivity Displayed In Touching Story of a Deaf-Mute

NOT IN THE CALENDAR: A story of a friendship, by Margaret Kennedy; Macmillan Company of Canada; $4.25.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

Margaret Kennedy has written many novels between 1924, when her The Constant Nymph appeared, and 1961, which saw publication of The Forgotten Smile.

It is doubtful, however, if any of her works possess the range and sensitivity that is displayed in her latest work.

The life of a deaf mute would seem to be rather unpromising material to use in a novel of popular appeal, for, as Helen Keller described her own life, "A sense of isolation enfolds me like a cold mist as I sit alone and wait at life's shut gate. Beyond there is light and music, and sweet companionship; but I may not enter. Fate, silent, pitiless, bars the way."

It is the lifting of this sense of isolation that one witnesses in Margaret Kennedy's new novel.

It is the story of Wyn Harper, born without the power to hear or speak; through her own determination and gifts, she frees herself from the isolation of her life.

But the saint whose name does not appear in the calendar is Caroline Knevett, her friend.

She it is who first sees the possibilities of Wyn's sensitivity to shape and color; she, even as a child, recognizes the potentialities of the mind that cannot find normal expression.

It is Caroline who stands between the extremes represented by Wyn, and by her sister Flo, whose beauty, wit, and fortune would suggest that she was blessed among women.

It is Caroline who brings Wyn from the loneliness imposed by her misfortune, and Flo from the loneliness of age and bitterness back to the full and rich enjoyment of life.

The story covers the years from 1883 to 1938.

It traces the development of the genius of Wyn Harper as she grows into an artist of recognized merit. It also tells the story of the struggle undertaken by a few dedicated persons to change the attitude of the world towards the deaf mute.

Their efforts have been rewarded in that the physical limitations imposed by the afflication are now recognized, but no longer is the afflicted one regarded as a mentally deficient burden.

In a large measure the possibilities for training persons thus handicapped have been realized.

The skill with which Margaret Kennedy handles her material in Not in the Calendar enables her to avoid the pitfalls of sentimentality and moralizing.

Her characters are essentially human. Wyn's afflictions have created no feeling of self-pity and no humility, but rather an intense impatience with herself and with all others fumbling with the problems of communication.

Similarly, her saint is not saccharine: she enjoys life far more than she suffers from it.

Not in the Calendar is a well-written, thought-provoking novel. Most readers will derive from it a better understanding of a world that is limited and narrow and fraught with unusual problems.

At the same time, it brings to mind the realization that such a world is interesting and full of exciting potentials.

Fortunately, there are not too many Wyn Harpers in society, but their afflications and possibilities should not be ignored. Unfortunately, there are not enough Caroline Knevetts, but their capabilities and sacrifices should not go unnoticed.

Folk Lore Origins Claimed for Bard

"A NATURAL PERSPECTIVE: The Development of Shakespearean Comedy and Romance," by Northrop Frye. The Copp Clark Publishing Company, Toronto. 159 pages.

Reviewed by Rodney Poisson

Professor Frye has written elsewhere of Shakespeare that the subject matter of his poetry "is not life, or nature, or reality, or revelation, or anything else that the philosopher builds on, but poetry itself, a verbal universe".

In this latest book about Shakespeare's comedies and romances some readers might feel that the subject matter is not really Shakespeare but a fascinating exploitation of inventive scholarship.

Much of the book has to do with the theoretical origins of drama and narrative in ritual and folk tale—a field which Professor Frye has cultivated fruitfully.

Beneath the fairy story shape of the comedies with their linear plots, transparent complications and repeated motifs, we are directed to see layers of folk tale and (deeper still) ritual elements which identify them when they are viewed from a "middle distance".

At such distance Professor Frye instructs us to see the general shape, as it were, the archiac bones of the structure; but we discern nothing of the poetry because, of course, one doesn't read Shakespeare at that distance—usually.

Still these are stimulating and imaginatively erudite essays cleverly managed so that the general untidiness of the comedies and especially of the romances is neatly tucked into ritual patterns providentially on hand in Professor Frye's theory of comedy — a special blend of cultural anthropology and literary history.

The book is all very good fun and sends us back once again to the incomparable poet and master story teller of the stage.

Fine Presentation Of Exciting Period

CANADA UNDER LOUIS XIV, 1663-1701; W. J. Eccles; McClelland and Stewart. 275 pp. Index. Biblio. Photos. $8.50.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

Dr. Eccles, a professor of history at the University of Toronto, has written an excellent account of 17th century New France from 1663 to 1701.

One of the projected 17-volume "Canadian Centenary Series," this book not only upholds the high standard of those already in print, but sets a challenging mark for those to come.

The author describes a period filled with exciting events and outstanding men. Laval, Frontenac, d'Iberville, Talon, La Salle—these are but a few of the main characters on the stage of Canada in the late 17th century.

In the background is a struggle for survival against the wilderness, the Iroquois, the English colonies and at times, the neglect of the home government.

Dr. Eccles' description of this era is excellent. It is objective, exceptionally well-balanced, and based on thorough research supported with a deep knowledge of his period.

It is not often that a book, written by a professional, and designed to appeal both to historians and laymen alike, really achieves what the author sets out to accomplish.

In this case, Canada Under Louis XIV is an exception, and Dr. Eccles is to be congratulated on a remarkably fine work.

YOUNG CANADA'S BOOKSHELF

Napoleon's France Setting for Tale

SUBSTITUTE GENERAL, By John Redmayne; Macmillan of Canada; Toronto: $3.25.

Reviewed by Susan Mayse

Juvenile readers in the 10-to-14-age group will find Substitute General a lively and convincing historical novel.

This author, no stranger to the young audience, chooses for his setting France shortly after the Revolution — a fascinating era too often neglected by those who write for juveniles.

The Reign of Terror has come to its bloody close, having claimed the lives of many innocent people—among them the Irish father and French mother of young Peter Maclean, the book's hero.

The story opens as Napoleon Bonaparte, returned from his unsuccessful venture into Egypt, makes his way towards Paris.

Peter is drawn out of his uneventful life of helping his guardian tend an inn, to join the Corps of Guides under Napoleon's generals, Lannes and Murrat. He is swept into an important part in exposing a plot on Napoleon's life, masterminded by the corrupt Directors of France.

This is only the beginning; with never a boring moment, the story goes on to tell of Peter's adventures in post-Revolutionary Paris.

The author skilfully brings the age's famous characters to life, and especially gives a personal and warm account of Napoleon, following his career from Egypt to his coup d'etat over the French government.

Colloquialisms Reduce Poetry To the Mundane

THE CARIBOO HORSES, Alfred Purdy. McClelland and Stewart, Toronto. $4.50, $2.50 paper.

Reviewed by G. DOWNES

A good deal of poetry which follows the colloquial style of American verse stemming from Williams and the "beat" poets suffers from one great drawback.

The legitimate attempt to keep poetic rhythm in touch with common speach — an effort which must be made by each generation—ends up so often in poetry which is no more than common speech, the monotonous small change of unthinking conversation.

Alfred Purdy is a serious poet, and a good one, with what he calls his "third ear sharpening steadily" to guide his experience as an artist. But I find that in this volume, in spite of some fine poems, he is relying too much on effects of casual speech which has been typographically arranged on the page so as to suggest the poetic situation.

He is also trying to arrive at immediacy and vividness by the constant use of slang terms, expletives, and common obscenities. These pall after a while.

You do not come to grips with any of the real problems involved in the use of language to express intense experience merely by swearing.

'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD JACOBY

Some players just refuse to follow suit with an honor when they hold a low card in that suit. Once in a while this habit is going to cost a valuable trick.

If North and South had bid to three no-trump or if West had opened a low diamond, there would be no story.

NORTH 5

♥ 3 2

SOUTH (D)

♦ Q 4
♣ A

Both vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	1 N.T.	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♦ J.

Three no-trump is there in top cards but without the jack of diamonds opening South would have had no play for four hearts.

East won the first trick with his king of diamonds after the deuce was played from dummy and South automatically dropped his four spot. East returned a diamond and South won with his queen. Had South just taken time to think, he would have dropped the queen of diamonds under East's king and eventually would have made two diamond tricks by the simple expedient of finessing against West's ten.

However, South had hung on to his queen and now there was no normal way to get to dummy's ace of diamonds.

South drew three rounds of trumps. West discarded the five of diamonds to tell his partner that South did not hold it.

South played his ace of spades and West gave the contract right back. He hung on to his king. South's next play was to cash the ace of clubs and then he led a second spade. West was in with the king and led out the king of clubs.

South recovered from his bad play at trick one. He decided that West did not hold any more spades and discarded one spade loser on the king of clubs, whereupon West had to lead to dummy in either diamonds or clubs and allow South of get rid of his other spade loser.

PROFESSIONAL MANAGEMENT

A full-time caretaker and a full-time resident manager provide the best possible professional management at all times. Although we at Charter House wish the tenants to enjoy their suite and the recreational areas provided as they would their own home, we also insist that the rights of all tenants be protected at all times. Our professional management provides such a combination by inviting gracious and enjoyable living but at the same time restricting those activities which will disturb the peace and quiet of other tenants. This professional management combination also allows us to provide the convenience of allowing rentals to be paid at the building to the resident manager.

OAK BAY SOUTH

You really cannot see the house for the trees in this lovely ½-acre setting, yet it is only a few minutes away from buses, shops, stores and schools in one of our most prized areas. If location is important you have it here. If a good home is important you have that too, provided you do not mind doing a bit of modernization. The home of traditional architecture on two floors is not old, just mellowed and the room sizes are good throughout, but redecoration is needed which means you can choose your own colors and you might decide on a new kitchen. The living room is large with an open fireplace and the dining room very suitable for family or guest entertaining. On the main floor there is also a master bedroom and complete bathroom. Upstairs there are two more bedrooms and a two-piece bathroom. The home is heated by oil hot-water heat. This is not a large home, the location is exceptional and somewhere between $1,500 and $3,000, according to your taste spent on refurbishing, will make you the envy of all your friends. You will note that no wild claims have been made in describing this home. They are not necessary. Neither will any drive-by address be given. The owners are retiring people and do not wish to be bothered. Appointments to be made in strict rotation after the weekend. Truly outstanding value at $19,000. Jack Mears, EV 5-7707 anytime.

BIKINI WEEKEND COMING UP

Victorians will continue to bask in the hot sun and balmy breezes over the weekend, says weatherman Bill Mackie.

Present high temperatures which have brought on a rash of bikinis and beach bags around Victoria will continue for several days.

"The weekend will be essentially warm and sunny," says Mr. Mackie.

But the dry spell may have dangerous effects on the forest fire hazard rating, the Langford ranger station warned.

Another five or six days of hot weather may ruin the district's record of no forest fires reported so far.

The fire hazard rating, still only at "average," is considered "quite good" by forest service authorities, but they are concerned of the results continued hot weather may cause.

MAN CROSSES CENTRE LINE, FINED $300

An impaired driver was arrested early today after he crossed a double-solid line and passed an unmarked city police car at a speed estimated at 50 mph.

Matthew Thomson, 21, of 1032 McGregor, pleaded guilty when he appeared later in court.

Court was told he registered a blood alcohol count of .19 per cent.

Thomson told Magistrate William Ostler that he is a student. The magistrate, in imposing a $300 fine, told Thomson, "It is probably a hardship on you but you have to be treated as any other citizen."

Thomson was allowed to pay the fine at $50 a month. His licence was suspended.

VANIER PLEA:

'Also Learn French'

EDMONTON (CP) — Governor-General Georges Vanier Friday night appealed to English-speaking Canadians to learn French as a second language.

The governor-general, who Thursday advocated the learning of a second language to promote unity, told a Province of Alberta state banquet: "I wonder if today I might suggest that a happy choice for your new language might be French.

"For many years I have been telling my French-speaking compatriots of the boundless advantages for them in learning English . . .

"I have told them that the only hope for the unity of this country is to be found in the ability of our two minds to meet as one."

The governor-general, who himself speaks both French and English, said also: "If Canadians are to compete in the markets of the world, if we are to win friends and influence others to our way of thinking abroad, then a good knowledge of French is our first requirement."

Governor-General and Mrs. Vanier will arrive in Victoria Tuesday on their farewell tour of western Canada.

CRITICISM of the "armed unilateral intervention" in the Dominican Republic by the United States, has been lodged by Romulo Betancourt, former president of Venezuela. "This intervention, without any previous discussion in the Organization of American States is an act that must be repudiated," he said.

PEOPLE OUTNUMBERED

The United States is the only country in the world where there are more radio sets than people.

OPENS TUESDAY

Museum Relates Intriguing Tale

The new B.C. Maritime Museum opening Tuesday boasts a display of nautical treasures spanning more than two centuries of raw naval history.

From a recruiting poster of the Royal Navy, dated 1762, and a portable sundial used in 1750, to side-weapons used by the enemy sailors of the last war, the museum tells a fascinating story of pioneer courage and modern reality.

CENTRAL

Acquisition of the old Bastion Square court house building as a museum means the relics are displayed in a central spot where access will be easy for Victorians and visitors. Floor space has been increased three times with the possibility of further expansion.

The "old" museum was limited in space and facilities at its Esquimalt Road location.

In the new three-floor location provision has been made for all facets of a modern museum. There is space for two ship-lovers' clubs, the Thermopylae Club and the World Ship Society, period collection rooms, lecture rooms and a film library.

There are more than 3,200 "hardware items" catalogued. These include ship models (scale), shells, weapons, charts, etc. More than 5,000 pictures have also been catalogued and 2,000 books and logs are numbered.

Director, Col. J. W. Symons, feels the museum should eventually pay its own way.

In addition to the proceeds from the expected 75,000 visitors a year (at 50c per), the museum will reap profits from sale of books and memorabilia and from rental of club rooms.

The museum also hopes for a larger membership in the Maritime Museum Society. There are now 150 members; 1,000 are wanted.

The new museum will be officially opened at 4 p.m. Tuesday when Governor-General Georges Vanier, Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes, Premier W. A. C. Bennett and other officials unveil a commemorative plaque.

3 SLAIN IN BANK

Giant Posse Hunts Killer

BIG SPRINGS, Neb. (AP)—A huge posse spread out across the sprawling plains of western Nebraska and eastern Colorado today, hunting a gunman who killed three bank employees with shots in the back and wounded a fourth.

"Every available man in 100 miles is taking part," said Sheriff Floyd Stahr.

"I have no idea why he shot them," said county attorney Robert Richards. "They didn't resist when he told them to lay down on their stomachs."

The gunman fired eight times Friday as the four lay on the floor of the Farmers State Bank.

Killed was Andreas Kjeldgaard, 77, a bachelor who was president of the bank; Glenn Hendricksen, 59, the cashier; and Mrs. Lois Ann Hothan, 35, bookkeeper.

Franklin Kjeldgaard, 25, nephew of Andreas, was taken to a Denver hospital with wounds in the neck and back. The hospital said he is in critical condition.

GIVES DESCRIPTION

Franklin Kjeldgaard, barely able to talk, told police the man "didn't seem tough" when he entered the bank. He said the killer was about 35 and wore his hair crew cut. He was neatly dressed in a dark suit.

Only the senior Kjeldgaard and his three employees were in the bank. The man first asked about obtaining a loan. Then he pulled a pistol and ordered the four victims to lie on the floor, face down.

Franklin Kjeldgaard wasn't certain what happened next, But state authorities said the bandit looted the cash drawers of about $1,500, and then walked into the vault. He found the safe locked.

He then returned to the main room and started shooting. Sheriff Stahr said eight .22-calibre cartridge shells were found on the floor. They apparently were fired from an automatic pistol, he said.

The man got into a 1965 model car and drove unhurriedly away.

Sheriff's Home Ripped By Bullets

BOGALUSA, La. (AP)—Gunmen fired six bullets into the home of the chief deputy sheriff early today as officers pressed their investigation of a terrorist-style murder.

Chief Deputy Doyle Holiday, who lives about four miles out of town, said he rushed from his house and emptied his .38-calibre pistol at a fleeing car.

"Perhaps one of the shots did some damage but I am not sure," he said.

Two of the bullets fired by the nightriders ripped through the kitchen wall. Two hit an air conditioning unit and another lodged in the wall of a breezeway to the garage. The other could not be located.

The shooting came as state, federal and local officers pressed a massive investigation into the shooting of Washington Parish's first Negro deputy sheriff, O'Neal Moore.

A white man charged in the case, Ernest R. McElveen, 41, of Bogalusa, waived extradition Friday and was returned to Louisiana from Tylertown, Miss., where he was arrested.

Fifty state troopers, dozens of FBI agents and local officers were concentrated on seeking evidence in the killing of Deputy Moore.

Moore was shot in the head with a high power rifle Wednesday night as he drove a squad car along a highway, seven miles north of Bogalusa.

His squad car partner, Deputy Creed Rogers, also a Negro, was wounded by a buckshot blast.

ELLSWORTH BUNKER
. . . brings new plan?

Fresh Peace Team Operates in DR

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—The stalemated Dominican civil war marked its sixth week today with a fresh peace team of the Organization of American States trying to win a political settlement.

Six previous major efforts to negotiate an agreement ended in failure, including those by the United States, the OAS, the United Nations and the Vatican.

There were reports that the new, three-nation mission, authorized Wednesday by a special OAS conference, brought from Washington a plan for a swift OAS-supervised election. But OAS and U.S. government sources only would say that the election is one of a number of possible compromise solutions under consideration.

An OAS trusteeship, followed by an election, and a coalition provisional government are other possibilities.

REJECT FORMULA

The Dominican rebels already have rejected an election formula proposed by the civilian-military junta. The rebels have demanded restoration of the 1963 constitution and creation of a new government before an election.

The new OAS peace effort was launched Friday when its commission met with Msgr. Emanuele Clarizio, the papal nuncio, and with U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett. The Vatican's representative was one of the first to attempt to mediate the conflict.

Members of the peace team are Ellsworth Bunker, U.S. ambassador to the OAS; Ilmar Penna Marinho of Brazil and Ramon de Clairmont Duenas of El Salvador.

The remaining 2,000 U.S. marines, of an original leatherneck force of 6,000, prepared, meanwhile, to leave the Dominican Republic over the weekend.

The rest of the U.S. force, 12,500 paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division and 700 air force personnel, have been integrated into the newly formed inter-American force under formal control of the OAS.

Man Fined $75 After Hit-Run

A motorist who voluntarily went to police, got off with only a $75 fine Friday for hit-and-run driving.

Daniel Lowe, 20, of 315 Maitland, drove off after hitting a parked car in the 400 block Langford Street early on the morning of May 22.

He went to police later in the day and said he was the driver involved. Magistrate William Ostler said he would impose a smaller fine in view of this and the fact that Lowe knew no one had been injured by the collision.

New Crackdown In South Africa

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — A further South African government crackdown on people convicted of political offences and of known or suspected Communists was disclosed here today.

Two bills were published in Parliament—a "suppression of communism amendment bill" and a "criminal procedure amendment bill."

They extended for another year a law permitting authorities to indefinitely detain people convicted of sabotage or political offences after their sentences have been completed.

Communists or persons convicted under the 1950 "Suppression of Communism" Act are barred from holding any legal posts. Nothing can be published of anything said or written by anyone prohibited under the act from attending gatherings.

Persons can be prohibited from advocating, advising, defending or encouraging Communist aims outside South Africa under the amendments.

Wide powers go to the attorney-general to detain for up to six months state witnesses in trials.

Bail can be refused by the attorney-general for an indefinite period to people arrested under a wide variety of charges including sabotage, Communist activities, treason, sedition, murder and arson.

No court will be able to countermand the attorney-general's decision.

Clam Fishing Warning Out

The provincial health department today warned against clam and mussel fishing anywhere in the Gulf of Georgia. A health department spokesman said tests have established the shellfish have shown a dangerous level of toxicity from red tide poisoning.

The entire gulf is being considered in danger of red tide until further tests manage to isolate poisoned areas.

The spokesman said a post-mortem on a Powell River man who died early this week after a clam feast showed he definitely died of red tide poisoning.

Four persons who were with him are in hospital recovering from severe illness and paralysis.

INFECTED AREAS

The health department spokesman said government-imposed bans on shellfishing may be imposed in infected areas pending results of tests now under way.

The ban is directed mainly at holidayers who dig clams for their own use.

Commercial canning destroys toxicity in shellfish.

The last red tide outbreak on Canada's west coast occurred in 1957, when about 60 illnesses but no deaths were reported. Four persons died during an earlier red tide outbreak in 1942.

The spokesman said there is a slight possibility that oysters could also be affected by red tide.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Minister's Wife Set To Launch New Ferry

The government ferry, Powell River Queen, will be launched June 15 in Victoria by Mrs. Kenneth Kiernan, wife of B.C.'s recreation minister.

The 207-foot ferry is one of three 50-car, 240-passenger craft being built by Victoria Machinery Depot this year.

The Mayne Queen will be launched in September and the Bowen Queen in November.

Powell River Queen should go into service this August on the Jervis Inlet route, replacing the Jervis Queen.

The Mayne Queen will take the Gulf Island route between Mayne and Saturna and the Bowen Queen will be on the Snug Cove-Horseshoe Bay run.

In September, the $6,000,000 Queen of Prince Rupert, which will inaugurate the Route of the Haidas from Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert, is scheduled for launching at VMD.

PENDER ISLAND — Work will start here next week on a new ferry dock at Otter Bay.

CAMPBELL RIVER—Lack of signs at the Comox ferry landing has the Chamber of Commerce here worried. Only one sign has been erected, directing traffic left to Courtenay.

Campbell River Chamber will write Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and urge erection of a large sign showing "right" route to Campbell River. They will also ask for several finger signs along the way to keep the cars coming here.

Tourist and publicity committee member C. Corbett said it was only fair that the route to Campbell River be shown and that any traffic directed here would not hurt Courtenay.

"In fact, if tourists come to Campbell River, we can probably keep them on the Island an extra day and Courtenay will still get them on the way back."

PREPARING PROTEST SIGNS for today's march on RCAF Station Comox Friday night was member of peace marchers at tent headquarters in Comox. Marchers plan summer-long campaign against nuclear arm at the Vancouver Island base.

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

Curlers Study Own Rink

DUNCAN—Alan Taylor, president of Duncan Curling Club said Friday that plans for building a new rink are still in the exploratory stage but the outlook is favorable.

The club at present uses the city rink owned by Cowichan Co-operative Association.

Mr. Taylor said the association is having trouble with the arena plant and has been unable to guarantee curlers a lease on the premises next year.

A special meeting of the curling club executive has been called for Wednesday.

FINANCIAL PLANS

Committees will report on their investigations of the financial aspects of building their own five-sheet ice rink.

Mr. Taylor said: "We are just looking into the possibility, but indications are favorable that we will embark on a new home for the club."

He said two possible sites are under examination.

The Co-operative Association had been given a June 1 deadline to give the club a lease for next season.

Association president George Whittaker, said they have not been able to pinpoint the leakage in the rink pipe system.

The association cannot grant a lease until the trouble is fixed but he hopes the plant will be 100 per cent operational in two weeks.

If the curlers built their own premises the present rink will be available for skating all winter instead of just a few weeks.

Speaking as a municipal councillor, Mr. Whittaker said it would be regrettable if the curling club built a rink independently.

He would like to see their money go toward a joint district sports complex to include a rink and other facilities, including a swimming pool.

Pearkes Sets Tour of Island

Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes will make his annual tour of Vancouver Island villages starting June 13.

Police Ghosts on Prowl For Traffic Offenders

PORT ALBERNI — Ghost cars are being used by RCMP here in a bid to cut down traffic accidents.

The unmarked cars will patrol the area throughout the busy summer months as part of a special safety campaign.

The local detachment is also manning radar traps in a bid to clamp down on careless motorists.

Chief target of the ghost cars will be speedsters, especially in playground areas.

Sgt. Roley Harding, in charge of the detachment, said there were 23 accidents in May each resulting in more than $100 damage.

One person was killed, four injured and there were 80 prosecutions for traffic violations.

Said the sergeant: "Particular attention will be paid to playground and recreation areas.

"More children will be using these facilities and I earnestly appeal to all motorists to seriously observe all posted speed limits in these areas.

"Exercise of proper caution can do much to prevent serious injury to junior citizens."

He also appealed to parents to caution their children about the necessity of road safety.

Last month's fatality was a young child crossing the street.

Rotary Auction At Campbell R. Set on June 12

CAMPBELL RIVER—A king-sized auction will be held here Saturday, June 12.

Over $5,000 worth of new merchandise has been donated by local businessmen and industrial firms for the Rotary Club's auction on the Tyee Plaza.

A bonded auctioneer from Maynard's in Victoria will auction more than 250 articles.

Several events will tie-in with the auction and lend some color and excitement. A parade through the downtown streets starting at 9:30 will lead the way to the auction grounds.

Parade will be led by the Campbell River and District Band and include contestants in the Miss Campbell River contest.

Another highlight of the day will be selection by the Miss Campbell River contestants of a "Mr. Campbell River." This will be a candidate from one of the service clubs and is strictly for laughs.

You don't need Montreal Trust 'Investment Services' to cruise among the Islands...(but it helps)

If you spend considerable time looking after your investments when you'd much rather be cruising, or devoting that time to your profession or business, the Investment Management Service of Montreal Trust may be your answer.

Investment specialists at Montreal Trust, on the other hand, are in a key position to approach the servicing of your securities on a thoughtful, systematic, expert basis. You'll probably find that they'll help increase your returns and more than compensate for the modest fees charged for this service.

You may discuss your portfolio with this Officer as often as you wish; he will act promptly on receipt of your instructions; between periodic reviews he will contact you should circumstances warrant an immediate decision.

So, you retain full control over your own securities but you benefit as well from the expert care and watchful eye of Montreal Trust.

'Hideous Building' Spoils Site

Perhaps because its name is apt to revive memories of hours at school spent grappling with the Napoleonic wars, The Italian island of Elba has not quite the romantic overtones of Capri or Corfu; but it is hardly less spectacular, and deserves to be more widely known for its own sake.

Napoleon was exiled there 150 years ago this year (in May to be exact) and left barely 10 months later at the start of the hundred days which ended at Waterloo. He lived partly in Portoferraio and partly at a small villa at St. Martino. From the broad terrace in front of the house, the countryside can be seen stretching all the way to the Bay of Portoferraio and the mountains beyond.

It is a view which can hardly have changed since Napoleon's day—except for a hideous building which was built originally as a hotel about 50 years ago at the foot of the drive leading up to the villa and is now a convent or seminary.

BEAUTIFUL ISLAND

Such blemishes apart, Elba is a beautiful island and not inundated by tourists, not even in August. The inhabitants themselves are extremely cordial. The island is mountainous, rich in minerals, and has excellent beaches around its coast.

Etruscan as well as Roman remains are visible in many parts of the island, but the most conspicuous relics of the past are the well-preserved forts and towers built in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries to repel invaders at strategic points like Portoferraio, the small main town, and Point Focardo near Porto Azzurro.

Expo Studies Automatic Train System

MONTREAL—An automatic train control system—the first of its kind in North America—is being considered for the mass transit service at the 1967 World Exhibition in Montreal.

The control system, operated from a computer centre where the location of trains is shown on a large map, will automatically start, accelerate, decellerate and stop the trains in each of the five stations on the system.

The rail system, called Expo Express, is 3.5 miles in length, with the stations in the five major locations of the site.

The Expo Express trains, expected to be six in number, will be manned by motormen and guards. The proposed automatic control system, from which the motorman may take control if necessary, is designed to make the Expo Express the safest possible transit service on the continent.

'Land of Morning Calm' . . . Especially on Cheju

SEOUL, Korea — Of the many cultures in the world Korea has evolved a way of life that is distinct, even among the countries of the Orient. In addition to the conflict of just over a decade ago, Koreans have seen many invaders come and go—many alien cultures thrust upon them—but still they have retained the charm and grace for which they are widely known.

The historical name of Korea, "Cho-sen," means, "Land of the Morning Calm," according to the Pacific Area Travel Association.

A visitor to Korea will soon discover why. Especially if he visits fabled Cheju Island, site of beautiful Mt. Halla and famed for its climate and its deep-sea diving women.

* * *

The people of the Korean peninsula, living on the mountainous, forested tip of land jutting southward from the northeastern part of the Asian Continent, are said to be descendants of migratory tribes from Central Asia and the Caucasus. Their way of life was born from that potpourri; was raised and molded by the great dynasties of Silla, Koguryo and Yi, and gained its foothold in the feudal capitals of Onyang, Booyu and Kyongju as many as two thousand years ago.

The traveler in modern Korea can visit these cities of ancient history as well as places of more recent interest such as Panmunjom and Seoul.

* * *

But the adventurous visitor who wants to mix ancient customs with comfortable vacationing heads for lovely Cheju Island. On that old volcanic isle, 60 miles southwest of the tip of Korea, much of the old way of life can still be seen while at the same time one can hunt, fish, swim or just plain relax in the sun.

Flights to the island are scheduled twice a week from Seoul. Daily sea runs leave from the main Korean ports at lower fares. Two good hotels, the Choonchun Tourist Hotel and the Sogwipo Tourist Hotel, offer both Korean and western accommodations for $3.50 to $7.90 per night.

Geography and a slightly different historical background have set Cheju apart from the mainland so that now it has an atmosphere all its own. The houses are surrounded by high stone walls and have grass-thatched roofs. Because the climate is nearly constant the year round, very few buildings on the island have the heating systems that were invented by the Koreans for the mainland houses—brick lined flues or tunnels beneath the floor through which the heat from the fire is circulated, the original radiant heating.

* * *

Cheju's land is cultivated differently too. Very few rice fields are seen because surface water is not too available. There is plenty for the cities, and farm houses, of course, but rice must live in water for much of its growing time so millet and barley are raised as substitutes.

The grasslands of Cheju today were formerly covered with heavy forests, but these gave way to the ship-builders at the time of the Mongol invasion of Japan in 1274.

The forests were never replaced and islanders developed a grazing economy that still supports them. With this farming life come the quaint folkways that have been handed down, unchanged, for centuries. Colorful costumes and strange musical instruments are commonplace during the many island festivals.

* * *

Mt. Halla is the focal point of the island. Deep within a central valley, the extinct volcano which originally formed the island rises 6,239 feet above sea level. There are many beautiful waterfalls in the highlands and in the crater of the massive mountain is a cool, dark-blue lake — "Paeknok-dam"—whose nine-mile perimeter is shaded by thick groves of wild cherry, maple, oak and pine trees.

The Samsong and Kim Myong Caves are favorite sightseeing stops and the guides tell many stories about the monsters that ouce lived in their depths. Despite these legendary "dangers," the caves are fun to explore.

As if these wonderful natural surroundings, the friendly agrarian people, and the fine hunting and fishing that can be arranged on Cheju weren't enough, the visitor has another reason for making the trip to the island. Over hundreds of years the women of Cheju have developed the literally breathtaking technique of staying underwater for many minutes as they collect sea food for the dinner table.

Diving to depths more than 150 feet, without aqua-lungs or any other artificial devices, these hearty women are world-famous for their skills.

And speaking of sea food, Cheju restaurants are noted for what they do to bass, lobster, shrimp and the many other fish and shell-fish from those semi-tropical waters.

'TT Dollar' Adopted

Trinidad and Tobago has officially named its new unit of currency the "TT Dollar," written TT$1 or $1(TT). The new unit replaces the regional West Indian (WI or "Beewee") dollar in the two islands. The value, however, remains unchanged. The TT dollar and the WI dollar are presently worth about 63 cents in Canadian funds.

ADVICE TO CANADIANS:

Don't Eat Any Hot Dogs

PARIS (Reuters) — Hot dogs and bowler hats are among things Canadian tourists visiting France are being advised to avoid these days.

The French, who have a hard time distinguishing Canadians from Americans and Englishmen, have come up with a leaflet of advice aimed at visitors from Canada.

The leaflet, issued by the French tourism commission, tells Canadians how they can avoid confusion about their nationality.

The leaflet, "Enjoying France as a Canadian," advises prospective visitors:

- Carry a maple leaf or beaver sticker on your luggage.
- Don't over-patronize hot-dog stands.
- Avoid dressing or acting like a Texan.
- Don't wear a bowler hat.

"Although some 90,000 Canadians visit France every year, the average Frenchman is still unable to distinguish a Canadian at first sight as he can with several other nationalities," the leaflet says.

"Most Canadians welcome this chance to be anonymous, but many would like to avoid being mistaken for an American or Englishman, the two most obvious faux pas."

LIST FALLACIES

The leaflet lists "Five fallacies you'll likely be quizzed on concerning Canada" as:

- "Oh, they do speak English in Canada?"
- "Does it snow all the year round?"
- "Lester Pearson's been 'president' for nearly 15 years now, hasn't he?"
- "Is it true that Canadians on one side of Canada are going to bed while those on the other side are getting up?"

Port Townsend 'More Victorian!'

Victoria is historical but Port Townsend, Washington, is more historical.

So say a group of local enthusiasts who will tour the stately old-world buildings of Port Townsend on Saturday, June 12.

"We are not going as a club or a reformist organization," says Mrs. Mary Graham, 873 Royal Oak Avenue. "We are just a group of friends who love old buildings and the architecture of the mid-Victorian era.

"Any other enthusiasts who care to join us will be welcome."

The group will leave here June 12 on the 10:15 a.m. ferry to Port Angeles, then drive 53 miles to Port Townsend.

They will be conducted over the town by Jerry Simpson, who has published an illustrated booklet on Port Townsend.

Persons wishing to join the tour are invited to contact Mrs. Graham at GR 9-4776.

Port Townsend, situated off the northeastern tip of Washington's Olympic Peninsula, was founded in 1851. It began as a farming community and was intended to be the capital of Washington.

That honor went to Olympia, but Port Townsend has been preserved as a city of old buildings, offering a wide variety of style and architecture.

Mrs. Graham declined comment when asked if she thought Victoria should follow Port Townsend's example.

"We are not a reformist group," she said.

Bridge Expert On Pacific Trip

Bridge enthusiasts all over the country will have a chance to cruise the South Pacific this fall and at the same time earn master points under the supervision of one of the world's undisputed bridge experts.

Lectures, quizzes and tournaments will be held under the direction of Alan Truscott aboard the 45,000-ton Canberra, flagship of P&O-Orient's world-wide fleet. Truscott is bridge editor of the New York Times and was a member of the winning British team in the European championships in 1962. He is also editor of the Encyclopedia of Bridge.

Devotees of bridge may join the Canberra at Port Everglades, Florida, on Sept. 22 or at Vancouver, Oct. 6 for a voyage across the Pacific to Australia.

En route, the Canberra calls at Honolulu and Auckland before arriving at Sydney for a four-day stay. The superliner is scheduled to return to the West Coast where the bridge holiday ends Nov. 12. On the return voyage, the Canberra will call at Rarotonga, a new port on P&O-Orient's Pacific route.

Between ports, Truscott will give lectures daily in first and tourist classes for beginners and experienced players and will conduct two Canberra Pair Tournaments. The tournaments are endorsed by the American Contract Bridge League.

Cost of the P&O-Orient's bridge holiday starts at $1,075 from Port Everglades and $890 from Vancouver.

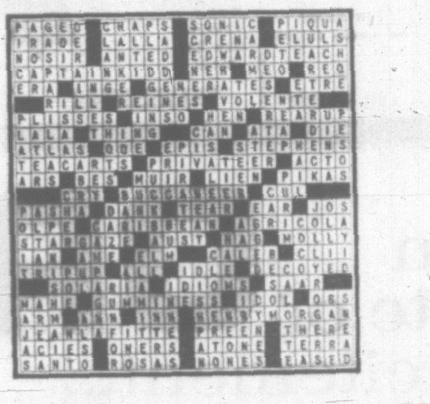
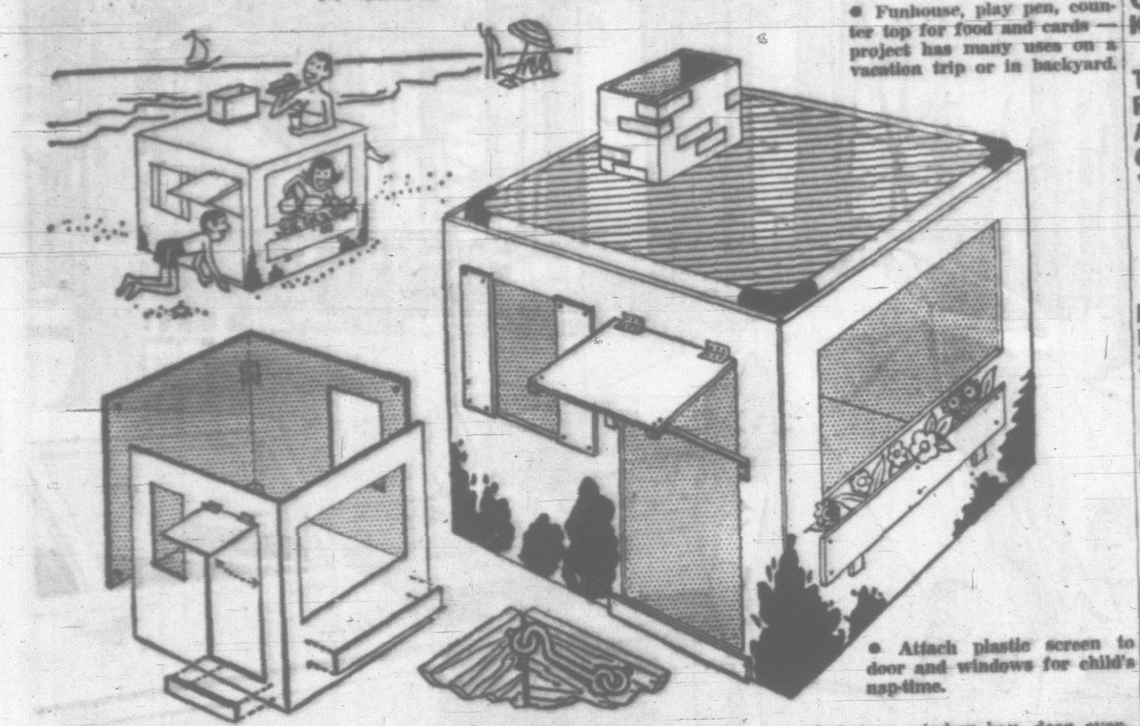
Answers to Previous Puzzle



A TAKE-ALONG PLAYHOUSE



● Funhouse, play pen, counter top for food and cards — project has many uses on a vacation trip or in backyard.

● Attach plastic screen to door and windows for child's nap-time.

Act 1, Scene 1: "School's out. Hurrah, hurrah!" cries Junior, with youthful exuberance.

Act 1, Scene 2 (several days later): "What is there to do?" asks Junior, bored with canned recreation.

A co-operative project for parents and child can give this drama happy ending. Then take-along playhouse pictured at right is an example of a device the whole family can pitch in to construct and enjoy. Dad can supervise cutting and assembly. Small fry can assist with sanding and decorating. Mom takes over with foodstuffs (which are literally on the house) when project is completed.

Materials needed and assembly details:

1—Card table.

1—4' by 8' sheet of playwood or hardboard.

Hinges, screws, nails, hooks and eyes, etc.

Screening, if desired.

Construction: Cut sides from plywood or hardboard to table's dimensions. Cut out door and windows with small saw in sizes desired. Use wood trim to reinforce door at bottom.

Fasten hinges to opposite corners; likewise hooks and eyes (see illustration for details).

Sandpaper all edges.

Any number of attractive "extras" may be added: Shutters, window box, door overhang, chimney, etc. Some of these can be made from leftover plywood or hardboard.

There's an alternate idea for girls: Squares of cloth can be sewn together into an envelope forming a practical play tent.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

The writer recently came across a little book which was published in London in Nov. 1929 at 5 shillings, but which today is a collector's item for which you would probably have to pay $25 or more.

It is called "Philately Under the Lamp — The Death of the Forgery," and its whole purpose is to expose the seamier side of stamp dealing as it was practised at the time it was written.

The reason the book is so rare today is because the scandalized stamp trade, especially the members of it whose shortcomings were the subject of the publication, banded together and bought up every available copy and destroyed the lot!

The author was Herbert Eastwood, who himself was a dealer of sorts; in fact his own transactions were such that would certainly enable him to know what he was talking about, for he sold fakes and forgeries to other dealers and to philatelic associations for "reference purposes"!

The book derives its name from the fact that it was just about this time that the "quartz lamp" had become recognized as a marvellous aid in spotting repaired stamps and forgeries—in fact today it is infallible for this purpose.

It makes use of the principle that materials with diffferent chemical bases (papers and dyes, for instance) flouresce each in their own way, although they may appear identical to the unaided eye.

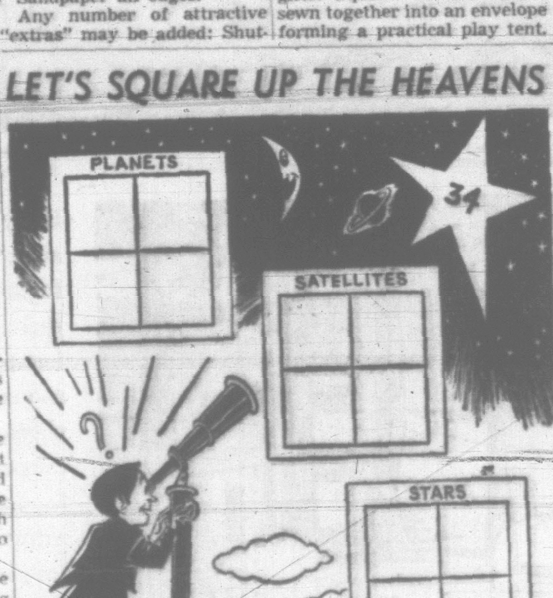
Thus a margin added to some rarity which had been lacking in this respect (an easy job for expert repairers), not to mention other types of "invisible mending," will show up under the lamp in a most embarrassing fashion!

Also, though a pen-marked or colored cancellation can be expertly bleached out of a stamp, seemingly restoring it to its pristine condition, the quartz lamp will cause the stains to re-appear as indelibly as the famous spot which put Lady Macbeth into such a tizzy!

The author was reviled heartily by the stamp trade at the time as an ill bird that fouled its own nest; but he had been careful not to mention names unless he had good proof for his statements.

Also, his assets were nil, so no libel actions resulted.

LET'S SQUARE UP THE HEAVENS



Listed below are names of twelve celestial bodies. You are asked to identify each body listed, and insert its number in any square under the proper heading. Correctly inserted, numbers will total 34 in each of the three related categories.

Oberon—9	Venus—6
Pollux—13	Titan—14
Ganymede—7	Sirius—8
Pluto—12	Deimos—4
Polaris—3	Mercury—15
Earth—1	Regulus—10

Answer: Planets are Pluto, Earth, Mercury and Venus. Satellites are Ganymede (Jupiter), Deimos (Mars), Oberon (Uranus) and Titan (Saturn). Stars are Polaris, Sirius, Regulus and Pollux.

New 'Lost Generation' Emigrates to Europe Sunday 10 p.m., 2, 6

Drama Highlights Forced Retirement Issue Telecast Sunday at 11:05 p.m., Channel 5

The lost generation set the pattern nearly 40 years ago, and its members were immortalized in stories by Hemmingway, Fitzgerald and Callaghan. Ever since, countless thousands of young Canadians and Americans have gone off to France and Spain "in search of themselves."

But what happens to the North American expatriate once he's thrown off the yoke of respectability and nine-to-five routine? A group of young Canadians who have done just that are the subject of Running Away Backwards, an off-beat documentary to be seen on the Human Camera series Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Canadian film maker Allan King took a camera crew to Ibiza, one of the Balearic Islands off the coast of Spain, to direct this documentary-drama.

It is an island that appeals to young North Americans because of its "cosy morals and nice low prices."

The "hero" of Running Away Backwards is Richard Gardner, a young novelist who has found complete freedom on Ibiza.

To a newly-arrived couple from Montreal he expounds the joys of expatriate living, the escape from puritanical Anglo-Saxon attitudes, the liberation of the soul.

Altogether there are about 1,000 such "escapees" in Ibiza. Are they happy the way they are? Is this Paradise?

To Dick and Jeannette Susskind, fresh from Montreal's big-city grind, it looks that way at first.

But Dick is quickly disillusioned. "You play at work," he tells Gardner, "make just enough money to keep yourselves going in a place with an abysmal standard of living.

"You play at sex because you're not capable of a real relationship. You play at living in a sort of half-baked Utopia where you make up the rule to fit whatever you like doing.

"And you put down everything and everyone back home because you haven't got the moral guts to live up to your responsibilities in the real world."

Joseph Schildkraut stars as a workman whose fear of growing old leads to tragedy in "Whose Little Girl Are You?" an Arrest and Trial episode to be aired at 11:05 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5.

Henry Weber (Schildkraut) is employed in a die-cast factory owned by his brother-in law, who refuses to accept implications that Weber is too old.

The brother-in-law, the foreman and an ambitious young worker all are present when Weber fails to execute a die cast and, in angry frustration, accidentally injures the owner.

Police investigate the incident, and their warning that Weber is potentially dangerous is ignored by the district attorney.

At home, Weber learns that his daughter is ashamed of her father and compares him to her more sophisticated uncle.

That night Weber returns to the factoy, finding the ambitious workman using his machine. When the younger man suggests Weber retire, he attempts to prove that his work is as good as ever.

Weber's efforts again are unsuccessful, and he strikes out at the machine with a sledge hammer. The younger workman's attempt to stop him ends in tragedy.

A panel of six men—two of whom have tried to take their own life—will discuss "Suicide—Why Do People Kill Themselves?" on "Open End," at 11:30 Sunday morning on Channel 5. The panel includes:

Peter Putnam, who tried to take his life when he was in college, and is now a lecturer and author of "Cast Off the Darkness."

Ernest Reid, 22, who made three attempts on his life about a year ago. Now an electronics technician who works part-time with Rescue, Inc., in Boston.

Dr. Robert E. Litman, psychiatrist, director of the Suicide Prevention Centre in Los Angeles since 1953.

The Rev. Kenneth B. Murphy, founder and president of Rescue, Inc.

Edward Ellis, co-author of "Traitor Within — Our Suicide Problem."

Dr. Herbert Hendin, who has spent 15 years researching the problem of suicide and is on the faculty of the Columbia University Psycho-analytic Clinic.

The panel will tackle such questions as: Why do people attempt suicide? What should you do if someone tells you they would like to take their own life? Why is the suicide rate among students so high?

* * *

They also probe various reasons for suicidal attempts; why the suicide rate is higher among whites than Negroes; the suicide rate in California (the world's highest), and myths surrounding suicide.

An apprasial of Japanese trade will be made on "Viewpoint," Saturday, at 6:30 p.m. over Channel 4.

Several U.S. officials and business leaders recently completed a mission to the Orient, and while they were in Japan loud crys were heard calling for a boycott of Japanese products.

This was made because of the continuing infringment on American fishing rights by the Japanese.

Lately, there has been discussion by Congress of a possible bill which would protect American fishing rights, by increasing import duties.

Participants in the program include John Fluke, member of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, and Archie McLean, vice-president of the King County Labor Council.

ROGER SMITH

Strip's Star Stops Streak, Starts Shine

HOLLYWOOD—The world lost a potentially hotshot carpenter or perhaps a rich crop-dusting pilot when fortune smiled on Roger Smith, erstwhile star of the defunct "77 Sunset Strip" video series.

When Smith was dropped from the faltering show, some two years ago, he couldn't find work in show business.

And after more than a year of inactivity his nest egg was dissipated, not to mention scrambled. He began borrowing money from friends.

"I built a deck for my home in the valley," the actor said, "and was offered a job as a carpenter at $130 a week.

"Another friend wanted to take me into his crop-dusting business. A good crop-duster can earn $40,000 a year. But it requires special schooling and licensing, and I couldn't afford it.

"I knew I had to go to work when I began borrowing money. I decided not to become a bum. I was still trying to decide whether to become a carpenter or a crop-duster when the big break came.

"I was offered a two-week run in 'Sunday in New York' in Milwaukee with Kathy Nolan at $1,000 a week. I needed the money, and it was a big improvement over the $120 carpenter's job."

SMASH HIT

Roger was a smash hit in his role. The word got around.

"I wanted to be really good in the play," he grinned, "and I wound up touring in the production for 2½ months, working up to $1,700 a week."

The blond, personable Smith hired a new manager and began singing in night clubs. He put together a comedy act and began knocking down $2,500 a night for concerts.

A bright lad who can count to 20 without removing his shoes, Roger decided show business was infinitely more remunerative than banging his thumbs with a hammer or skimming over lettuce crops with a planeful of fertilizer.

During his renaissance as a performer he also divorced his wife—actress Victoria Shaw—and became something of a man-about-town.

ROMANCE

His current romance is with Ann-Margaret, one of the sexiest glamor girls on the Hollywood scene. They ride motorbikes together for kicks.

Smith is capping his comeback with the title role in the new series "Mr. Roberts" back at his old studio, Warner Bros.

He had been under contract for eight years, working for what amounts to coolie wages by movie standards.

Under his new terms he is earning three times as much as in the old days and owns part of the series. He also gets 10 weeks off a year to make movies.

Roger owns his own airplane now and hopes sometime in the future to buy a private jet.

"I think that 18-month layoff was good for me in every way," he said. "It gave me a bearing on my career and changed my sense of values. I know where I'm going now, and I know how to get there."

Less than a year ago Smith was broke. Today he's rich, a dashing romantic figure around town and he has a glittering future.

Art Treasures Filmed

Mona Lisa, Masters, Exhibited from Louvre Monday and Tuesday

Berlin Blockade Creates City Under Siege Exposed Monday at 7 p.m. on Channel 5

The "Golden Prison" for one of the world's greatest art collections, France's Louvre is a monumental work of art in itself. The structure of this former royal palace is a visual chronicle of French history since 1190.

Presentation of the film will be Monday at 9:00 p.m. on Channel 8 and Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Narrator Charles Boyer offers vignettes of the Louvre's royal occupants, and views of the art they purchased, inherited and took by conquest.

Films highlight the 1940 evacuation, in which all of the Louvre's treasures were successfully hidden from the Nazis.

Works shown include those of Leonardo da Vinci, whose Mona Lisa is the Museum's most popular painting.

Also featured is Rubens, creator of the series glorifying Marie de Medici and Henry IV; David, leading painter of the Napoleonic era; Delacroix, who expressed France's revolutionary spirit in Victory at the Barricades and the modern masters Van Gogh, Cezanne, Manet, Degas and Renoir.

Lucy Jarvis produced this critically acclaimed tour of the palace-museum, first telecast last November, which marked the first time American TV cameras were allowed inside the Louvre.

Sidney Carroll wrote the script, Tom Priestley was the cameraman and Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Norman Dello Joio wrote and conducted the score.

Harry Truman recalls the crisis he faced when, on April 19, 1948, West Berlin was cut off from the West, in "City Under Siege," a "Decisions" program to be aired at 7 p.m. Monday on Channel 5.

With the blockade of West Berlin, a terrifying dilemma had been thrust upon the president.

The failure of Western Allies to act quickly would mean starvation for West Berliners. Abandonment would mean another Russian takeover.

But the use of force might precipiate a third world war while Europe still was living in the rubble of the Second World War.

So President Truman chose another alternative: He would use America's air might to airlift food and other necessities to the beleaguered city.

Soon, plane after plane was departing from America's far-flung bases and landing in West Berlin.

Mr. Truman recalls in this filmed episode: "There was always a chance that some trigger-happy Russian pilot might light a powder keg and create a situation that would cause trouble for all of us."

But the airlift was successful and on May 12, 1949, the blockade was lifted.

"Return to the Stone Age," the first motion picture record of the primitive aborigines of Arnhem Land in Northeastern Australia, is the premiere episode for "Expedition," Monday at 7 p.m. over Channel 4.

The film was made during a joint expedition by the Smithsonian Institution, the National Geographic Society and the Australian government for the first study of the sea coast aborigines whose existence has scarcely changed in 50,000 years.

Physically a relic of the oldest human stock, these Australian aborigines have no agriculture, no pottery, no bows and arrows. However, they are most adept at using the natural materials around them.

From branches and bark of the eucalyptus tree they make their houses and canoes.

The men hunt game and fish.

The women grind roots and berries and search for edible grubs and small lizards.

Highlights of the film include primitive rituals, shots of egg-laying and flying mammals long extinct in other parts of the world, giant lizards, magical cave and bark paintings, and the sacred dance of the big red kangaroo.

The founding of the Heart newspaper empire is dramatized in the true "Death Valley Days" episoed, "The Paper Dynasty" at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, on Channel 5.

William Randolph Hearst (James Hampton) takes over the family newspaper, the San Francisco Examiner, as a reward for his work in the political campaign that elected his father to the U.S. Senate.

Taking over the paper, young Hearst immediately starts to build its sagging circulation by hiring popular gossip-columnist, Ambrose Bierce (James Lanphier) and the country's first sob sister, Annie Laurie (Lory Patrick).

Although the paper's circulation increases, the Examiner continues to lose money.

Sincerely believing that a newspaper belongs to its readers, Hearst starts an all-out war with the powerful railroad barons.

On the verge of bankruptcy, his father's political advisor, Michael Tarpey (Henry Beckman), brings in a $50,000 political advertising program that saves the paper, and launches one of the most successful publishing empires in journalistic history.

Viewers are taken on an adventure journey into the "Amazonas" on "It's a Small World," Wednesday at 7 p.m. over Channel 4.

For that portion of their land drained by earth's mightiest river—the Amazon—each of four South American nations have a state named "Amazonas."

In this film this vast jungled area is explored and viewers witness present-day events in the world's largest wilderness.

A BIT PERTURBED over Lucy's living room practice on skis, Mr. Mooney decides that they should postpone the hazardous sport until skiing season allows them to head for the hills on The Lucy Show Tuesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 7. and Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channel 12.

The journey starts from the remote Colombian village of Leticia, which is situated in the Amazon interior, the home of nature's smallest monkey, the charming little marmosket; nature's largest reptile, the anaconda.

Viewers learn how a national census is conducted in this land —by placing all citizens under equivalent of house arrest to insure they are counted.

Further into the remote interior, a visit is paid to the dedicated priests who devote their lives to the education of native children.

In Manaus, viewers see the magnificent 19th Century Rococo Opera House, which was imported stone by stone from Portugal, destined never to be used because no opera company would dare the 1,400-mile river ride to perform there.

Film concludes with a journey to Rio De Janeiro.

OPPORTUNITIES FEW . . . . . . WITH FRENCH NAME

Canadian Prejudices Die Hard

By AB KENT

Times city hall reporter Ab Kent continues his report on the Union of B.C. Municipalities' goodwill visit to Quebec in this second of three articles.

Girard Lafarge is a clever young Canadian with a degree in commerce, a step away from being a chartered accountant.

A prize-winning student, he is quick, bilingual, cosmopolitan, ambitious and comes from a good family. He could make a place for himself and help build a better country through business, industry or government.

Yet, his chances of going beyond third rung in any major Canadian corporation are nearly nil because he is basically French-speaking, and worse, he has a French name.

It's like telling an American-born Negro he can never be president of the United States.

Two-hundred-year-old predudices die slowly.

Key Province

This is the kind of problem confronting the youth of modern Quebec. It is a story heard by visitors to Canada's key province, like the B.C. guests who returned last week after a Union of B.C. Municipalities tour aimed at mutual understanding.

It is one of many reasons why Quebec today wants a better deal from the rest of Canada, some of them so deep-rooted they go beyond ordinary understanding outside of the Laurentides.

But it is an illustration easily understood by anyone, a problem in individual survival and aspiration, and it makes a mockery of the Canadian concept of equality.

There is no equality of opportunity in the civil service, national insurance companies, banks, the CN Railway and other country-wide corporations.

Quebec is different, no more like the rest of Canada than Nova Scotia is like British Columbia.

Born Different

Quebec was born with a difference, colonized by France, conquered by Britain. Rightly or wrongly, the Quebec Act of 1774 guaranteed French civil law and privileges to land owners and the Catholic Church, a generous act toward a conquered people and bound to influence a way of life over the years.

In addition, the British North America Act founding Confederation guaranteed the right of French language in Canada.

Early French-Canadian nationalists created a literary and historical culture for which much of English-speaking Canada is still groping.

The separatist movement itself is not new but predates both Confederation and the Act of Union joining Upper and Lower Canada 26 years earlier.

Own Culture

Efforts to preserve the distinct cultural basis of French Canada were made by Louis Joseph Papineau around 1815 in trying to consolidate the political rise of his race.

By the turn of the century, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was saying the 20th century belongs to Canada; there was a sense of national destiny which seems to rise periodically. But dual races were still an obstacle to a common national culture.

French Canada had its cultural unity while the rest of the country was hard pressed to distinguish itself from either its powerful neighbor the U.S. or from England.

Sixty years later it is still true, exactly what Quebec Minister of Culture Pierre Laporte told B.C. visitors two weeks ago:

"The French Canadian, because of his language, because of his culture, feels very different from Americans. He feels he has something to protect, to conserve, he wants to react and it is this reaction which has made so much talk about us. We think it is natural on our part and healthy for Canada."

Keep Difference

French Canada, he said, wants to take its destiny into its own hands.

"Being different, we agree to act in a way to preserve this difference, which for us has fundamental importance."

Maybe people of English-speaking Canada find it hard to understand this aspiration because they lack individuality, cultural traditions and motivations other than those of materialism.

Mr. Laporte said Quebec must take control of its economy in order to make possible dialogue between equals within the country.

The same point was made by Claude Ryan, chief editor of Le Devoir, "voice of the milieu."

He said economic control makes possible cultural development.

His is the voice of a restrained, liberal nationalism that hopes to strengthen Confederation rather than weaken it.

Grave Problem

The minister also feels that one of the gravest problems confronting French Canada is indifference so often witnessed outside of Quebec.

To this, the editor adds a plea for a better informed, more understanding English-speaking press.

Mr. Laporte shocked some westerners with a quote extract from the Foreign Affairs Revue. Written last fall by William E. Griffith, it said the basic, minimal, moderate demands of French Canada cover economics, culture and politics.

They mean changes that would allow Quebec more say in fiscal, credit, tariff and investment policy; extension of school rights held by English-speaking persons in Quebec to French-speaking persons throughout Canada, together with instruction in French and equality of the language politically and economically.

Equal Voice

In politics, the demands would mean revision of the federal structure giving Quebec equal voice with the rest of Canada.

They could mean revision of the senate into a chamber of nationalities, revisions in the makeup and practises of the Supreme Court and the Bank of Canada.

"These minimal demands are likely to increase with time."

That phrase was the shocker, partly because of the word "demands." Yet this extract is regarded by Mr. Laporte as one of the best expressions of the Quebec aspiration today.

"What do we want fundamentally?" Mr. Laporte asks. "Having assumed jointly the responsibility for a bicultural and bilingual state, it must not only be a facade, but it must be made law for the whole of Canada.

"We don't want to wreck Canada, but we want to be full partners in this country, full partners as we are, as French Canadians with our own culture, our own ambitions, but still Canadians." he said.

At the same time, the rest of Canada must develop its own character, he stressed.

"French Canadians in a certain measure deplore your lack of personality as a nation. People tend to compare you with the English or the Americans. English Canada, as we know it, does not want to be a nation.

"We have a duty to give Canada a French culture of the best possible quality, like English Canada must enrich itself with an English culture of the greatest value," the minister said.

Here, then, is another Quebec aspiration. Canada is drab, indistinct from the U.S.:

If Quebec can stimulate us toward our own nationalism we can be saved from Americanization and from ourselves.

Then the next 100 years should be easy.

(Next: Some similiarities and reaction.)

Direct Peace Plea To Soviet by LBJ

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Johnson coupled an unusual direct plea for peace to the Russian people Thursday with his announcement that he was ordered withdrawal of all remaining U.S. Marines from Santo Domingo.

Speaking against a background of world tension and U.S. elation over the successful Gemini 4 flight, the president aimed his words directly at the Russian people.

"This I would say to the people of the Soviet Union: there is no American interest in conflict with the Soviet people anywhere.

"And no true Soviet interest is served by the support of aggression or subversion anywhere.

"We of the United States stand ready always to go with you onto the fields of peace—to plow new furrows to plant new seed, to tend new growth—so that we and all mankind may someday share together a new and bountiful harvest of happiness and hope on this earth."

John, Lester Limber Up For 3rd Duel

OTTAWA (CP) — Once more stalemate grips Parliament and Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker are limbering up for their third successive summer duel.

The two leaders traded practice shots in the Commons Friday and every indication pointed to a long test of wills over a proposed debate - limiting rule designed to cut off opposition filibusters.

Mr. Diefenbaker and his Conservative supporters have denounced the rule as a refined form of closure that could lead to autocratic behavior by the government.

"That is the old story of the closure beginnings of 1956," the Conservative chieftain snapped in a question-period exchange with the prime minister, referring to the pipeline debate of that year.

Mr. Pearson replied that Mr. Diefenbaker apparently feels that the Commons cannot make a decision unless all his suggestions are accepted by the government.

CITES 10 SITTINGS

The prime minister said 10 sittings had been spent on the rules resolution and the original government proposal had been improved by many amendments suggested by opposition parties. "I now suggest that the time has come when perhaps we can decide this matter."

Government sources said outside the Commons they are prepared to let the debate continue for many more days, hoping that the Conservatives will run out of speakers and allow the motion to come to a vote.

The only speakers in Friday's debate, five Conservatives, ran into heavy heckling from Liberal backbenchers. Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux repeatedly cautioned them against straying from the subject of the resolution.

The 1965 session is two months old today and only two important government bills have been passed — those providing for the retirement of future senators at 75 and increasing loan ceilings in the National Housing Act. No early summer recess is in prospect.

Conservative spokesmen have warned that they will drag out the rules debate unless the proposal is withdrawn.

Solicitor-General MacNaught said Thursday the government will not withdraw it and Mr. Pearson reaffirmed this stand Friday.

DEADLOCK HARDENS

The deadlock hardened later when Thomas M. Bell (PC — Saint John - Albert) introduced an amendment providing that the rule could not be applied unless 60 per cent of MPs voting approved.

Government House Leader McIlraith objected that the amendment violated a clause in the constitution that says questions must be decided in the Commons by a simple majority.

The Deputy Speaker ruled the amendment in order, however, saying he has no jurisdiction to pass judgment on the constitutional validity of legislation or amendments.

Mr. Bell said his motion would not give the Conservatives a veto over the use of the rule since they hold only 35 per cent of the 265 Commons seats. About 15 members of other opposition parties would have to join the 93 Conservatives to block its implementation.

He said his amendment is reasonable and would protect the opposition. If the opposition's rights were restricted "we might as well move over for the dictators and the autocrats."

Mr. McIlraith said during the question period that the rules debate has consumed an inordinate amount of time and is holding up important bills.

Mr. Pearson said the guillotine rule would allocate time in an orderly way to each piece of legislation and had been endorsed in principle by members of all parties.

A government amendment to the rules resolution was passed 107 to 46, with the Conservatives alone in opposition. The amendment provides that under the debate - limiting rule an all - party committee could limit individual speeches.

Debate continues Monday on Mr. Bell's amendment.

Man Imprisoned Unfairly, MP Tells Favreau

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democrat MP Frank Howard called unjustly by the magistrate who tried him in Ontario. Peters, now in the B.C. prison, had exhausted every avenue of legal appeal against his sentence.

Mr. Howard asked Mr. Favreau either to intervene to get Peters a new trial or to exercise the royal prerogative of mercy "so that this man may receive the justice that has been denied on Justice Minister Favreau Thursday to intervene in the case of a man Mr. Howard said is unfairly imprisoned in a British Columbia penitentiary.

Mr. Favreau said he would consider the matter.

Mr. Howard referred in the Commons to John Darrell Peters whom he said had been treated him."

Go, Go, Go For Gemini

HOUSTON (AP)—Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White, still in good shape and remarkably alert, passed the halfway point of their marathon space ride today while medical monitors maintained a close watch on their condition.

The two men, who cracked the U.S. space endurance record Friday night, reached the mid-point of their planned four-day trip at 12:14 p.m. EDT today as their Gemini IV space ship zipped high over the United States on orbit No. 32.

"We're in good shape up here," command pilot McDivitt reported to the ground this morning. He added however that he was a "trifle weary" and during the night he had his best sleep yet.

White, who provided the main excitement of the planned four-day flight by taking a 20-minute excursion in space Thursday, was asleep at the time the report was made.

UNEVENTFUL NIGHT

John Hodge, a Mission Control Centre flight director, reported this morning that the astronauts spent a "very uneventful night. We did what we were supposed to do, following the flight plan, gathering medical data, eating, drinking, sleeping and performing experiments."

Hodge said the astronauts appeared to be as alert as if they had only been in space for five minutes instead of more than 47 hours. He reported spacecraft conditions were excellent and there was nothing in sight that could cause an early termination of the mission.

Hodge said he was impressed with the "enthusiasm and the awareness and awakeness with which they're answering questions on what they're doing and how they're doing it."

During the morning the astronauts took turns taking pictures of prominent earth points which might be used as reference points to guide project Apollo astronauts returning from moon voyages.

Among the photographic targets were Point Jiguera and Point Aguilla, both in Puerto Rico; El Dorado Airport at Bogota, Colombia; Point Loma Lighthouse, San Diego, Calif.; Lake Titicaca and Lake de Poopa in Bolivia, and the junction of the blue Nile and the white Nile in Africa.

During the night White slept through a routine medical examination and had to be awakened in the 27th orbit for the exam.

Mission control said the pilots

EVEN WHALES GET SEASICK

CLEETHORPES, England (Reuters)—Two white whales which became sick on their sea voyage from Canada to a zoo here have had their mystery illness diagnosed.

It was sea-sickness.

At first it was thought the whales would die but zoo authorities here have been told that they are recovering.

WIRE BRIEFS

U.K. Air Strike

LONDON (Reuters) — British European Airways today resumed some flights to the Continent, bringing relief to thousands of Pentecost vacationers delayed by a strike at London airport.

Rumor of Uprising

CAIRO (AP)—Unconfirmed reports reaching here today said Khartoum Airport was closed down and trouble appeared to be brewing in the capital of Sudan.

Word of the airport closing reached here after reports from the Sudan that four army officers, including one general, had been arrested there in an alleged attempt to stage a coup d'etat.

B.C. Man Killed

COULEE CITY, Wash. (AP)—Leo J. Majur of Vancouver, B.C., was killed Friday night in a one-car accident on Highway Two west of here when he apparently missed a curve and went over an embankment. He was alone in the car.

Crown Seeks Delay In Murder Hearing

The preliminary hearing of a capital murder charge against David Robinson will be delayed for some time, Magistrate William Ostler was told this morning.

Robinson, a 24-year-old janitor, of 324 Old Island Highway, is charged in the slaying of Susan Freschi, a 14-year-old school girl whose body was found in woods near her View Royal home May 12.

Robinson, being held in Oakalla Prison, was brought to Victoria this morning to appear in Colwood magistrate's court.

Crown Prosecutor W. R. McIntyre said "I'm afraid there will be substantial delay" before the Crown is ready to present its case.

Cause of the delay is believed to be difficulty in arranging for technical witnesses to attend.

The magisrate remanded Robinson to next Wednesday at the Law Courts. It is understood he will then be remanded from week to week until such time as a date is fixed for the preliminary hearing of the charge.

VIET NAM

Big U.S. Troop Buildup

SAIGON (CP) — Some 15,000 more U.S. troops with amphibious equipment suitable for use in South Viet Nam's criss-cross of rivers and flooded paddy-fields will arrive in Viet Nam shortly, informed sources said today.

Waves of cargo aircraft are bringing the reinforcements to Okinawa and the Philippines from Forts Eustace and Storey in Virginia, they said. A vanguard of the first batch of 3,000 was believed to have arrived already.

The big new U.S. commitment will swell the number of American troops here to more than 60,000.

News of it came with reports of further battles against Viet Cong guerrillas.

South Vietnamese forces, badly battered by Viet Cong ambushes in recent days, struck back with the aid of U.S. helicopters and claimed today to have killed 49 guerrillas in a single action Friday.

A U.S. military spokesman reported that quick action by U.S. army helicopter crews accounted for 20 of the Viet Cong dead.

Six Communists were captured and eight others taken as suspects in the operation near Vinh Long, 55 miles southwest of Saigon.

MUNROE
. . . to pass sentence

Collapses After Guilty Verdict

By PETE LOUDON
Times Staff Writer

VANCOUVER—Al Williamson collapsed in Assize Court Friday after being found guilty by a 12-man jury in the "Dear Hall" case.

He will be sentenced Thursday.

Williamson was rushed to St. Paul's Hospital by ambulance, but was released Friday night.

He was treated with an inhalator in the courtroom. In hospital a cardiogram was taken.

He was then driven home and is resting in bed on doctor's orders.

Williamson, 60, was in the box when the jury filed back into the courtroom at 6:55 p.m. after deliberations lasting 3 hours and 17 minutes at the end of a five-day trial.

The jury foreman pronounced him guilty of forgery and guilty of uttering a forgery. Williamson appeared to listen intently while a recommendation for leniency was proposed to Mr. Justice Craig Munroe.

His expression was bland as the unanimous finding of the jury was announced. He swallowed and sat down.

He heard the judge tell the court in an unexpected statement that Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson who figured centrally in the trial suffered no discredit in the evidence and had exhibited no evidence of impropriety. (See also Page 3.)

The judge and jury left the court room and Williamson, who had been in custody in the Courthouse lockup while the jury was out, gave his chief counsel, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria, a $5 bill.

Began to Tremble, Turned Pale

Williamson said it was to pay the cost of parking his car.

Then Williamson began to tremble and he appeared to pale. Several lawyers told him to sit down.

His wife approached from the public seats behind the dock and she put her arms around him and kissed his forehead.

A policeman handed Williamson a cup of water but he dropped it after taking one sip—and then he slumped sideways.

His wife, he had referred to her as "Babs" in the trial, called for a doctor. She got into the prisoner's box with him and as she took him in her arms he whispered, "I love you, I love you."

Loosening his tie, Mrs. Williamson said, "It's alright, darling; it doesn't matter."

Before the hastily-summoned ambulance took him away, Sheriff Eddie Wells said to his police escort that Mr. Justice Munroe had just ordered that Williamson should be released from custody until his court appearance for sentencing.

Mr. McKenzie said Williamson's collapse came before there had been any discussion of an appeal.

Much Publicized Trial

Williamson's collapse came as the final dramatic incident in a trial packed with interest—a trial which had been one of the most publicized in B.C. history.

It came while many veteran newsmen, who had known "unflappable Al", were making guesses that there would be an acquittal.

It climaxed a day in which all the testimony of the trial had been hashed and rehashed by summation of the defence and then again by Mr. Justice Munroe in an hour-long charge to the jury.

The highlights of his remarks provided sufficient cause for discussion for one day.

One remark concerned the "unexplained failure" of the Crown to call Premier Bennett as a witness.

The judge said, "The unexplained failure of the Crown to bring before you Premier Bennett, is a fact from which you may draw inferences that the Crown fears to do so, and is fearful the premier may have disclosed facts unfavorable to the Crown's case.

"You may decide such an inference is not a fair or proper one for you to draw. The matter is entirely for you."

Premier Bennett, although absent from the province, occupied a place of importance in the trial.

The charges against Williamson alleged that on May 14, 1964, or thereabouts, Williamson sent a letter to Ottawa purporting to have been written by the premier.

The letter, sent to Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson, apparently supported the application of Harry Stonehill, a wealthy American, for

RCAF Officers Disciplined For 'Talking'

(Special to The Times)

COMOX—Eight fighter pilots from the RCAF base here have been put on orderly duty for six weeks for speaking to peace marchers.

The disciplinary action was talk of the base today as peace marchers began their 24-hour protest sit-down.

RCAF officials censured the officers Friday after reports that the eight men had been seen at the headquarters camp of the demonstrators.

At the time, the men had just come off duty and were still in flying suits, reliable sources reported.

RCAF officials refused to confirm the action.

But fellow officers and civilian personnel at the base were calling the action a threat to free speech.

CONFIRMED

Peace march organizer Peter Light confirmed that he had spoken to several men from the base Wednesday night.

He said they had come down to the camp in Courtenay "just for a chat."

The men were dressed in uniform, he said, and he thought they were pilot officers.

Light, 22, of Vancouver, said he had heard that the men had been reprimanded and "been placed on some sort of charge."

"This is a direct threat to free speech," said Light. "These men had every right to come and see whoever they liked.

"I'm sure they in no way broke any military rules because they let us do most of the talking."

The sentence meted out to the men is "more-or-less a rap on the knuckles" said one member of the base.

"The men will have a few extra duties to perform."

Comox commanding officer, Group Captain E. G. Ireland had earlier warned his men to have nothing to do with the peace marchers.

DRIVER DIES IN INFERNO

QUESNEL, B.C. (CP)—A tank truck loaded with 7,000 gallons of gasoline plunged off the Cariboo Highway early today and erupted into an inferno.

The driver perished in flames that kept rescuers away from the wreck for hours.

As explosions rocked the truck, a pall of smoke could be seen for 10 miles.

All paint and identifying marks were burned off the truck and police could not immediately determine the company that owned the vehicle.

MANOEUVRING IN SPACE PROVES TRICKY PROBLEM

By JOHN BARBOUR

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim McDivitt missed a critical rendezvous on the first orbit of the Gemini IV space capsule Thursday, but U.S. space officials learned many valuable lessons from the miscalculation.

McDivitt's attempts to catch his elusive target cost too much manoeuvring fuel, and officials halted the operation.

McDivitt—in his first visit to the dimensionless world of space—misjudged the distance between the spacecraft and its spent booster, at least by the guess of flight officials.

Trying to drive into it, he put more energy into the orbit and raised both his orbital high point and low point.

Another problem is that the ground was unable to give the command pilot a good idea of the orbit of the tumbling booster.

The fact that you have to know the orbits of both the pursuit ship and the pursued ship was "brought home even more by this flight," said mission director Chris Kraft.

This, of course, is the big difference between steering in space and steering either an airplane or a car. Land-type steering is simple—you go up or down, off to one side, whatever you please.

But in space, you are not only changing your present position—you are changing your whole orbit.

Ideally for rendezvous, you would match orbits with the spacecraft you are pursuing. But this becomes an intricate procedure.

The human eyes and the senses are just not good enough to close great gaps between the pursuit ship and its target. Soon Gemini astronauts will have radar to give them both the distance of the target and the rate of approach to it.

By the time he was through manoeuvring, McDivitt had steered into an orbit that ranged as high as 183 miles, as low as 103—good enough for 5.4 days of flight before it would naturally return to earth.

Because of a number of commitments, the Gemini IV only carried one bottle of oxidizer and one of fuel. Later Gemini craft—after the next one—will carry twice as much propellant since their major effort will be directed at rendezvous.

STAGE BASE SIT-DOWN

Comox Peace Marchers Halted by Barbed Wire

Special to the Times

COMOX — Barbed wire gates and special police patrols halted peace marchers as they linked arms and descended on the RCAF base here this morning.

Some 75 demonstrators tried to enter the fighter base but were turned back at the main gate.

In orderly rows they sat in front of the gate singing "We Shall Overcome" and other peace songs.

Four RCMP officers, brought in specially for the occasion, stood by in case of trouble.

Inside the gates, military police prepared for any further attempts to gain entry.

The gate entrance usually consists of a pole which drops across the road.

But officials ordered the special barbed wire gate erected for the occasion.

Vehicles and personnel were using other entrances this morning.

As reinforcements swelled the ranks of the peace marchers, spokesman Peter Light said he was contemplating blocking the other entrances also.

Light said he expected the group to be joined by several

Wholesale Prices Establish New Highs

OTTAWA (CP) — Wholesale prices broke out of two-year stability trend last month and bounced up to a new high, raising questions about the future of price trends generally.

Economists looking at the Canadian scene have pointed with satisfaction to the fact the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' wholesale price index has remained within 1½ points of 245.5 since May, 1963.

But the bureau announced Friday its index, based on 1935-39 wholesale prices equalling 100, reached 249.0 in May this year for a gain of about two per cent over the mean for the past two years.

The bureau, as is its practice, did not attribute the increase to any specific cause but noted that, during the period the general wholesale index rose to 5.7 points to 283.8 and the iron products index rose 8.4 points to 265.6.

RECALL PRICE RISE

This prompted some economists to recall that in February, the Steel Company of Canada announced a four per cent increase in prices for some products. The ramifications of this and similar increases may now be seen in current wholesale prices, they said.

The bureau says that, because of the mixture of commodities and variety of processing stages reflected in the wholesale price index, it cannot be regarded as a measurement of the purchasing power of the dollar. But it is closely tied to the business cycle and can be regarded as an indicator of general business conditions.

Bank Scandal Rocks Europe

BERN (AP)—Max Hommel, president of the Swiss federal banking commission, was relieved of his duties Friday in connection with a scandal that has rocked the European financial world.

A government announcement said Hommel has been suspended from his post pending an investigation.

This action follows the suspension of all payments by two Swiss banks and the arrest of Spanish financier Julio Munoz in Geneva earlier this week.

Munoz became the main stockholder of the two banks, the Swiss Savings and Credit Bank of St. Gall and its subsidiary, the Geneva Commerce and Credit Bank. It is alleged that he squandered large sums of money which he succeeded in borrowing from the banks after he took control of them. He was arrested by Geneva police Monday.

The government announcement said Hommel was suspended because he was suspected of "violating the duties with which he was charged." It did not elaborate but confirmed that the suspension was in connection with the Munoz affair.

Arthur Mayse

On Friday evening, I spaded the bed under our kitchen windows, and the green-thumb half of our partnership completed our spring planting by setting out two flats of salvia.

Then she trickled a pinch of 6-8-6 into little holes behind each plant, watered the commercial fertilizer in with a fine spray, set out earwig tonic, and that was that.

Our gardening was not always thus. I don't mean that we're especiall skilful, or never make mistakes. But we are no longer likely to stake and tenderly nurture pigweed, or, as we did when sojourning in Vancouver, plant potatoes in soil that should first have been worked over with a jack-hammer.

Our triumph of mis-gardening was achieved in Toronto, however, when it became apparent that our scrofulous front lawn needed an assist that nature refused to furnish.

★ ★ ★

At that time in our marriage, for reasons unclear, I was rated a knowledgeable gardener.

"What that grass needs," I expounded, as we sat in the shade with tall glasses, watching the ants raise yet another hillock, "is fertilizer, and there's no fertilizer like good old manure."

So we checked the Tely classified, and ordered a load of good old manure from a farm out past Malton airport.

It arrived with the first summer heat-wave.

"Where shall I dump it?" the guy asked; and I indicated the edge of the lawn.

"Right there, I guess."

The farmer shrugged. "Well," he said, "it's your grass," and got busy with a fork.

Win came around from the back. She checked as if she had run into an invisible barrier, then fled, to return cautiously after the truck had rattled off down the block.

She asked, "Will it smell like that for long?"

"I don't know," I told her, "but let's hope not."

With spade and rake, I distributed the smoking mound.

Later, through closed windows, we looked out at the reeking carpet. Its range, we estimated, was about 60 feet. This we deduced from the actions of passersby, who at that distance from our property, would either lower their heads and charge past, or cross the street.

"Anyway," I said without much conviction, "it's what the grass needed."

★ ★ ★

Our lawn quit smoking after three days, and we began to hope it would now cast a less startling aura. To help the process, I watered it. Next morning when the sun hit it, people began crossing the street when they were 50 yards away. Just before noon, a sanitary inspector came calling.

"Look, mister," he said to me in a choked voice, "that stuff isn't exactly desert flowers. You got to get rid of it."

"Where?" I asked him.

"Your problem," he replied, already retreating.

So I buried our mluch deep under the living room windows, where it rotted as it should have done in that rascally farmer's barnyard. Where it wasn't bald, our lawn was an interesting yellow. We laid down new turf. Our neighbors took to inviting us over for coffee again.

Next year we planted salvia under the windows, and Jack's magic beanstalk didn't grow faster. Admittedly, it was a tall variety. But, so help me, before the summer was over, that scarlet flood rose level with our window-ledges.

Strollers who frequently paused to admire and envy would ask how we achieved such growth . . . a question for which we had a ready answer:

"There's nothing," we told them blandly, "like good old manure!"

Man Pleads Guilty After Woman Hit

A motorist who hit an 86-year-old woman in a crosswalk on Douglas Street Friday night pleaded guilty today to dangerous driving.

Gordon Kipp of Jordan River was remanded to next Thursday for sentence and released in his own recognizance.

Sergeant Bob Peterson said that Kipp knocked down Mrs. A. F. Cunningham, 661 McKenzie, as she crossed Douglas in a crosswalk at McKenzie shortly after 7:30 Friday night.

Mrs. Cunningham was in the middle of the road when she was hit, he said. The woman is reported in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Sgt. Peterson said Kipp admitted he saw the flashing amber light that marks the crosswalk. He told police he was travelling about 40 mph in the 30-zone.

A breath test showed Kipp had a blood alcohol content of .14 per cent.

Magistrate William Ostler remanded Kipp for sentence after he asked to be allowed to keep his licence for use at work.

GOVERNMENT VETO PROTESTED

'Petition Rejection Not Fair, Legal'

"One year's hard work down the drain."

That's the way the organizer of a petition to merge the View Royal panhandle with Esquimalt described rejection of the petition by the provincial government.

Mrs. W. P. Rankin, 1440 Craigflower, said today she can't see where it is legal to break a valid petition.

"We are not going to take this sitting down," she said.

"It is not fair, right or legal that our petition be thrown out."

The petition got 62 per cent approval from panhandle residents to join Esquimalt.

Property owners in the municipality approved by 72 per cent the proposal to merge with the panhandle.

But Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said this week Esquimalt and View Royal must start afresh for a merger.

He said he was following a recommendation by a provincial commission studying the merger scheme.

"I don't think this government, Campbell or anyone else should be able to do this," said Mrs. Rankin.

She said if residents of View Royal generally want to participate with the panhandle section in fresh talks, "we'll go along with them."

But if they don't, then panhandle residents will have to start all over again.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said the petition now is a dead issue, adding if "is too bad it has been thrown to one side."

Mrs. Rankin said she is fed up with septic tanks, no street lights and sidewalks.

There were "a lot" of improvements panhandle residents would be entitled to if they merged with Esquimalt.

'People Can't All Live In High-Rises'

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Emotion overpowers reason when sewage disposal is debated, Saanich councillor Leslie Passmore said today.

Any unbiased person would see that the Northridge treatment plant is the least undesirable method of disposal for Saanich and the entire district, he said.

"I would venture to say not 10 per cent of the people objecting have seen a treatment plant," he said.

It was possible to halt all housing in unsewered areas, he said, but this is unrealistic.

"Where are the people going to go? We can't stop people getting married and wanting houses. They can't all live in high-rise apartments at $125 a month. It's just not reasonable."

The latest outcry about sewage disposal came when the Pollution Control Board approved extension of the Northridge plant to discharge a further 35,000 gallons a day into Colquitz Creek which flows into the Gorge.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said Saanich is giving precedence to a subdivision over the health and welfare of the Gorge district.

SEWAGE PLANT

But Mr. Passmore said Saanich backed the sewage plant's extension because it was felt in the best interests of everyone.

Because there is not enough room for everyone in sewered areas of Greater Victoria, some people must live in unsewered places.

When this happens, there is a choice: Septic tanks or treatment plants.

"And all of us know what septic tank effluent does for the district," he said.

When enough persons moved into an unsewered area they could afford to pay for a regular sewer pipeline.

But a pipeline bylaw won't be passed in a sparsely-populated area because few could afford the cost.

HUNT STARTS FOR MISSING PAIR IN BOAT

RCMP and Air-Sea Rescue have started a search for two men in a small boat which is overdue on a trip from Powell River to Courtenay.

The search was concentrated in the Denman and Hornby Island areas.

The two men, B. E. Arthur and Dennis Scott, both 22, of Comox, left Powell River Wednesday in a small boat.

They were reported overdue at Courtenay this morning.

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Long-Time Alderman, School Trustee Dies

Francis Greville Mulliner, a genial Irish gentleman who became one of the best-known civic leaders in Victoria for more than 30 years, died Friday night.

The retired alderman spent 10 years on council, 10 years as a school trustee, and also spent some time as chairman of the Royal Jubilee Hospital board.

He was one of the driving forces behind the streets program in Victoria West—a district which until that time was the orphan of the civic family.

He was elected to the old Victoria School Board in 1934 and was later school board chairman for three years. He also became president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

A lifelong Conservative, he was treasurer of the federal association here for 20 years.

Mr. Mulliner was born in Dublin in 1881 and spent his boyhood in Liverpool, England. When he was 16 years old both his parents died and he came to Canada.

BAGGAGE AGENT

He began working on a farm near Hamilton, Ont., then moved to Victoria in 1907 as an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He eventually became baggage agent for the B.C. Steamship Service of the CPR, retiring in 1944.

In 1912 he married Jessie Pleasance Case, recently arrived from Norfolk, Va.

They have two daughters, Mrs. Peggy Freethy of Victoria and Mrs. Betty Kearney of Montreal. Mrs. Mulliner is at home on Vancouver Street.

Funeral service will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m. in St. John's Anglican Church with Canon George Biddle officiating. Cremation will follow.

Cost of birth certificate from Alberta was increased April 1 to two dollars a copy. Previous Ask the Times answer quoted one dollar.

C. Saanich Merge Bid Launched

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A move is afoot to unite a part of the unorganized district of North Saanich with Central Saanich municipality.

J. C. Erikson, president of the John Dean Ratepayers' Association, said today a proposal has been made for the amalgamation of the area south of McTavish Road with Central Saanich.

This would leave the remainder of North Saanich with the choice of either becoming a separate municipality or amalgamating with Sidney.

A Dean Park ratepayers' meeting to discuss the proposal will be held at Sandsbury Junior Elementary School on Monday at 8 p.m.

This will be followed by a public meeting at North Saanich Secondary School Wednesday at 8 p.m. to discuss incorporation and other alternatives. All ratepayers' groups have been invited.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will address the meeting.

Mr. Erikson said many residents in the Dean Park area feel it would be more advantageous to join Central Saanich than forming a separate municipality.

AMALGAMATION

"Personally I would prefer amalgamation of the whole of North Saanich rather than a portion of the district," he said. "But the partition proposal has its merits."

Reasons for some people south of McTavish Road wanting to secede from North Saanich are:

- Central Saanich with its Elk Lake waterworks controls the water supply for the whole of the north of the peninsula. Thus their water needs would be taken care of before other areas.
- The municipality is fully equipped with facilities to administer a new area. It has a new hall, an experienced administrative staff and a public works department.
- There is no conflict of interests between Central Saanich and the district immediately north of the municipality.

While Central Saanich Council has taken no part in the discussions for incorporating North Saanich, it is well known that some councillors would prefer to taking in the area south of McTavish Road rather than amalgamating the whole area.

J. B. Cumming, president of the North Sidney Ratepayers' Association, who made a special study on making North Saanich a separate municipality, said he would like to see "amalgamation of North Saanich, Sidney and Central Saanich."

"I feel amalgamation of the whole North Saanich peninsula would be the best thing for all," he said. "But the people are not ready for this yet. It may come eventually."

Hospital Board Names Chairman

New chairman of the board of management at St. Joseph's Hospital is Fred E. Norris, office manager of Victoria Press Ltd. and Oak Bay representative on the board.

Elected to the post Thursday, Mr. Norris succeeds retiring chairman Lieut.-Col. W. J. Mosedale, who has served as chairman of the board since February 1962.

New vice-chairman of the board is William Guild, manager of Radio Station CJVI, who also heads the board's public relations committee.

PSYCHOLOGIST'S METHOD

Number Tests Probe Brain Ills

By LESLIE MILLIN

An Indiana psychologist said today psychological testing can tell a brain surgeon "a tremendous amount" about a patient before any surgery performed.

Ralph Reitan, of Indiana University Medical Centre, read a paper on Diagnosis Techniques in Neuropsychology to a meeting of the Canadian Psychological Association.

He said in an interview tests have been developed by himself and others that tell a brain surgeon the precise location, type and extent of damage.

"We have to be careful in discussing this," he said, "because it is a very complex matter. It's not a case where one simple test gives you one simple positive answer."

A simple test might measure a patient's ability to reason with abstract ideas — his handling of mathematical concepts, for instance.

Marked impairment of this ability, as shown by his answers, would indicate possible brain damage in the front part of the brain.

Dr. Reitan said location and type of brain damage can be inferred on the basis of ability changes.

One example of this is a patient with severe damage to the part of his brain containing the speech centre.

Doctors have known for centuries that an injury to the left side of the head often leaves the victim unable to speak.

He said his studies have also shown the brain can make enormous spontaneous efforts to recover from damage.

One of his patients had her intelligence virtually cut in half when one of the major blood vessels to the brain collapsed.

In three months, she had recovered to the point of having about normal intelligence—even though surgeons discovered the blood vessel was still useless.

"Other blood vessels took over the work. It was a spontaneous recovery, but not quite complete. She had been a bright woman before the artery failed," he said.

Do Not Plunge Into Smooth Porridge of Society

Graduating high school students were warned Friday night against drifting into a world of pre-digested values.

Walter D. Young of the faculty of economics and political science at the University of B.C. told the 315-member Oak Bay Senior Secondary School that society regards sex, religion and politics as conversational taboos.

"With these ruled out, what else is there to talk about?"

He told the students to avoid "joining the smooth porridge of society where you do not exercise your ability to examine yourself and the society you live in."

Recognition ceremonies involving 1,000 students were held at Victoria Secondary, Mount View, Esquimalt and Oak Bay. Parties followed at all four schools. No incidents were reported from private, all-night parties which have become a tradition with graduates.

Prof. Young told the Oak Bay students to be prepared to challenge the status quo.

"Despite our leisure, today's man is more controlled than in control. In our mass society we are standardized and homogenized, dominated by government and advertisers," he said.

He criticized the high school curriculum with particular reference to social studies.

"In Social Studies 30 you're not taught the truth about politics. You're told nothing of party politics. Today the truths of politics, business and religion are passed over."

Upswept hairdos and new business suits seemed to add an extra maturity to the Oak Bay students as they filed into the auditorium at the beginning of the evening and took their place on the tiered bleachers.

Conducting the exercises was principal, J. G. Wallace. Other speakers were H. M. Evans, registrar for the department of education, and J. W. Porteous, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Following the introduction of the graduating class by vice-principal, W. D. Oliver and Mrs. R. Gordon, the class valedictory was given by Barry English.

The choir of the graduating class sang two selections with music being played by the school band under the direction of David Dunnet. Rev. C. D. Blencoe gave the invocation and benediction.

When the exercises were over, some of the newly-acquired maturity of the students vanished as they posed for pictures, chatted with their parents and prepared for an evening of fun.

Valedictorians at other schools were Thomas McKeachie at Victoria Secondary, James Forward at Esquimalt and Caroline Bailey at Mount View.

Dean Robert Wallace, dean of administration at the University of Victoria, gave a preview of things to come to the 338 graduates at Victoria Secondary.

Advice from the business world was brought to Mount View graduates by Robert D. Ferguson, manager of the Victoria branch, Montreal Trust.

Herbert Bruch, MLA, was the speaker at Esquimalt Secondary ceremonies.

John, Lester Limber Up For 3rd Duel

OTTAWA (CP) — Once more stalemate grips Parliament and Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker are limbering up for their third successive summer duel.

The two leaders traded practice shots in the Commons Friday and every indication pointed to a long test of wills over a proposed debate - limiting rule designed to cut off opposition filibusters.

Mr. Diefenbaker and his Conservative supporters have denounced the rule as a refined form of closure that could lead to autocratic behavior by the government.

"That is the old story of the closure beginnings of 1956," the Conservative chieftain snapped in a question-period exchange with the prime minister, referring to the pipeline debate of that year.

Mr. Pearson replied that Mr. Diefenbaker apparently feels that the Commons cannot make a decision unless all his suggestions are accepted by the government.

CITES 10 SITTINGS

The prime minister said 10 sittings had been spent on the rules resolution and the original government proposal had been improved by many amendments suggested by opposition parties. "I now suggest that the time has come when perhaps we can decide this matter."

Government sources said outside the Commons they are prepared to let the debate continue for many more days, hoping that the Conservatives will run out of speakers and allow the motion to come to a vote.

The only speakers in Friday's debate, five Conservatives, ran into heavy heckling from Liberal backbenchers. Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux repeatedly cautioned them against straying from the subject of the resolution.

The 1965 session is two months old today and only two important government bills have been passed — those providing for the retirement of future senators at 75 and increasing loan ceilings in the National Housing Act. No early summer recess is in prospect.

Conservative spokesmen have warned that they will drag out the rules debate unless the proposal is withdrawn.

Solicitor-General MacNaught said Thursday the government will not withdraw it and Mr. Pearson reaffirmed this stand Friday.

DEADLOCK HARDENS

The deadlock hardened later when Thomas M. Bell (PC — Saint John - Albert) introduced an amendment providing that the rule could not be applied unless 60 per cent of MPs voting approved.

Government House Leader McIlraith objected that the amendment violated a clause in the constitution that says questions must be decided in the Commons by a simple majority.

The Deputy Speaker ruled the amendment in order, however, saying he has no jurisdiction to pass judgment on the constitutional validity of legislation or amendments.

Mr. Bell said his motion would not give the Conservatives a veto over the use of the rule since they hold only 35 per cent of the 265 Commons seats. About 15 members of other opposition parties would have to join the 93 Conservatives to block its implementation.

He said his amendment is reasonable and would protect the opposition. If the opposition's rights were restricted "we might as well move over for the dictators and the autocrats."

Mr. McIlraith said during the question period that the rules debate has consumed an inordinate amount of time and is holding up important bills.

Mr. Pearson said the guillotine rule would allocate time in an orderly way to each piece of legislation and had been endorsed in principle by members of all parties.

A government amendment to the rules resolution was passed 107 to 46, with the Conservatives alone in opposition. The amendment provides that under the debate - limiting rule an all - party committee could limit individual speeches.

Debate continues Monday on Mr. Bell's amendment.

Man Imprisoned Unfairly, MP Tells Favreau

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democrat MP Frank Howard called on Justice Minister Favreau Thursday to intervene in the case of a man Mr. Howard said is unfairly imprisoned in a British Columbia penitentiary.

Mr. Howard referred in the Commons to John Darrell Peters whom he said had been treated unjustly by the magistrate who tried him in Ontario. Peters, now in the B.C. prison, had exhausted every avenue of legal appeal against his sentence.

Mr. Howard asked Mr. Favreau either to intervene to get Peters a new trial or to exercise the royal prerogative of mercy "so that this man may receive the justice that has been denied him."

Mr. Favreau said he would consider the matter.

RCAF DISCIPLINES OFFICERS FOR TALKING TO MARCHERS

COLLAPSES AFTER VERDICT

Williamson Sentence Set for Thursday

MUNROE
. . . to pass sentence

By PETE LOUDON
Times Staff Writer

VANCOUVER—Al Williamson collapsed in Assize Court Friday after being found guilty by a 12-man jury in the "Dear Hal" case.

He will be sentenced Thursday.

Williamson was rushed to St. Paul's Hospital by ambulance, but was released Friday night.

He was treated with an inhalator in the courtroom. In hospital a cardiogram was taken.

He was then driven home and is resting in bed on doctor's orders.

Williamson, 60, was in the box when the jury filed back into the courtroom at 6:55 p.m. after deliberations lasting 3 hours and 17 minutes at the end of a five-day trial.

The jury foreman pronounced him guilty of forgery and guilty of uttering a forgery. Williamson appeared to listen intently while a recommendation for leniency was proposed to Mr. Justice Craig Munroe.

His expression was bland as the unanimous finding of the jury was announced. He swallowed and sat down.

He heard the judge tell the court in an unexpected statement that Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson who figured centrally in the trial suffered no discredit in the evidence and had exhibited no evidence of impropriety. (See also Page 3.)

The judge and jury left the court room and Williamson, who had been in custody in the Courthouse lockup while the jury was out, gave his chief counsel, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria, a $5 bill.

Began to Tremble, Turned Pale

Williamson said it was to pay the cost of parking his car.

Then Williamson began to tremble and he appeared to pale. Several lawyers told him to sit down.

His wife approached from the public seats behind the dock and she put her arms around him and kissed his forehead.

A policeman handed Williamson a cup of water but he dropped it after taking one sip—and then he slumped sideways.

His wife, he had referred to her as "Babs" in the trial, called for a doctor. She got into the prisoner's box with him and as she took him in her arms he whispered, "I love you, I love you."

Loosening his tie, Mrs. Williamson said, "It's alright, darling; it doesn't matter."

Before the hastily-summoned ambulance took him away, Sheriff Eddie Wells said to his police escort that Mr. Justice Munroe had just ordered that Williamson should be released from custody until his court appearance for sentencing.

Mr. McKenzie said Williamson's collapse came before there had been any discussion of an appeal.

Much Publicized Trial

Williamson's collapse came as the final dramatic incident in a trial packed with interest—a trial which had been one of the most publicized in B.C. history.

It came while many veteran newsmen, who had known "unflappable Al", were making guesses that there would be an acquittal.

It climaxed a day in which all the testimony of the trial had been hashed and rehashed by summation of the defence and then again by Mr. Justice Munroe in an hour-long charge to the jury.

The highlights of his remarks provided sufficient cause for discussion for one day.

One remark concerned the "unexplained failure" of the Crown to call Premier Bennett as a witness.

The judge said, "The unexplained failure of the Crown to bring before you Premier Bennett, is a fact from which you may draw inferences that the Crown fears to do so, and is fearful the premier may have disclosed facts unfavorable to the Crown's case.

"You may decide such an inference is not a fair or proper one for you to draw. The matter is entirely for you."

Premier Bennett, although absent from the province, occupied a place of importance in the trial.

The charges against Williamson alleged that on May 14, 1964, or thereabouts, Williamson sent a letter to Ottawa purporting to have been written by the premier.

The letter, sent to Hal Dornan, an assistant to Prime Minister Pearson, apparently supported the application of Harry Stonehill, a wealthy American, for

It's Go, Go, Go For Gemini Twins

HOUSTON (AP)—Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White, still in good shape and remarkably alert, passed the halfway point of their marathon space ride today while medical monitors maintained a close watch on their condition.

The two men, who cracked the U.S. space endurance record Friday night, reached the mid-point of their planned four-day trip at 12:14 p.m. EDT today as their Gemini IV spaceship zipped high over the United States on orbit No. 32.

"We're in good shape up here," command pilot McDivitt reported to the ground this morning. He added however that he was a "trifle weary" and during the night he had his best sleep yet.

White, who provided the main excitement of the planned four-day flight by taking a 20-minute excursion in space Thursday, was asleep at the time the report was made.

UNEVENTFUL NIGHT

John Hodge, a Mission Control Centre flight director, reported this morning that the astronauts spent a "very uneventful night. We did what we were supposed to do, following the flight plan, gathering medical data, eating, drinking, sleeping and performing experiments."

Hodge said the astronauts appeared to be as alert as if they had only been in space for five minutes instead of more than 47 hours. He reported spacecraft conditions were excellent and there was nothing in sight that could cause an early termination of the mission.

Hodge said he was impressed with the "enthusiasm and the awareness and awakeness with which they're answering questions on what they're doing and how they're doing it."

During the morning the astronauts took turns taking pictures of prominent earth points which might be used as reference points to guide project Apollo astronauts returning from moon voyages.

Among the photographic targets were Point Jiguera and Point Aguilla, both in Puerto Rico; El Dorado Airport at Bogota, Colombia; Point Loma Lighthouse, San Diego, Calif.; Lake Titicaca and Lake de Poopa in Bolivia, and the junction of the blue Nile and the white Nile in Africa.

During the night White slept through a routine medical examination and had to be awakened in the 27th orbit for the exam.

Mission control said the pilots

Action 'Threat' To Free Speech

(Special to The Times)

COMOX—Eight fighter pilots from the RCAF base here have been put on orderly duty for six weeks for speaking to peace marchers.

The disciplinary action was talk of the base today as peace marchers began their 24-hour protest sit-down.

★ ★ ★

RCAF officials censured the officers after reports that the eight men had been seen at the headquarters camp of the demonstrators.

At the time, the men had just come off duty and were still in flying suits, reliable sources reported.

RCAF officials refused to confirm the action.

It was reported that civilian personnel at the base were calling the action a "threat to free speech."

CONFIRMED

Peace march organizer Peter Light confirmed that he had spoken to several men from the base Wednesday night.

He said they had come down to the camp in Courtenay "just for a chat."

The men were dressed in uniform, he said, and he thought they were pilot officers.

Light, 22, of Vancouver, said he had heard that the men had been reprimanded and "been placed on some sort of charge."

"This is a direct threat to free speech," said Light. "These men had every right to come and see whoever they liked.

"I'm sure they in no way broke any military rules because they let us do most of the talking."

The sentence meted out to the men is "more-or-less a rap on the knuckles" said one member of the base.

"The men will have a few extra duties to perform."

Comox commanding officer, Group Captain E. G. Ireland had earlier warned his men to have nothing to do with the peace marchers.

Barbed Wire, Extra Police Face Walkers

Special to the Times

COMOX — Barbed wire gates and special police patrols halted peace marchers as they linked arms and descended on the RCAF base here this morning.

Some 75 demonstrators tried to enter the fighter base but were turned back at the main gate.

In orderly rows they sat in front of the gate singing "We Shall Overcome" and other peace songs.

Four RCMP officers, brought in specially for the occasion, stood by in case of trouble.

Inside the gates, military police prepared for any further attempts to gain entry.

The gate entrance usually consists of a pole which drops across the road.

But officials ordered the special barbed wire gate erected for the occasion.

Vehicles and personnel were using other entrances this morning.

As reinforcements swelled the ranks of the peace marchers, spokesman Peter Light said he was contemplating blocking the other entrances also.

Light said he expected the group to be joined by several

Crown Seeks Delay In Murder Hearing

The preliminary hearing of a capital murder charge against David Robinson will be delayed for some time, Magistrate William Ostler was told this morning.

Robinson, a 24-year-old janitor, of 324 Old Island Highway, is charged in the slaying of Susan Freschi, a 14-year-old school girl whose body was found in woods near her View Royal home May 12.

Robinson, being held in Oakalla Prison, was brought to Victoria this morning to appear in Colwood magistrate's court.

Crown Prosecutor W. R. McIntyre said "I'm afraid there will be substantial delay" before the Crown is ready to present its case.

Cause of the delay is believed to be difficulty in arranging for technical witnesses to attend.

The magisrate remanded Robinson to next Wednesday at the Law Courts. It is understood he will then be remanded from week to week until such time as a date is fixed for the preliminary hearing of the charge.

Manoeuvring in Space A 'Tricky Problem'

By JOHN BARBOUR

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim McDivitt missed a critical rendezvous on the first orbit of the Gemini IV space capsule Thursday, but U.S. space officials learned many valuable lessons from the miscalculation.

McDivitt's attempts to catch his elusive target cost too much manoeuvring fuel, and officials halted the operation.

McDivitt—in his first visit to the dimensionless world of space—misjudged the distance between the spacecraft and its spent booster, at least by the guess of flight officials.

Trying to drive into it, he put more energy into the orbit and raised both his orbital high point and low point.

Another problem is that the ground was unable to give the command pilot a good idea of the orbit of the tumbling booster.

The fact that you have to know the orbits of both the pursuit ship and the pursued ship was "brought home even more by this flight," said mission director Chris Kraft.

This, of course, is the big difference between steering in space and steering either an airplane or a car. Land-type steering is simple—you go up or down, off to one side, whatever you please.

But in space, you are not only changing your present position—you are changing your whole orbit.

Ideally for rendezvous, you would match orbits with the spacecraft you are pursuing. But this becomes an intricate procedure.

The human eyes and the senses are just not good enough to close great gaps between the pursuit ship and its target. Soon Gemini astronauts will have radar to give them both the distance of the target and the rate of approach to it.

By the time he was through manoeuvring, McDivitt had steered into an orbit that ranged as high as 183 miles, as low as 103—good enough for 5.4 days of flight before it would naturally return to earth.

Because of a number of commitments, the Gemini IV only carried one bottle of oxidizer and one of fuel. Later Gemini craft—after the next one—will carry twice as much propellant since their major effort will be directed at rendezvous.

Big U.S. Troop Buildup

SAIGON (CP) — Some 15,000 more U.S. troops with amphibious equipment suitable for use in South Viet Nam's criss-cross of rivers and flooded paddyfields will arrive in Viet Nam shortly, informed sources said today.

Waves of cargo aircraft are bringing the reinforcements to Okinawa and the Philippines from Forts Eustace and Storey in Virginia, they said. A vanguard of the first batch of 3,000 was believed to have arrived already.

The big new U.S. commitment will swell the number of American troops here to more than 60,000.

News of it came with reports of further battles against Viet Cong guerrillas.

South Vietnamese forces, badly battered by Viet Cong ambushes in recent days, struck back with the aid of U.S. helicopters and claimed today to have killed 49 guerrillas in a single action Friday.

TANKER ON FIRE; 47 KILLED

TEHERAN, Iran (UPI)—A 40,000-ton oil tanker caught fire after taking on 25,000 tons of crude oil at the Persian Gulf port of Bander Ma' Ashur today. Forty crewmen were believed killed.

The 200-foot flames devoured two jetties near the vessel within a few minutes and authorities rushed all available fire fighting equipment to the area to try to protect oil storage facilities. The ship is believed to be Italian.

. . . WILLIAMSON TRIAL

landed immigrant status in Canada. Stonehill recently had been expelled from the Philippines and from Mexico.

Mr. Justice Munroe told the jury an essential ingredient of the crown's case was to negative any claim by the accused that he had authority to send the letter over the premier's signature.

"Yet the person best able to negative that authority was not called—Premier Bennett."

He said Premier Bennett's office as premier would not excuse him from appearing. He said the crown elected not to call the premier, although the crown had every right to do so.

Disregard Certain Testimony

The judge said neither he nor the jury could tell the crown who to call as witnesses — this matter is up to the crown. Then the judge made his remarks about "this unexplained failure."

Mr. Justice Munroe instructed the jury at another point in his address, that it must disregard certain testimony which had been delivered Thursday by Einar Gunderson.

Mr. Gunderson, a senior official in several B.C. government enterprises and a close friend of Premier Bennett had given testimony which had conflicted with earlier evidence given by Williamson.

Mr. Gunderson had been called by the crown in rebuttal of testimony in chief. The judge explained that in any trial the prosecution presents its case, then the defence presents its case, then the prosecution has opportunity to rebut any fresh evidence in the defence testimony.

He was told, he said, that Mr. Gunderson was being called to rebut an earlier statement that Mr. Gunderson had told Williamson there was no case against him and not to worry, he had only exceeded his authority.

Mr. Gunderson, on the stand, made no reference to this conversation. But he went further.

Gunderson went on to quote Williamson to the effect that the accused wanted Premier Bennett to say he had written the Dear Hal letter—and had forgotten he had done so.

Not Proper Rebuttal Evidence

Said the judge, "This was not proper rebuttal evidence. It would not have been given, if I had known it was coming.

"It must be totally disregarded by you. It was not open to the Crown to introduce it."

Mr. Justice Munroe told the jury the four lawyers of the prosecution and defence were among the most competent in B.C. "and nothing I have said reflects on them."

He said, "The rules were breached, no doubt unwittingly, by Mr. Gunderson."

The judge earlier had explained to the jury that forgery takes place when a person makes a false document, knowing it to be false with intent that some person should be induced by it to do, or to refrain from some action.

He said a document could be false if it was added to or altered by any person who did not originally make the document.

To justify conviction, he said, the crown must prove beyond doubt that the accused wrote the letter over the premier's name, knowing it to be false, with intent to induce Dornan to act on it as if it were genuine.

"If the accused honestly believed he had authority, then he is not guilty of forgery, and must be acquitted," the jury was told.

All Agree . . . Accused Sent Letter

"It appears to be common ground that the accused made the letter . . . sent it out with a covering letter . . . and the premier had not expressly authorized him to write it," said Mr. Justice Munroe.

The real issues he said, are very narrow. He read them slowly so the jury could write them down:

"Are you satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt, he had no authority, expressed or implied, to compose the letter . . . and to send it to Mr. Dornan?

"If you are not so satisfied, the accused must be acquitted, and that is the end of the matter.

"If you are so satisfied, then ask yourself question number two.

"Even if the accused had no such authority, do you have a reasonable doubt in your mind as to whether or not he honestly believed that he had the premier's authority to do so?

"If so, he must be acquitted. If not, you may convict," the judge said.

He reviewed the evidence of both the crown and the defence. In summing up the defence argument, he said that Williamson was an "image-maker."

"In a half-deceitful, complex world, inhabited sometimes by businessmen and politicians, with products to sell by whatever means, his job was to get results."

Verdict Must Be Unanimous

He told the jury they could bring in only guilty or not-guilty verdicts, on each count. The verdict must be unanimous, he said.

Immediately the jury left, crown counsel George Murray QC, asked Mr. Justice Munroe to withdraw his direction to the jury on the Gunderson testimony. His plea was rejected.

Mr. Murray also asked the judge to withdraw the suggestion that the crown's decision not to call the premier might be construed as meaning the premier's testimony might detract from the crown's case.

Again Mr. Justice Munroe declined.

But he did agree to Mr. Murray's suggestion that the jury had been insufficiently instructed on one prosecution point, in the judge's remarks.

The judge then recalled the jury and recounted the testimony where the accused told Dornan that the premier probably wouldn't write the letter in question.

The jury went out again at 3:38 p.m.

Locked-Up to Await Decision

The accused was taken into custody and lodged in the courthouse lock-up to await the jury's return.

In its summation to the jury, The Crown attorney said Williamson had admitted never having written a personal letter for the premier before the Dear Hal letter.

After a story broke about a suggestion that Stonehill buy his way into Canada with an investment in the Liberal Party, Williamson had gone to the RCMP "in a panic" fearing disclosure of the letter. A man who believed he had authority to send the letter would not have gone to the police to make a statement, the Crown contended.

Crown attorney T. G. Bowen-Colthurst said Williamson's evidence was full of inconsistencies and his case full of improbabilities. On the witness stand under cross examination Williamson had been "badly shaken" even "rocked," he said.

MYSTERY SATELLITE sighted by astronaut James McDivitt while orbiting in his Gemini 4 spacecraft may have been the Pegasus B shown in this working model. Officials at the space centre in Houston, Texas, said the Pegasus was about 1,200 miles "in the proper direction to be observed by the astronauts." (AP Wirephoto.)

had reported no more sightings of the unidentified object McDivitt reported during the 19th orbit. Officials listed at least 11 earth satellites, most of them fragments or space debris, in the general area of McDivitt's sighting.

At 12:15 EDT Gemini IV entered its 32 orbit.

SEE SECOND SATELLITE

The astronauts reported seeing another satellite Friday and trackers today were trying to determine which one it might have been.

McDivitt said that during the 19th orbit he sighted an orbiting object "with big arms sticking out." He took movies, but the glaring sun prevented him identifying it or estimaing its distance from Gemini IV.

There was some speculation it was the Pegasus II meteorid detection satellite launched May 25 from Cape Kennedy.

As Gemini IV circled around the globe, the space twins continued to perform routine test pilot tasks intended to fully qualify men and machinery for longer trips.

Business even came before congratulations Friday night when McDivitt and White broke astronaut Gordon Cooper's U.S. orbital record of 34 hours 20 minutes, established in May, 1963.

At 9:36 p.m. EDT, the moment the new mark was set, Stuart Davis, capsule communicator at the Hawaiian tracking station, contacted the Gemini IV by radio, relayed instructions for a medical check and read them map coordinates. Then he added, rather matter-of-factly:

"I'd also like to congratulate you on a new American space flight record."

"Roger," replied McDivitt, "we've got quite a few more orbits to go. Thank you very much."

Their planned 97-hour, 50-minute voyage is to end at 1:06 p.m. (10:06 a.m. PDT) Monday with a parachute splash-down in the Atlantic Ocean 400 miles southwest of Bermuda.

The world space flight record is held by Soviet cosmonaut Valery Kykovsky, who stayed aloft for 119 hours, six minutes, just shy of five days, in 1963.

The group will continue its vigil for 24 hours.

The sit-down is to protest storing of nuclear weapons here.

While those sitting down sang songs, others paraded outside the base boundaries carrying posters and banners.

LINK ARMS

Light had earlier asked formal permission to enter the base. His request was refused.

The singing marchers linked arms and walked towards the main gates which were still open.

Guards slammed the gates shut.

$255 Per Meal For Astronauts

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—While astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White aren't eating gourmet food in space, the bill for what they are consuming in their four-day flight is sky high. Each meal costs about $255.

Dry cereal, bacon and egg bites, toasted bread cubes and orange juice made up the first meal.

Their space menu includes: Lunch—beef and gravy, corn, toast, date fruitcake and tea. Supper — pea soup, salmon salad, toast, fruit cocktail and orange juice. Late snack—orange - grapefruit juice, chicken sandwich, chocolate pudding and peanut cubes.

The high price for such low-cost chow results from the fact that the foods are specially made for space. The sandwiches and cubes can be eaten in one bite, with no crumbs.

All the food is freeze dried, compressed and dehydrated. With the exception of the bite-size candies, the other dishes must be reconstituted with water.

MEALS FLOAT AROUND

Aboard the spacecraft at lunch were 18 packages — 14 two-man meals and four one-man meals. They are marked by day and by meal. Each package is connected to a nylon line which prevents them from getting out of order when floating inside the compartment.

All the foods are low in residue, in undigestible fibre, and in gas - producing elements. Each man was to eat 15 times on the four-day trip.

McDivitt and White picked out the foods they wanted after trying out all the items on the menu.

"The food is pretty good," said McDivitt. "There are some things that just don't appeal to me. I wouldn't like them whether they were dehydrated or not."

One thing is certain: No corned beef sandwiches are aboard, either real or bite-sized. Astronaut John Young sneaked an earth-type corned beef sandwich aboard the last Gemini flight, causing potential crumb problems, and space agency officials made certain it would not happen again.
